

Snatched 661

Chapter 661 Sweet Words

Adolph was good at fanning the flames. Seeing that there were several directors around, he continued,

"When these directors accidentally have a problem with this woman, will you also fire them and send them to prison?"

With Adolph's incendiary remarks, those directors looked at each other in dismay.

Adolph was proud and felt that Byron had to change his decision, but Byron stared at him coldly.

"First, don't try to confuse the concepts. Conflict and sexual harassment are not the same thing."

Adolph's expression froze.

He thought that Byron had left the company for four years and took it over again some time ago, so he didn't know what he was doing.

But now it seemed that Byron knew a lot about it.

He panicked.

Byron continued, "Second, and most importantly, to me, she is not an ordinary woman!"

Adolph raised his head to look at Byron, only to see that his usually cold eyes were staring at Cora intently.

The moment the eyes of the two met, Cora was slightly surprised, but Byron's cold eyes softened...

Adolph suddenly had a bad feeling.

Byron said, "She is my wife, the co-owner of the Hansen Group. If you disrespect her, you are insulting me and the Hansen Group. Because of this, I wish I could kill you."

When Byron's voice fell, everyone was stunned.

Adolph didn't expect this woman to be Byron's wife.

If he had known that, he wouldn't have harassed her.

But now, he had to calm down.

Otherwise, with what Byron said today, even if he didn't go to jail, he couldn't stay in New York anymore.

So he suppressed his restlessness and questioned Byron again, "Your wife and the co-owner of the Hansen Group? If I remember correctly, you were divorced four years ago, and we have never heard of your remarriage!"

It was different to harass Byron's lover and his wife.

That was why Adolph avoided the serious and took the light.

Unexpectedly, Byron said, "It was her four years ago, and it will also be her four years later. She's my only wife!"

Everyone present understood that this woman was Byron's ex-wife and the one who would be with him for the rest of his life.

They looked at Cora with more respect.

Some people had begun to plan how to flatter Cora and launch their careers into the stratosphere.

But the same words sounded the death knell for Adolph.

This woman turned out to be Byron's ex-wife and wife-to-be.

If he had known this, he wouldn't have harassed her.

But it was too late to regret it now.

Soon, Carter asked security guards to drive Adolph away.

And the company started an investigation into his sexual harassment of women workers.

When they found out what he did, they would hand him over to the police.

Byron went back to his office with his arm around Cora's waist.

But as soon as they returned to the office, Cora broke free from him.

"Don't think you can bluff me with a few sweet words."

Byron took her back into his arms and kissed her lightly. "How many words do you want to hear?"

Chapter 662 Embarrassment

Cora suddenly felt that her face was hot.

"I don't want to listen to sweet words. Otherwise, I will be gooseflesh all over."

She used to think that Byron didn't understand what she thought.

But just now, he used Adolph's matter to announce his love for her in front of all the employees, which made her feel warm.

She thought that he might have studied how to win her heart in the past four years.

But the more she struggled and resisted, the more Byron wanted.

He pushed everything on the table to the ground and carried Cora onto it.

"Since you don't want to listen to sweet words, I'll prove it with action!"

Byron couldn't wait.

"Come on. Didn't you order lunch?"

Cora struggled to get up.

But Byron knew what she was going to do and stopped her.

He kissed her and whispered in her ear, "Be good. We will have lunch later..."

After they were done, Cora felt that she would never come to the Hansen Group again.

In the whole afternoon, Byron never let her rest.

Although the door of the office was locked, there were knocks from time to time.

Some came to deliver coffee, some came to deliver documents to be signed, and some came to inform Byron of a meeting...

Although they didn't open the door, all adults knew what they did in the office for so long.

When Cora and Byron walked out later, she didn't dare to raise her head.

It was so embarrassing!!

When Sally said she wanted to see Cora and Martin, the two were at the Yoris Mansion.

This was Martin's first weekend after he attended kindergarten.

