Chapter 651 Won't Care About You

"Had Ms. Liana Hayes' daughter been found?" Cora hadn't seen Byron's car yet, as she was still thinking about Liana.

"No. Although more than ten years have passed, as soon as there is news of the little girl, she will go looking for her like crazy. It's just that every time she ends up with no results, she will inevitably feel depressed for a while. She will cry day and night, and that's why her eyes end up like that."

At this time, Carter had already seen Byron's car and said, "I guess it is no longer possible for her daughter to be found, but the problem with her eyes can't be delayed. If she can't see, she won't be able to live by herself in the future."

Cora nodded thoughtfully.

After Liana lost her child, her mental state was also affected.

Her husband wanted her to come out of her grief soon, so he suggested having another child.

But Liana refused, and the two divorced later.

She heard that in the second year after the divorce, the man had remarried and had children of his own.

Only Liana was still waiting for that child.

Thinking of this, Cora inevitably thought of her and Byron.

She was confident that she could take care of Martin forever and never remarry. But what about Byron?

Probably not.

She only agreed to Jerry's few small requests before breaking up, but Byron was so angry that he went to find Elena again.

"There is still a medicine that I must find before I can give Ms. Liana Hayes. Once everything is ready, I will contact you."

"All right. I'll go get it by then. I won't trouble you to make another trip."

"You're welcome, Carter."

Carter wanted to say something else when Byron's car parked not far away suddenly honked, as if to remind the two of his existence, and also seemed to urge Carter to end the conversation quickly.

Since Byron repeatedly honked the horn, Cora finally noticed him, too.

Their eyes met, but the expression in the man's eyes was still aloof and indifferent.

However, it was different from what Cora previously saw at Royal Club.

It was still the same aloofness and indifference, but there was an unmistakable order in those eyes.

He was ordering her to get in the car quickly.

"It's hard to find a taxi here. I still have something to do, so I'll let Mr. Hansen drive you back."

Carter was quite delighted when he saw that man coming with his car. At least the chance he created was not totally pointless.

Cora averted her gaze from the car, then she turned around and bid farewell to Carter politely. "Carter, you can go back to your work. I can take care of myself."

However, she didn't get into Byron's car but walked slowly toward the subway entrance.

She was not Byron's subordinate, so there was no need to listen to his orders.

She was not his wife either, so there was no need to stay in the same confined space to look at his sullen face when they just had such a huge fight.

On the other hand, Byron did not expect that she would not appreciate his good intention to drive her back at all.

He smacked the steering wheel in frustration, thinking that if she didn't want to acknowledge his existence, he wouldn't need to coax her either.

But seeing her entering the crowds in the subway with such alluring clothes, he finally got out of the car in irritation, threw the car keys to the security guard on the side, and followed closely.

It was the off-work hour, and the subway was very crowded.

Once Cora found the route she wanted to take, she entered the crowded carriage.

There were so many people that there was no place to sit, so Cora had no choice but to hold the handle in the middle.

But she was wearing high heels today, and every time the train arrived at a station, she would stumble forward.

She kept wobbling and almost falling all the time.

Suddenly, a long arm wrapped around her waist and pulled her into an embrace.

She was about to put up a struggle when a familiar male voice came from above her head. "Stop wriggling, or I won't care about you anymore."

Chapter 652 His Position in the Family

Cora looked up in surprise and saw Byron's face.

He was still in the same suit and leather shoes as before, and he was thoroughly exuding an unapproachable and cold aura.

But this person with such an aura was wrapping his arms tightly around her waist, protecting her from other people's prying.

She angrily refused to look at him, but his distinctively fresh scent lingered around her nose, causing a sense of bitterness to surge up to the tip of her nose for no reason.

There was a constant flow of people going in and out of the train.

And there was him, always guarding her by her side.

It was just like their lives. Different people came and left the train at every time period, but only the person behind her stayed.

