Chapter 631 Be happy!

Jerry thought that after the tooth extraction operation, he would take Cora to the playground or somewhere.

But after the operation, his face was swollen like a pig's head.

Going to the playground at this time wouldn't leave her any sweet memories. And it would be good not to leave her with a horrified experience.

So after thinking about it again and again, he gave up. "I'm going back, don't go to the clinic. Go home and accompany Martin." Because his face was swollen, his speech was a little slurred.

Coupled with that naive look, Cora still couldn't help laughing out loud.

Jerry suddenly became furious. "You heartless woman, for whom did I pull my teeth?"

"The teeth grow on your body. Who else can you pull out for?" She was still laughing.

At noon, the autumn sun was not scorching but also bright.

But Cora's smile still made the sunshine lose its color and engraved in his mind.

Jerry had even thought about what he would brag to their descendants a few years later.

He would say, "Dr. Lane, the most capable person to cure cancer, was very beautiful when she was young. When she smiled, the sun turned into a shadow. She has been chasing me, but I don't like her, so I would rather pull out my teeth to affect my appearance to let her give up."

Looking at Jerry and seeing that he was a little distracted, Cora thought he was angry. "Okay, I won't laugh at you anymore. Go back and rest quickly. Remember not to stay up late tonight. Otherwise, no one can save you from the pain."

Jerry nodded and walked towards his home.

Cora was also preparing to leave.

But halfway through, Jerry suddenly called her, "Cora!"

When she turned her head, she saw him looking at her again with an inexplicable reluctance in his eyes.

"What's wrong?" She once wanted to return to see if he was not feeling well.

"Nothing. I just wanted to tell you, don't forget our appointment to eat fried chicken burgers in two days."

Jerry smiled, but the smile moved his swollen face, making him restrain himself again.

"I remember it! I thought you were going to say something important!" Cora smiled, waved to him again, then turned and left.

But she didn't know that Jerry was looking intensely at her back at this moment and didn't retract his eyes for a long time.

This was the last time they saw each other. Because he had truly loved her, he could not be friends with her in the future...

Two days later, Cora brought Martin to the fast-food restaurant that she had agreed with Jerry.

But when the two arrived at the store and searched around, they still didn't see his figure.

"Strange, this guy is never late for burgers and fried chicken." Cora wondered.

Looking down and seeing Martin's nervous gaze, she could only comfort him, "It's okay. Jerry probably has something to do. Let's order food first and wait for him."

In fact, she was thinking that after eating fried chicken and hamburgers today, she and Martin would bid farewell to Jerry.

But when ordering, the waitress saw them and asked, "Are you, Miss Lane?"

When hearing this, Cora already had a bad premonition. "Yes, I am Cora. What's wrong?"

The waiter brought up a letter and several gift boxes. There were many models and Lego toys that Martin liked.

In other boxes were some advanced custom jewelries.

The waitress put all these in her hands and said, "That's it. Mr. Lloyd asked me to give you all these things if you come here to order. And he wanted me to tell you, 'Be happy for the rest of your life,

Cora.'"