Sara refused to let Cora take Martin away, saying that he must spend the weekend at home.

Right now, she was showing Martin the puppy she just raised.

Sara didn't like dogs. Arnold kept dogs before, but Sara didn't allow the servants to bring them into the hall or let them run into her bedroom.

But the last time she saw that Martin liked puppies, asked Cora to buy ham sausages, and fed them to stray dogs on the side of the road, so she bought this a-month-old puppy.

The puppy was fluffy. It jumped around, making Martin laugh out loud.

Sara watched as Martin laughed happily, and her face was full of smiles.

Sitting on the swing in the garden, Cora watched the interaction between the two and smiled.

Sally wanted to see Cora and Martin, so Cora asked her to come to the Yoris Mansion.

When Sally saw Cora at the Yoris Mansion, she was filled with emotion. "I never thought that you would be the daughter of this family..."

"I didn't expect it either. When I saw the DNA test report, I thought it was a joke. I even thought that I would never accept this fact for the rest of my life."

But now, she had gradually accepted the Yoris family, as well as Sara and William.

"Mrs. Sara Yoris has changed a lot." Sally looked at Sara, who was bathing the puppy with Martin, and couldn't help sighing.

"Um."

Cora followed Sally's gaze.

Sara had changed a lot recently.

She no longer focused all her attention on William, and she became more cheerful.

If she hadn't been trapped in love, maybe she would not have been one-sided and harsh.

After Sara bathed the puppy, she brought Martin over to greet Sally.

"Sally, thank you for taking care of Cora before. I know I did many wrong things. If you weren't with Cora, she would have a hard time."

Sally smiled, "She is my bosom friend. It's what I should do."

Sally unpacked the toys she brought and played with Martin.

But she kept touching her stomach.

"What's wrong?" Cora asked.

"Nothing. I might have eaten something wrong last night, and I feel sick," Sally said.

"Do you want to go to the hospital?"

"Come on. We are doctors. Why do we need to go to the hospital for such a minor ailment? When I go back, I can stop by the pharmacy and buy some medicine."

Sally didn't care. She played toys with Martin while chatting with Cora.

The two of them hadn't had a good chat in the past four years. They had so much to say that they couldn't get it all out.

At the same time, a doctor's article quickly went viral online...

Chapter 663 Stand Byron up

The article said: [I was a doctor in the First Hospital, and I was fired because I offended a leader...]

The author knew how to fan the flames. The article avoided the important and dwelled on the trivial.

She only said that she didn't like the leader's style of work, so she spoke ill of the leader. The leader learned about it and fired her.

This made many netizens feel the same way, and they began to curse the First Hospital and the so-called leader.

Some netizens supported the author to sue the First Hospital for violating the labor law.

Some asked the author to expose the evil deeds of the leader.

Some even started to boycott the First Hospital.

In a blink of an eye, the article was forwarded hundreds of thousands of times.

When netizens tried to find the leader, some people spontaneously sent wreaths to the First Hospital.

This article not only used the rules of fans smartly but also caused the normal medical order of the First Hospital to be disrupted.

When Cora received a call from the dean and learned of the situation, she was about to have dinner with Byron.

"I know who published the article. I'll deal with it."

After Cora hung up the phone, she called Byron back.

As soon as the phone was connected, Byron's smiling voice came. "I'll be there in ten minutes. Sorry to keep you waiting."

"I have something to deal with. Let's have dinner another day," Cora said.

"What must be dealt with now?" Byron complained.

After they showed off their love in the Hansen Group that day, he went on a business trip for a few days.

During the trip, he missed Cora all the time. The two used Martin as an excuse to make video calls every day, but they couldn't alleviate their lovesickness.

Byron finally came back today, and they were about to meet each other, but Cora stood him up.

He wanted to know what happened.

But Cora didn't explain it and hung up the phone.

Byron turned livid with rage.

Against 99 red roses in the front passenger seat, his face was blue.