Her mind was filled with a myriad of thoughts until she was interrupted by the man's cold voice.

"Remember to look at the station name. Don't miss your stop."

Cora returned to her senses and grumbled, "I want to go to the final station."

"The final station? That's in the suburbs! Are you not going home to take care of Martin?"

The sun was almost setting.

Byron didn't want her to wander around in the darkness of the night.

But Cora felt he only cared about the child and not about her, so she replied coldly, "You don't need to worry about my son."

"He's my son too!" Byron gritted his teeth, then pointed out, "You have a son now, so are you forgetting your son's father?"

She had taken their child back to New York, yet she didn't take him to visit his father.

The more Byron thought about it, the more he felt that he seemed to not have much importance in their family!

Cora said, "His father is already with another woman! Why do we need him?"

She didn't even look at him, and the disgust in her tone couldn't be concealed.

"Who did you say I'm together with?"

Byron was also irritated, and when he heard her slandering him, he became even more furious.

Even the long arms around her waist seemed to be holding her tighter. "Elena? Are you talking about her?"

"So you're aware of it!"

When Cora heard him mention Elena's name all of a sudden, she felt even more uncomfortable.

She even wanted to break his hands off her body.

However, the man didn't let go and even exerted more strength, as if he wanted to glue her into his body.

"She returned because her younger brother had a heart problem and had to undergo surgery."

He explained in exasperation, but Cora didn't seem to believe him. "Coming back to take care of her brother and even making a special trip to accompany you to a club? Miss Turner is really competent."

Byron almost laughed out of anger. "When I sent her abroad before, I told her not to return for the rest of her life so as not to make you feel sick. That was why she asked my permission on WhatsApp before she returned last time."

When Byron spoke of this, he looked down at Cora and saw her cheeks were still puffing out.

Suddenly, a playful impulse surged in him, and he pinched her waist, causing her to raise her head and glare at him.

Although she was glaring, her eyes were glistening, yet she didn't seem like complaining. It looked more like she was in a dilemma between rejecting and accepting him.

Moreover, he hadn't been with her for several days, and now seeing her like this, his Adam's apple couldn't help bobbing a few times.

"Don't look at me like that! I didn't even reply to her message, so she went to find me as soon as she returned and asked me if I minded."

He had basically explained everything, but the woman before him asked him back, "Why couldn't I come to see you?! Are you afraid of being found out?"

He simply clung to her ear and said something.

This time, Cora said nothing, yet her face turned beet red.

Chapter 653 Untangling the Heart Knots

In the blink of an eye, the train arrived at the final station.

When Cora was about to get off the train, Byron proactively held her hand and protected her while getting off the train.

Feeling the domineering yet gentle care of the man, Cora inevitably remembered what he said just now, and her face was burning again.

Fortunately, the wind at the end of autumn was cold enough, so the hot sensation on her cheeks subsided when she stepped out of the station.

After exiting the station, Cora walked toward a place.

Byron hurriedly followed. "Where are you going?"

"I'm going to find the eyes of the sand."

"The eyes of the sand? For Carter's aunt's medicine?"

"Yes. Her eye problem is quite serious, and the eyes of the sand that can be bought in ordinary pharmacies will definitely not be effective, so I have to find some fresh ones to refine once I return."

"Then where can you find the eyes of the sand?"

The sky was already dark.

But Cora walked toward the mountain instead.

Byron couldn't imagine what it would have been like for this woman to walk into the mountains in the dark alone if he hadn't followed her just now.

"In the cave?"

Byron was dubious, yet he followed Cora into the cave.

This woman truly came prepared. She even brought a flashlight.

It was pitch black in the cave, and the cold wind was blowing.

It even made Byron's skin crawl, although he was an adult man.

But Cora didn't seem to feel the slightest bit of fear. As soon as she entered the cave, she methodically directed the flashlight at the cave ceilings.

Stimulated by the light, several bats abruptly flew in a circular motion at the cave ceilings at a high speed.

