Chapter 633 A New Neighbor?

"I will still bring Martin to visit you often, Master."

"That's what you said. I can go directly to New York if you don't keep your promise," John said jokingly.

"Then you are welcome to come and play with us anytime." Just talking about this, the two of them inevitably mentioned Jerry.

"You don't have to feel guilty about Jerry's leaving. This incident is considered a good thing for him."

John said, "He used to be romantic, and we were all worried that he would never settle down in this life.

But after meeting you, he began to know how to like and care for someone. I believe that with this experience, when he meets someone he likes in the future, he won't be as casual as before..."

It was not sure whether Jerry would meet someone he liked in the future.

But Cora knew that John was trying to comfort her to make her not blame herself so much.

So later, to make John less worried about her and Martin, she always smiled when she said goodbye.

On the flight at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, Cora took Martin, Sara, and William on a flight back to New York.

On the plane, William asked Cora, "What are your plans for the future? Or, go to the Traditional Medicine Hospital?"

In New York's Traditional Medicine Hospital, the Yoris family had also become a major shareholder before.

Therefore, Jane was able to enter the hospital of Traditional Medicine Hospital so smoothly before and become a doctor.

Right now, Cora's qualifications clearly surpassed Jane's, so William naturally wanted to help her arrange an easier job.

But Cora said, "I promised Master to set up a branch of the medical clinic in New York. When the time comes, I will transfer the patients with my number registered there to New York so that he will not have to sit in the medical center for twelve hours a day."

They discussed this countermeasure when she took Martin to say goodbye to John this morning.

Seeing that William was rejected, Sara immediately asked, "After you go back, do you want to go home with Martin for a few days?"

But Cora still refused, "After we return, Martin and I will still live in the apartment since we're used to it..."

For a while, Sara and William were relatively silent. In fact, they all just hoped to do something for Cora, who seemed to be a little resistant to them...

But who could they blame for all this? It was they who didn't realize that their biological daughter had been swapped, and it was they who pushed Cora away again and again.

They could only tell themselves that all this should not be rushed, and they needed to give Cora time.

Cora resisted them more than now and seldom talked to them before coming to Leucrest Town.

But after this trip to Leucrest Town, Cora not only let them live in her house but also chatted with them more and more.

This meant things were getting better...

It was already evening when the plane arrived in New York.

After getting off the plane, William received a call from Arnold. "Your grandpa said that dinner has been prepared at home and asked us to go back and eat together."

Cora pursed her lips and said nothing.

Sara said, "If you don't like it, we can have dinner outside."

Anyway, everything she did now was based on Cora's preferences.

If Cora was willing to accept her, she could move out of the Yoris Mansion.

After Cora nodded, the four of them ate at a hotel near the airport.

After dinner, William and Sara sent them back to the apartment.

Just when the elevator arrived, they saw a few workers in uniforms moving furniture...