He started preparing for this date two days ago.

In addition to the restaurant's decoration, he also ordered a bouquet and prepared a ring...

Byron intended to propose to Cora.

The two were a couple before, but there was no wedding.

After Byron got back together with Cora, he wanted to make it up to her.

He thought that after Cora agreed to his proposal, when they had their wedding, Martin would be their ring bearer.

He had a meeting that lasted for more than ten hours, but as he thought of that happy scene, his exhaustion from catching the plane seemed to have disappeared.

They were about to meet each other, but Cora stood him up.

At that time, the red light at the intersection ahead was on.

Byron parked the car on the side of the road, looking at the leaves in the green area swaying in the wind. His eyes gradually turned cold...

In a high-end residence, Evie wore V-neck pajamas and held a tablet in her hand.

While checking the latest comments online, she chatted with Elwood on the phone.

"As I said, the netizens are easy to deceive. They can work for us. Look, we don't need to do anything.

They have turned the First Hospital into a mess."

Elwood said, "Baby, the most important thing now is to let us return to our positions. As long as the people from the First Hospital come to you, you must mention this."

Elwood didn't go to work for the past two days. His wife kept asking him why he was on vacation suddenly.

He had to say that he was sick and asked for sick leave.

He felt that if he didn't go to work, his wife would be suspicious.

He would be in trouble if she went to the hospital to inquire about it and find out the relationship between Evie and him...

Although he was promiscuous outside, he never thought of divorcing his wife.

His wife gave birth to two boys, and her family also gave him a lot of support.

"Understood. You are afraid of your wife."

"But I love you the most. I'll go find you later and let you know how much I love you..."

When the two were chatting, Evie heard the doorbell ring.

Chapter 664 An Attitude of Seeking Help?

"Darling, I'll talk about it later when you come over. My doorbell rang. I guess someone from the First Hospital came over to talk about it," Evie said.

"Then you remember to mention our resumption of work, so don't make trouble," Elwood said.

"Got it." Evie hung up the phone and went to open the door.

Evie was surprised to see only Cora standing outside the door. "Oh, it's you!"

How shocking it was to find out that Cora was the big boss behind the scenes of the First Hospital before, how arrogant Evie was now.

Who let Evie grasp the lifeline of the First Hospital now?

Now as long as let didn't delete the post, the First Hospital would not be able to restore normal medical orders, let alone make a profit.

Cora's visit proved that she was in a hurry.

So now Evie was waiting for Cora to beg her.

It was just that Evie didn't expect that the first thing Cora said when they met was, "Delete the post. I can pretend this never happened."

Evie laughed out of anger.

Was this also the attitude of seeking for help?

So Evie simply pretended not to know anything. "What post? I don't know. These two days, I'm unemployed and unhappy at home, not even in the mood to play with my phone."

"Don't pretend to be crazy with me. I don't have time to talk nonsense with you here. If you delete the post now, I can cut you some slack because we are both alumni," Cora spoke bluntly.

Right now, Evie was just expelled from the First Hospital. With Evie's previous achievements in the First Hospital, it was not too difficult to apply for jobs in other hospitals.

But Evie had a bad temper.

Evie always felt ashamed to be kicked out of the hospital by Cora that day. So she wanted to rely on this post to let Cora welcome herself back gracefully and get back all the lost face.

Evie said, "Then I'll talk to you too. Unless you let Mr. Schmidt and I return to our original posts and invite us back in a good manner, I will delete the post. Otherwise... there is no way!"

Evie felt that making Cora visit her in person proved that the situation was serious.

Even though Cora was the big boss behind the First Hospital, the hospital still had other shareholders.

If the hospital continued to be unprofitable, other shareholders would also have opinions.

At that time, the pressure would react on Cora, and Cora would definitely compromise.

Evie thought that after her tough attitude, it would be Cora's turn to show softness.

But what Evie never expected was that Cora only said, "Alright then, remember this is your own decision. Don't blame me for being ruthless."