Byron was worried that Cora would be attacked by the bats, so he immediately took off his suit jacket and put it on Cora's head.

"It's all right. I've found the eyes of the sand."

Cora wanted to return the suit jacket to Byron, but the man insisted on letting her wear it.

In the end, Cora had no choice but to squat down with his coat on and used the prepared utensils to pick the eyes of the sand from the ground before putting them inside a bag.

When Byron looked at Cora with her gloves on carrying a bag of eyes of the sand, his expression was beyond words.

"Are you sure these can really be used on the eyes? Won't the smell be nasty?"

"This thing has high medicinal value, you know. What's nasty about it?"

Once the two finished picking the eyes of the sand, they took a taxi back to the city.

Cora was looking at the passing scenery when she suddenly said, "When I went to the birthday banquet with Jerry that day, I was the one who wanted to break up, then he made a few requests."

In Cora's eyes, things like love actually came and went.

If one treated someone well, that person would also do the same.

Byron had explained the matter about Elena just now, so she would also explain to him the things he was concerned about.

"Including what I said later about not being able to leave Leucrest Town for some time, it was also because he wanted me to accompany him when he went to remove his decayed tooth."

Byron turned to look at Cora in surprise when he heard her words.

However, Cora was still looking outside the car window, and her gaze was slightly empty.

It seemed as if she was looking at someone she really cared about through the scenery outside the car window.

"We had even promised that the three of us would go to eat hamburgers together after he removed his tooth. But Jerry left for abroad that day."

There was a stinging sensation in Byron's heart, but he still held out his hand to clutch Cora's hand.

Cora also turned around, and her eyes were red.

"I'm grateful to Jerry for the last four years. For countless times when I couldn't do any other things because of Martin, he helped me take care of him. To me and Martin, he was not just a friend, but more like a family."

Because of her gratitude and that Jerry was an irreplaceable person, Cora was even more unwilling to argue with Byron because of Jerry.

Probably because Byron had understood how Cora felt, he pulled her into his arms.

"I understand..."

Even though he was very grateful for what Jerry had done for this pair of mother and son in the past four years, when he thought that a certain corner of Cora's heart would always belong to Jerry, he could still go crazy with jealousy.

So while kissing her side face, he secretly vowed in his heart that he would never let Cora and their son leave his side in the future, and would not let them have the slightest chance to be indebted to the kindness of others again.

Chapter 654 Anything You Say

By the time Byron took Cora back to the Yoris Mansion, it was already ten in the evening.

"You bring Martin out. We'll go back to the apartment."

From the time he was on the train, Cora was always in his mind.

Now that she was almost within reach, he certainly didn't want to let go of this opportunity.

But he didn't expect Cora to refuse him. "It's too late. Martin and I will sleep here tonight."

Byron was stunned. "Then what about me?"

"You're not a three-year-old, and you don't need me to put you to sleep! You can do whatever you want."

After Cora said that, she got out of the car and was back to her cold-blooded self, then she strode directly into the Yoris Mansion.

Byron simply got out of the car and followed.

At the same time, Arnold, William, and the others were watching Martin play building blocks in the living room, while Sara coaxed Martin with his toothbrush in her hand. "Martin, it's time to wash up and go to bed."

Martin shook his head, indicating that he wanted to wait for her mother to return before going to bed.

"But you have to go to school tomorrow. If you don't go to bed early, what will you do if you don't have the energy to play with your friends tomorrow?"

Sara was very patient as she half-squatted before Martin and spoke nicely to him.

But Martin still shook his head.

Seeing that Martin refused to sleep, William started to get anxious, too. "It's so late! Why has Cora not returned yet?"

Arnold said instead, "Give Cora a call and ask where she is, then tell the driver to pick her up. How could we let a girl like her go home alone so late at night?"

Suddenly, the butler came to report. "Miss Lane and Mr. Hansen are back."

