

Snatched 640

Chapter 640 Extremely Indifferent

The waiter felt an inexplicable coldness and asked Cora with a smile, "Are you cold? If so, you can wear my coat. There's no charge for you and me being so congenial."

Cora felt cold too, but she didn't want to wear other people's clothes and was about to refuse.

But suddenly she heard that familiar voice. "Let them all come up."

As soon as Byron spoke, the manager and waiter looked at him in astonishment.

Influential people didn't like to share the elevator with others in entertainment venues as if they could show their different status through this.

Therefore, there were unwritten rules.

As long as a boss was visiting, except for the receptionist, other people and even customers must take another elevator.

Just now, they followed the previous regulations, but they didn't expect that Byron was different from others and wanted to share the elevator with them.

The boss' mind was hard to be guessed.

So after the manager came back to his senses, he smiled and said, "Mr. Hansen, thank you for your understanding. Tony, bring this lady up."

Tony quickly nodded to express his thanks and then led Cora into the elevator.

Usually, when taking the elevator, Tony would say some funny words to intrigue women, so they might frequent Royal Club for a long time.

But today, after entering the elevator, Tony did not dare to speak glibly, trying to dull his sense of existence.

Under the pressure of Byron, he felt like staying in purgatory when they took the elevator up together.

Even if he didn't have to meet his eyes, he still felt like there was a sharp knife on his neck.

Once someone accidentally disturbed him, this sharp blade would cut his skin directly, and his blood would splash on the spot!

Under such circumstances, no one dared to continue talking and laughing.

Life-saving was the most important thing!

These suffocating seconds seemed like centuries to the people in the elevator.

Cora noticed through this gloomy atmosphere that Byron seemed to be angry.

So she thought about explaining to him about Jerry's incident before and the reason why she appeared there today.

But just as she was about to open her mouth, the elevator just arrived.

Byron walked out with long legs first, and the manager followed.

And when Cora raised her head, she only saw Byron's indifferent face and his leaving...

Cora felt that their relationship still hadn't improved after the reunion.

As for the sweetness of the previous two nights, it was just her illusion.

It was this discovery that made Cora stop speaking.

It seemed that Byron was unwilling to see her, let alone her explanation. Why should she go up to novelbin make fun of herself?

"This way, please." Tony began to greet Cora again.

Cora put away her lonely expression, followed Tony's pace, and entered Room 428.

In the box, several men and women were discussing.

"Tyler said today that he would give us a surprise. What do you think this surprise is?"

"It's probably a good bottle of wine. He likes to collect some famous wines and share them at parties."

"I think it might be his girlfriend."

While several people were discussing, Tony opened the door of the box and let Cora walk in.

The moment Cora came in, the people in the box seemed to be shocked and silent for several seconds...