Then Cora left.

Evie really never thought about Cora's straightforward attitude.

But Evie still didn't keep it. Anyway, Evie felt that the post had such a significant impact.

Evie thought, "Even if Cora refused to bow her head now, she would bow her head in two days.

Humans didn't make life difficult for their own interests."

It was just that Evie didn't expect that shortly after Cora left, things began to reverse.

The official Twitter of the First Hospital posted a twitter titled "Statement Regarding Evie's Dismissal by the Hospital Without Reason."

The article pointed out that Evie had an improper relationship with Elwood.

In addition, Evie often used Elwood's relationship to bully other colleagues in the workplace, making the workplace atmosphere of the First Hospital a mess.

For this reason, the hospital dismissed Evie, but Evie refused to accept this treatment, so she attacked the First Hospital with an anonymous post on the Internet.

In addition to directly disclosing Evie and Elwood's workplace bullying, the First Hospital also issued a statement...

Chapter 665 Rekindling Hope

Firstly, what Evie did seriously affect the normal medical order of the First Hospital, and the First Hospital will hold Evie accountable according to law.

Secondly, in response to netizens who make extreme remarks and behaviors towards the First Hospital due to Evie's posts, the First Hospital will also take up the legal weapon to defend its legitimate rights.

It could be said that as soon as the First Hospital's statement came out, Evie became popular in the medical circle.

Many hospitals had publicly stated that for people like Evie, whose character was not up to standard, the hospital would not admit them for life.

In addition, the people who used to support Evie under the post before, now cursed Evie as a bitch and phony, using them as leverage.

Also, there were a lot of people watching what was going on.

Netizen 1: [I said before that this person's posting method was very skillful. It didn't look like she was expelled from the hospital at first glance. She looked like she wasn't on a whim. I didn't expect that I was really right.]

Netizen 2: [I used to work with Evie, but I lost my job because of her sniping in the back. Now that I see her being blocked by major hospitals, the anger in my heart finally came out.]

When people denounced Evie, some people sent anonymous letters to Elwood's home.

Elwood's wife, Romy, had resigned and stayed at home for many years. Romy was currently a full-time housewife, devoting herself to taking care of her husband and children, and basically had no time for herself, so she didn't pay much attention to the news on the Internet.

Seeing the anonymous letter, Romy found that besides the stack of photos of her husband and Evie hanging out, there was another letter in it.

The letter contained bills related to Elwood's use of the community property to buy high-end residential houses, BMW cars, and luxury leather bags for Evie over the years.

Although Romy had been a housewife for many years, she still had the ability, brainpower, and connections with her natal family.

So on the same day, Romy took Elwood and Evie to court, demanding that Evie return Elwood's high-end residential houses, BMW cars, and luxury leather bags that Elwood bought her with the community property.

At the same time, Evie was also required to compensate Romy for intervening in the relationship between Elwood and Romy, which caused Romy mental damage of about 340 thousand dollars.

Furthermore, Elwood cheated in marriage and was obviously at fault, so Romy also asked Elwood to leave the house with anything and voluntarily give up the custody of the child.

Elwood had been struggling in the workplace for more than ten years, and he had already achieved quite a lot.

But the premise of all this was based on the connections of Romy's natal family.

Once Elwood left the house with anything, everything before would be wiped out, which was like fetching water from a bamboo basket.

So Elwood bowed and begged for mercy. "Honey, even if I was with Evie, I never thought of divorcing you."

Romy looked at Elwood with cold eyes. "It is because of my natal family's connections that you dare not divorce me because you can't bear the consequences of divorcing me."

Then Elwood said, "But people say that a one-night couple is a hundred days of grace. For the sake of our husband and wife for so many years, please forgive me this time."

But Romy didn't look at Elwood and let the servants drag him away.

Later, Elwood was desperate and divorced Romy.