Not long after, Cora and Byron came in one after another.

After they greeted each other, Sara took advantage of Byron squatting beside Martin and playing building blocks with him to pull Cora aside. "Have you reconciled again?"

The word "again" made Cora a little embarrassed.

But fortunately, Sara didn't ask her further when she looked at Cora's expression and only asked, "Will you two spend the night at home together?"

Byron heard it and quickly gave Cora a look, asking her to agree.

But Cora said, "He will go home, but Martin and I will stay here."

Byron almost disfigured Martin's building blocks, but fortunately, Martin noticed in time and snatched the building blocks back.

However, Byron didn't give up just yet and kept staying.

He planned to wait a little longer until the rest of the Yoris family changed their mind and asked him to stay. By then, he would go along with them.

But Cora seemed to have seen through his thoughts. Seeing that Byron was still not leaving, she urged

Martin, "Martin, it's time for us to wash up and go to bed. You have to go to school tomorrow!"

Martin obeyed Cora more, so as soon as Cora spoke, he stretched his little hands and waited for Cora to carry him to wash up.

Byron saw that Cora was about to go upstairs with Martin in her arms, so he hurriedly followed.

"Martin is starting school tomorrow? Which kindergarten does he go to?"

Cora told him the name of the kindergarten, then took Martin upstairs.

Seeing that Cora had no intention of staying overnight with Byron, the elders of the Yoris family all immediately stood on her side.

Byron could also guess what they were thinking, so he finally took his leave.

However, when Cora was about to take Martin to the kindergarten the next morning, Byron appeared in front of the Yoris Mansion in time.

"I'll take you there."

This time, Cora did not refuse.

After all, he was also Martin's father, so he should be given a chance to participate in such an important first day of school.

Sara had initially agreed with William to escort Cora and her son to school, but both gave up when they saw Byron coming.

But on the way to the kindergarten, Cora made a deal with Byron. "We should not let the people at the kindergarten know Martin's identity for the time being. That way, he can grow up in a relatively normal environment."

"Anything you say."

Byron pursed his lips. He hadn't won his wife's heart yet, and added to the fact that he spent a cold night alone last night, would he still dare to object now?

Chapter 655 Don't Do Evil

Martin's first day in kindergarten went smoothly.

The teacher who received them looked gentle.

After Martin was brought into the classroom by the teacher, he started playing with toys with other kids.

The principal of the kindergarten smiled and introduced, "Our classroom is also equipped with a monitor. If you are worried, you can download this App and see what your kid does here at any time."

Both Cora and Byron were worried about Martin, fearing that he would not communicate with others and be bullied.

So when the principal introduced the App, they downloaded it immediately.

Later, after the two left the kindergarten, they would open the app from time to time to see what Martin was doing.

Although Martin couldn't speak, he looked like Byron, so many girls liked him.

In the surveillance video, when he was building blocks, many girls were talking to him.

When Cora was happy about Martin's popularity, Byron said, "Shall we go home now?"

"Why?" Cora was surprised. When she turned her head and met Byron's eyes full of desire, she knew the answer.

"I'm going to the First Hospital. Today is the time to diagnose those seven patients."

Cora took over the several patients Jane left behind.

Now the outside world was concerned about the recovery of those people, so Cora would go to check their pulses every week and adjust the prescription.

"Go to the company after you are done."

After Cora appeared in the company in a seductive dress yesterday, Byron had this idea when he returned to the office.

Byron was looking forward to it. Cora knew why he wanted her to go to the company without asking him.

Feeling ashamed to be stared at by his burning eyes, Cora looked away. "No, I won't go."

But Byron held her hand. His eyes and tone were softer than ever.

"Be good. I'll ask someone to prepare your favorite snacks and refreshments. I will accompany you all afternoon today..."

When she got out of Byron's car, Cora's face was hot.

She wondered if she was crazy to agree to Byron's request.

Cora covered her face and was thinking about whether to call Byron and tell him that she didn't want to go to the company, when suddenly a woman's joking voice came from behind her.

"Do you come to play tricks again? If you want to go back to work in the First Hospital, there's no need to do that."

Cora looked back and saw Evie.

Compared with the meeting in the Royal Club that day, Evie's makeup looked a lot lighter today.

Moreover, she was wearing a white coat. Despite her provocative expression, she looked like a doctor.

"Even if I play tricks, what does it have to do with you? Don't do evil."

Cora looked at Evie indifferently.

Her interests did not conflict with Evie's, so she didn't want to argue with Evie.

When Evie heard what Cora said, she turned livid with rage.

She followed Cora closely, threatening, "Do you think you can threaten me with what you know? Listen,

Mr. Schmidt has the final say in this hospital. For example, if you want to take advantage of this hype to go back to the First Hospital, you have to ask him for his permission."

Cora had reached the floor where the cancer patients were, but Evie followed her closely behind, mocking her.

She turned her head and asked, "So you mean you also have the right to kick me out of the hospital, right?"

Chapter 656 Do It

Evie smiled proudly.

"That's for sure. Mr. Schmidt listens to me. He does everything I ask him to do."

She slept with Elwood for the sake of her career.

But later, Elwood did as he had promised her before. Except that he could not get a divorce, he would obey her in almost everything.

Even in the middle of the night, when she said that she was afraid of sleeping alone, Elwood would go to accompany her.

Later, Elwood would listen to her about many things in the hospital.

Someone with outstanding ability competed for the same position with Evie before.

Evie casually said something to Elwood, and that person was fired the next day.

So Evie wanted more.

She was not ashamed of her relationship with Elwood, but instead took advantage of this relationship even more.

Now, as Cora annoyed her, she started to mention her relationship with Elwood.

"If you are sensible, kowtow and apologize to me. Maybe I can put in a good word for you in front of Mr.

Schmidt."

"Tsk, do you think this hospital belongs to Elwood?" Cora didn't care.

"How stubborn you are."

Although the hospital was not Elwood's, Elwood was an executive there. He was more powerful than the mysterious buyer who had never shown up.

"You'd better get out of the way now. Otherwise, both you and Mr. Schmidt will be fired."

Cora wanted to see those several patients, make up prescriptions, and leave.

But Evie laughed. "Who do you think you are? What makes you think that you can fire Mr. Schmidt?"

Well, I'll wait here and see how you drive me and Mr. Schmidt out."

Several nurses working on this floor saw that something was wrong, so they hurried over.

"Dr. Lane, don't quarrel with Dr. Warren."

"She has Mr. Schmidt's support..."

The nurses had a good impression of Cora, and they sincerely hoped to work with Cora in the future.

So seeing the conflict between Cora and Evie, they tried to persuade Cora.

But when Evie saw that the nurses were afraid of her, she became prouder.

"Do it! I'll wait for you to drive me out!"

Cora's eyes were cold as she stared at Evie. "Are you sure?"

Evie urged, "Sure! Why? Don't you dare? You pretended just now. You will make a fool of yourself if you don't do it now..."

They were alumni, so Cora didn't want to make a fuss.

But since Evie wanted to be kicked out of the hospital, Cora would fulfill her wish.

Cora took out her mobile phone and made a call. "Dismiss Evie Warren from the cardiac surgery department and the executive Elwood Schmidt now. Also, send some guards to Building No. 2 to drive

Evie out of the hospital immediately."

After briefly stating her request, Cora hung up the phone.

When Evie saw Cora make a call, she was a little scared, wondering if Cora had the supreme right to fire her.

But Cora said that casually without saying hello. Maybe she wasn't put through. She was just putting on a show.

"That's it?" Evie planned to provoke Cora again.

Just then, her phone rang.

She didn't know what was going on, but the soft and melodious ringtone suddenly became harsh, which gave her a bad feeling.