Career and divorce, Elwood's hard-working relationship network for more than ten years had also been cut off, and Elwood couldn't even eat enough, so he could only seek refuge with Evie.

But Evie also had a bad time.

The job in the hospital was gone, and Evie was blocked by the whole medical profession.

Evie could only find a job in a sensual place to make money to support herself and Elwood.

Evie thought that she had no hope in her life.

That day, Evie saw Byron in a sensual place, and her hope was rekindled...

Chapter 666 My Friend!

Eversong Club was a newly opened entertainment venue in New York in the past two years.

In addition to escorts and bunny waiters, the most distinctive feature was a strip show.

However, as soon as Byron and the others arrived, they were arranged by the manager and others in the top room.

Ordinary waiters like Evie, who was inexperienced, were not eligible to enter that top room.

But Evie was still in the crowd at a glance and recognized Byron.

Byron's height, appearance, and his outstanding temperament were simply outstanding.

It was hard for one to ignore Byron's existence.

The moment Evie saw Byron, her eyes lit up.

Evie knew that men like to cheat. Even a greasy middle-aged man like Elwood would go to other women slinkingly.

Not to mention that Byron, who was rich, powerful, and handsome, must be contaminated with countless women.

Byron's coming to this kind of place tonight was the best proof.

Did Cora think she was special?

Evie lightly scoffed.

Last time Byron ignored Cora, so Evie felt that it would not be long before someone would replace Cora and become Byron's new favorite.

And right now, what Evie needed most was to seize this opportunity...

Evie hurriedly followed, trying to enter the top room.

But the manager arranged for several young men to guard the door.

As soon as the young men saw Evie approaching, they scolded coldly, "You are not from this room. Go away."

"My friend went in just now, and I just came to say hello to him." Evie had a flattering smile on her face.

But the young man sneered, "If you know the people in this room, you won't be a bunny girl here."

Another young man even pushed Evie with his hands directly. "Go away. Don't get in the way here."

Evie was pushed out around the top room, and when she was depressed because of this, she saw that slender and tall figure and went to smoke near the long corridor.

And the manager probably learned from the guard's young men that Evie tried to break into the room and was angrily coming over to reprimand her.

Evie made a decisive decision and walked towards Byron.

"Mr. Hansen, I didn't expect to run into you here." Evie's tone was familiar as if she really knew Byron.

At first, Byron didn't even turn his head and was busy swallowing clouds and mist.

Evie was also anxious. Seeing that the manager was about to come to her, she became wise again.

"Why I didn't see Cora? Didn't she come together?"

It was also these words that made Byron turn his head and glance at her. "Do you know Cora?"

"Well, we are alumni, and we had a good relationship before," Evie said.

A trace of astonishment flashed across Byron's eyes, and then he said, "Don't tell Cora what you saw me here."

Evie quickly put on a look of sudden realization. "I understand."

Byron nodded slightly at Evie and walked towards the room.

Byron didn't show any interest in Evie the whole time or anything else.

But this was enough for Evie.

Because the scene of Evie talking to Byron just now had been seen by the manager.

The manager, who was walking towards Evie angrily, now had a flattering smile on his face. "Do you know Mr. Hansen?"

"Well, he's my friend." Evie didn't mention Cora and only vaguely used the word "friend" instead. These two words left a lot of room for imagination.

The manager understood on the spot, licked his smiling face, and said, "Then you can go to Mr. Hansen's room to help."

Then, Evie was escorted into the top-level room by the manager himself amidst the stunned expressions of the young men at the door...

Chapter 667 Red Lips Imprint

It was just that when Evie entered the room where Byron was, Evie was a little surprised.

After all, Eversong Club was a place of sensuality, and the men who came here would basically hug and kiss.

Harry, who was opposite Byron, was still hugging two girls with two hands, and he couldn't even kiss them.

But Byron's side was empty.

So Evie took the opportunity to pour wine for the Byron and sat next to Byron.

Byron noticed that someone was sitting next to him, and his brows furrowed visibly.