"Answer it. Why don't you answer the phone?" Cora stared at Evie with a look of hesitation.

"I'll answer it now. What's the big deal?" Evie glanced at Cora and answered the phone...

Chapter 657 The Boss

Just as soon as she answered the phone, Evie's expression changed.

"I didn't make a mistake. Why do you fire me? Aren't you afraid that Mr. Schmidt will make things difficult for you?"

Evie cursed and argued with the person on the phone.

But the person said, "Elwood can hardly protect himself now."

Then, he hung up the phone.

But Evie couldn't accept the fact that she was fired suddenly, so she yelled at Cora, "What trick did you play?"

"Didn't you ask me to drive you and Elwood out? I did what you wanted."

Cora rolled her eyes. She just wanted to see the patients as soon as possible.

If it hadn't been for Evie's repeated provocations, she wouldn't have wasted time doing this.

Evie became more annoyed. "What do you mean? You act absurdly because you have a backer."

If she had known that Cora's backer was so powerful that he could even intervene in the hospital's affairs, she would not have provoked her.

"Don't think that everyone has a backer like you." Cora was indifferent.

"Yes, I admit that I have a backer, but I'm not as hypocritical as you. When you rely on your backer, but you claim that you are indifferent to fame and fortune..."

Evie had lost her job, so she went all out and put Cora in trouble.

However, just as she was about to try, the security team from the First Hospital appeared.

"Evie is here. Take her away."

Seeing that the members of the security team were coming toward her, Evie panicked.

"Do not touch me!"

"Cora, you can do whatever you want because you have a backer. You are the same as me..."

Evie shouted.

The nurses who tried to persuade Cora just now were dumbfounded.

They didn't expect that Evie, who always ran wild in the hospital, would be expelled and driven away by Cora.

What was more unexpected was that when the members of the security team dragged Evie away, the dean rushed over.

"Boss, I knew you would come to see those cancer patients today, and I wanted to invite you to check the hospital's revenue during this period and the donations to children in mountainous areas next month in my office."

The dean smiled at Cora.

The word "boss" made Evie and the nurses dumbfounded.

They all knew that the First Hospital was discredited by the Yoris family and sold to someone else.

The mysterious boss who took over the First Hospital had never shown up in public and was quite mysterious.

But they all believed that the boss should be an old and ugly man.

After all, in their impression, only an elderly man had enough money to buy a hospital.

And they thought that the boss was ugly because he never showed up in public.

Otherwise, with such a hospital under his control, he could live a carefree life and show off to everyone.

However, Cora was different from what they thought...

Evie had mixed feelings.

She kept saying just now that Cora was no different from her because both of them were attached to men.

It turned out that Cora was the mysterious buyer of the hospital.

Thinking that she provoked Cora again and again like a fool just now, Evie regretted it.

Chapter 658 Beat Adolph Up

But it was useless to regret it now. Evie was taken away by the security team.

After Evie was taken away, Cora took the pulses of those several patients under the astonished eyes of the nurses, adjusted their medicines, and followed the dean to check the hospital's revenue during this period.

Cora thought that this matter would come to an end with Evie's dismissal, so she didn't take it to heart.

As soon as she walked out of the hospital, she received a call from Byron.

"Is everything over?" Byron sounded in a good mood. Cora could feel his silent smile on the phone.

"Almost." Cora was about to say she would not go to him.

But Byron said, "Come here. I ordered lunch. It should be here soon..."

Judging from his serious tone, it seemed as if he just wanted Cora to have lunch with him. Cora couldn't refuse.

Therefore, Cora had to go to the Hansen Group again.

Cora didn't go directly to Byron but went to Carter's office first.

"Carter, this is your aunt's medicine. I've written the method of how to take and use it. You can follow the instructions and apply it to your aunt."

"Thank you. You don't need to come here. You could call me, and I'd go get it."

Carter took the medicine and thanked Cora.

"It's okay. I just came by."

Carter immediately understood that she had an appointment with Byron.

No wonder Byron asked him to order lunch for two people just now.

He wondered why because no important clients would come today.

It turned out that Byron and Cora had reconciled.

But it was good. Carter wouldn't need to be worried every day. Byron wouldn't be dissatisfied with whatever he did.

"Mr. Hansen just finished the meeting and is in the office. Let me take you there."

Carter got up and wanted to lead Cora to Byron's office.

But Cora said, "No need. Tell me how to get there. I can go by myself."

Cora didn't want to bother others with things she could do.

Carter knew that Byron and Cora had just reconciled, and they wanted to spend more time alone. He didn't want to disturb them, so he told Cora the route.

Cora left Carter's office, about to go to the floor where Byron's office was.

She didn't expect that when she was walking toward the president's exclusive elevator, she met Adolph.

"Hey, beauty, I didn't expect us to meet again so soon."

The last time Cora went to the Hansen Group to see Carter's aunt, Adolph fell in love with her.

In the past two days, he had been inquiring about Cora in the company.

What puzzled him was that he didn't find out about Cora after asking many people.

When he was wondering if Cora was not an employee of the company, Cora appeared again.

It seemed that she was an employee of the company, but Carter hid her well.

But the more Carter protected Cora, the more Adolph wanted to harass her.

Adolph liked to take away other people's girlfriends.

When Cora raised her eyes, she saw the malicious intent in Adolph's eyes.

She ignored him and was about to take a step forward.

But Adolph stood in front of her and gave her his business card.

"Beauty, I am Adolph Mays, the director of the Hansen Group, and this is my business card."

Cora didn't take the business card but looked at Adolph coldly.

Being stared at by Cora, Adolph felt hot all over his body.

"It's okay that you don't take my business card. You only need to know I can change your fate in the company..."

Adolph wanted to touch Cora's waist.

After seeing Cora's coquettish appearance that day, he felt that other women were not charming.

He couldn't wait to sleep with Cora, wondering if she was as beautiful as he imagined.

However, just as his hand stretched out, before it touched Cora's waist, she grasped it, and he felt dizzy.

When the back of his head hit the ground, he felt a sharp pain. He realized that Cora threw him over her shoulder...

Chapter 659 A Guilty Conscience

"What happened?"

"Was Mr. Mays beaten?"

The big sound attracted the attention of other employees on the floor.

Some people who flattered Adolph hurried to help him up.

"Who is this woman? How dare she beat Mr. Mays?"

Adolph was a proud man.

If people found out that he was beaten by a woman, he would be humiliated.

So he said angrily, "Don't talk nonsense. I didn't get beaten."

"Then you are..."

"I fell on my own."

After Adolph saved his blushes, he looked at Cora. "Which department are you in?"

As long as he knew which department Cora belonged to, he would make her suffer.

After he slept with her, he would take a picture of her flirtatious appearance and show it to everyone.

Then, she wouldn't dare to be arrogant in front of him in the future!

But it was only Adolph's wishful thinking.

Cora said, "I am not an employee of your company."

"Not an employee of our company? Then how did you sneak into this place? Well, it seems that you plan to steal our company's information!"

"I don't." Cora looked calm.

"Don't deny it. Now go to the office with me to prove your innocence, or I will call the police and ask them to arrest you."

Adolph wanted to drag Cora away.

When Cora was brought into his office, he could do anything he wanted to her.

However, what he did seemed to touch a switch somewhere on Cora's body.

Under the astonished eyes of everyone, Adolph suffered another shoulder throw!

Now, everyone understood what happened just now.

And Adolph tried to drag Cora away. The crowd knew that he made an excuse to harass Cora.

Some women winked at Cora.

After all, Adolph had harassed quite a few female employees, and rumors spread in the company.

However, the company protected him. The female employees couldn't complain because they wanted to keep their positions.