"Sit outside." His voice was as cold as the cold wind in early winter outside.

Evie quickly raised her head. "Mr. Hansen, it's me. I'm sorry, the manager saw that I could talk to you just now, so he arranged for me to come in. If I go out now, I'm afraid I will be punished."

Byron was taken aback when he saw that face.

In the end, Byron didn't drive Evie out either, but continued to chat with Harry about the land he wanted.

"A piece of land worth more than two billion dollars. Do you want to use it as a playground?" Harry's tone carried teasing.

Because Harry knew that what Byron wanted to build was a private playground, not for profit.

It must be Cora and her child who could make Byron spend so much time.

Yes. Recently, Harry also heard rumors that Byron had a three-year-old child.

When Harry received the news, he was depressed for a long time. Because he remembered the child who was cruelly beaten by Jane.

If the child was still there, it would be born in a few months.

Although two or three months had passed, Harry still felt so distressed that he couldn't breathe when he thought about it.

The girl next to Harry was very good at things. Seeing Harry lose his mind, she hastily fed him wine.

"Mr. Cross, do you miss other younger sisters? Please give me some face. Don't think about other people on my side, okay?"

Harry liked women acting like a baby, so he quickly put on a smiling face. "Okay, I don't want other sisters. I only want you today!"

Harry drank the wine and leaned over, and kissed the girl again, which made the girl giggle.

Another girl hurried up to kiss Harry. And Harry also kissed her.

Seeing the three of them playing happily, Evie couldn't help looking at Byron.

Byron was so focused on talking about things that he didn't even notice that the lighter had dropped.

But that serious and focused look was really charming. Just looking at it, Evie felt electrified.

Byron said, "Anyway if you don't use that piece of land, you can transfer it to me."

Byron took a fancy to this piece of land because he felt that there was no industrial pollution or large-scale infrastructure around it.

Byron planned to build a private playground for Cora and Martin and build a house in it, by the way.

If Byron and Cora got married in the future, the family of three would move inside.

For this reason, Byron specially asked Harry to talk.

The location was booked by Harry, but Byron was repelled in his heart.

But for the land, Byron still came.

"If you has other plans for the piece of land..." When Byron said this, a black shadow suddenly appeared in front of him.

It was Evie.

Evie suddenly bent down and leaned against Byron's legs, not knowing what to do.

Byron immediately picked Evie up.

It didn't know if it was because of the sudden loss of balance of the body. After being picked up by Byron, Evie suddenly fell into Byron's arms.

Although Byron straightened Evie up quickly, there was still a mark of red lips on his white shirt.

"Sorry, Mr. Hansen, I just want to help you pick up the lighter." Evie opened her hand, and there was Byron's lighter inside.

"Don't worry about it." Byron took the lighter and threw it aside.

Evie apologized again and again, "I know I was wrong, and nothing will happen in the future. For Cora's sake, don't be as knowledgeable as someone like me..."

Chapter 668 Send Back and Forth

When Harry heard the word "Cora", he gave Byron a meaningful look. Then Harry joked, "Mr. Hansen won't argue with you. I'll give you a glass of wine to calm you down..."

Harry poured Evie a glass of wine, and Evie took it flattered.

Byron also ignored it and continued to talk about things with Harry. "If you have other plans for that piece of land, I can find a similar one and exchange it with you."

Harry smiled and said, "Byron, whoever we are with. This land will be treated as a gift for your safe return."

Byron raised his glass. "Thank you. I can't afford this thank you. I have done a lot of things to be sorry to you in the past few years. You still treat me as your brother now. It is I who should say thank you to you."

In order to show off in front of Jane, Harry had done many wrong things to the Hansen family in recent years.

Harry was still worried about whether Byron would take revenge on him.

But during this period of observation, Harry found that Byron did not do anything other than get back the original business of the Hansen family. And Harry realized that Byron did not plan to fight with him.

So even if Byron didn't ask for this piece of land, after Harry learned that Byron wanted it, Harry would still hand it over to Byron and apologize.

"It's over. Let's look forward!" Byron said.

Harry hurriedly clinked glasses with Byron. "Yes, look ahead. Byron, I respect you with this glass..."

Byron just took a sip, but Harry drank a whole glass of wine as if this was the only way to express his gratitude to Byron for not caring about the past.

The two then chatted about a few more issues, but mostly nothing involving women and children.

It could be seen that Byron knew that Harry had suffered a lot of emotional injuries, so Byron tried his best not to touch Harry's wounds.

But Evie, who didn't know the truth, heard the conversation between the two and felt that these rich people really didn't take money seriously.

Evie thought, "With this billions of dollars land, Harry and Byron were able to send it back and forth. If I can get close to them, even if it's just for a while, won't I make a lot of money? But if I can keep the man for a long time, that would be even better."

The more Evie thought about it, the more excited she was.

Evie went back to the rental cabin at night. Seeing Elwood lying on the bed in flowery underpants made Evie even more disgusted.

All Evie could think about now was Byron.

When Evie saw Elwood, she felt like a lump of pork belly, the kind that was about to go rancid.

But Elwood didn't know his "true love" had feelings of disgust towards him as Elwood betrayed his wife and children.

Elwood also got up and hugged Evie, kissing her again and again. The intention of wanting to be happy couldn't be more obvious.

"Don't make trouble. I'm not in the mood." Evie tried her best to hide the disgust in her eyes and refused.

But Elwood was relentless, and his lips kept coming together, "Why are you not in the mood? We haven't been like this for a long time."

Ever since both of them were fired and recovered all the community property by Elwood's ex-wife, the two of them could only live in such a simple rental house, and they were not in the mood to think about the love they had before.

Tonight, Elwood finally had an idea, so he naturally wanted to play it.

But Evie was annoyed by Elwood, so she broke free directly, pointed at Elwood's nose, and started cursing, "Look at me working so late every day. I'm so tired that I don't even want to move, so do I still have the energy to do this? If you look like a man, you should go outside and find a decent job. I won't work so hard..."

Chapter 669 See Lip Prints

Elwood said, "It's not that you didn't see that I went out to look for a job, and every time I came back with nothing."

Perhaps due to greetings from his ex-wife's family, no matter where Elwood applied now, as soon as the relevant personnel saw his resume, they would directly refuse.

Elwood also lost confidence after looking for more than a dozen jobs in a few days and being rejected every time.

Now that Evie was still talking about work with Elwood, his mood suddenly became extremely irritable.

Elwood asked, "And how on earth did I lose my job? Wasn't it because you made me into trouble?"

"Are you blaming me now? Who took advantage of the dinner and dragged me into the room drunk and raped me? If you dare to do this yourself, don't be afraid that I will cause trouble for you!" Evie's language should be as harsh as possible.

Because Evie wished that Elwood couldn't take it anymore and left here directly.

In this way, Evie didn't have to serve others to support Elwood in sensual places.

But Elwood sneered coldly, "I raped you? You seduced me first, and I got your tacit consent before I fell in love with you. Don't talk about yourself so noble! You are a bitch, but you would still want to erect a chastity memorial archway."

"How dare you call me a bitch? Get out. Get out!" Evie bared her teeth and claws. In the beginning, when she was flirting with Elwood, she just wanted him to give her some convenience.

Unexpectedly, Elwood had sex with Evie directly at that dinner party.

It wasn't until later that Evie became Elwood's mistress.

But it was too late for Evie to regret now.

The only thing Evie could do was to get rid of this man as soon as possible.

Evie grabbed everything that could be smashed on the table and threw it at Elwood.

But Elwood was not stupid and quickly saw through her motives.

"After you've used me and made me so miserable, you want to get rid of me now? There's no way!"

Elwood fended off all the things Evie threw. He grabbed her long hair and dragged her to the bed.