Seeing that the pretty lady in front of them beat Adolph up, while they relieved their anger, they were worried that Adolph would retaliate, so they signaled her to run away.

But Cora didn't want to leave.

The female employees were anxious, and some of them were waiting to see what Cora would do.

Adolph got up while covering his head. "What a cheek. I won't let you go..."

Adolph cursed, pointing at Cora's nose.

Just then, a male voice suddenly came from behind Cora. "You dare!"

When everyone turned their heads, they saw Byron coming quickly.

Although Byron walked very fast, he was elegant and dignified, like a noble.

But there was a trace of hostility on his handsome face.

Everyone could feel his aura as a leader.

Some frail and cowardly people could no longer bear the pressure of his aura and fainted.

Adolph noticed that Byron's appearance was a bit strange.

But the last time he saw Cora, he paid special attention to it.

When Carter led Cora to meet Byron, they didn't say hello.

Therefore, Cora should be Carter's girl, and she had nothing to do with Byron.

At this thought, Adolph began to slander Cora.

"Mr. Hansen, this woman is not an employee of our company. She broke in to steal our secrets. I wanted to take her for an investigation, but she beat me up with a guilty conscience."

Byron scolded Adolph coldly, "You are right. She is not an employee of our company, but if she is willing, I can give the company to her..."

Chapter 660 A Misunderstanding

As soon as Byron's words fell, everyone around him gasped.

Adolph was terrified, staring at Byron and Cora with wide eyes.

Was Cora Byron's girl?

But why didn't they say hello when they met each other last time?

While Adolph was stunned, Byron continued, "I can give the company to her. Why should she steal the company's secrets?"

Byron's tone was cold.

It made everyone scared.

Only Cora remained indifferent. "I brought medicine to Carter's aunt and was about to go to your office."

Byron's voice softened as he heard this.

"I asked you to go to me directly. Lunch is ready. There is your favorite spicy fried crab."

Byron put his arm around Cora's shoulder, declaring his ownership.

Cora didn't resist. She complained, "It is not spicy!"

"Eating too much spicy food is bad for your health."

The two talked as if no one was around.

Others were curious about who Cora was.

Was she Byron's girlfriend or lover?

But even if she was Byron's lover, Byron loved her the most.

Byron remembered the food she liked clearly.

While everyone was envious of Cora, Adolph felt his scalp tingling.

He teased Byron's girl.

This was too much.

But after Byron got divorced a few years ago, he didn't remarry.

So far, there was no news that he was dating any girl or about to get married.

Therefore, Cora should only be his lover.

As long as she was not Byron's wife-to-be, it would be alright.

In addition, Adolph was capable, and he had earned a lot of money for the Hansen Group. Byron would not embarrass him.

Thinking of this, Adolph said, "It was a misunderstanding."

He smiled at Cora and apologized. "I'm sorry. I thought you came to steal our company's secrets, so I was rude. I..."

But before Cora could respond, Byron said, "Go to the finance department to collect this month's salary. You don't have to come to work anymore."

"Mr. Hansen, it was a misunderstanding. Are you going to fire me?"

Adolph thought that he had made so many contributions to the company, and he would have a salary cut at most.

But he never expected that Byron would fire him!

When Adolph was stunned, Cora calmly suggested to Byron, "I don't think it's the first time he has molested female colleagues. He's a recidivist. You have to check it out."

Although she wasn't hurt, many female employees in the company gave her a hint, which proved that Adolph molested many of them.

As a woman, Cora had to help them.

Byron nodded and said to Carter, who hurried over, "Check what he did thoroughly. If he did something wrong, send him to prison."

Carter nodded.

Seeing that they were about to send him to prison, Adolph was annoyed.

"Mr. Hansen, I have planned many projects and earned a lot of money for the company. How could you treat me like this because of a woman? Aren't you afraid that you will disappoint everyone in the company?"