Then Evie was tortured for nearly two hours. There was not a single intact part of her body.

But Elwood turned over and fell into a deep sleep after humiliating Evie.

Evie turned her back to Elwood, shedding tears full of resentment.

Evie hated Elwood, but even more hated Cora, who made her life messy.

Therefore, Evie felt that she had to get Byron at a faster rate.

In this way, Evie could get rid of the deafening snoring man beside her and give Cora a painful blow...

On the same night, as Byron and Harry separated, Carter sent Byron directly to Cora's apartment.

Cora had already made an agreement with William and the others that Martin would live in the apartment when he needed to go to school, which was relatively close to the school.

On weekends, Cora would take Martin to the Yoris family to play.

But even so, the Yoris family still bought a lot of children's toys because of this rare weekend.

Arnold even converted the carp pond in the backyard into a children's paradise for Martin.

"Have you been drinking?" When Cora opened the door, she could smell the strong smell of alcohol on Byron's body.

"Yeah, I'll have a drink with Harry tonight."

Byron actually didn't like drinking very much.

But today, Harry saw that Byron had accepted the land, and felt that Byron still regarded Harry as a brother, so Harry was very happy and toasted frequently.

And Byron was also a little unhappy in his heart, so he would not refuse anyone who came.

The two drank a few bottles of wine. Harry turned into mud and was taken upstairs to rest by the hostess.

But before Byron was completely drunk, he ran back to Cora.

Seeing that Byron was drunk, Cora didn't bother with Byron much and even took the initiative to help him take off his suit, asking him to take a hot bath.

In the end, as Cora wanted to help Byron untie his shirt, she found the lip prints on the shirt...

Chapter 670 Somehow Grown Apart

Cora paused in her movements. Although they lived together again after Byron returned from a business trip, she felt that their relationship had grown distant for some reason.

Cora would sometimes wake up in the middle of the night to find Byron missing from her side even though he had clearly hugged her tightly to sleep.

Sometimes, he stood by the window and smoked, looking preoccupied. Sometimes, he would fall asleep straight on the couch.

Cora could vaguely sense that there seemed to be something wrong between the two of them.

However, she could not quite put her finger on it. Until she saw the red lipstick stain on Byron's shirt...

However, after being stunned for a few seconds, she continued to help Byron unbutton the remaining buttons of his shirt.

When she was almost done helping Byron get undressed and tried to push him into the bathroom, he started getting touchy with her.

"Shall we take a shower together?" He kissed her cheeks while his hands began to wander across her body.

His intention to get intimate with her in the shower was obvious.

Cora could smell the odor of alcohol that his body reeked of and took another look at the white shirt that she had thrown on the ground.

The moment Byron's lips touched hers, she dodged. "Go ahead on your own and go to bed after washing up. I'll go and check on Martin."

She also shoved the towel and bathrobe directly into his hands before turning around to go upstairs.

Byron thought she just disliked the smell of alcohol on his body, so he did not think much of it and simply turned around to enter the bathroom.

When Byron woke up the next day, Cora was already preparing to take Martin to school.

"Remember to lock the door when you leave." When Cora saw that he had woken up, she gave him those instructions with a straight face. Then, she took Martin out.

Byron tried to stretch his body, only to be restricted.

After getting up, he realized that he had fallen asleep on the couch last night.

In fact, he had been sleeping on the couch rather often lately. Due to the fact that the couch was relatively small, he would wake up feeling uncomfortable every single time.

However, he had been suffering from frequent insomnia recently. In order to avoid disturbing Cora and Martin, he chose to sleep on the couch instead.

As for the reasons for his insomnia... The thought of it would make him feel vexed, followed by a strong desire to smoke every single time.

However, after searching around, he still did not find his cigarettes. He thought that there should still be some in the pockets of the clothing he had changed out of yesterday.

Hence, he proceeded to rummage through the laundry basket.

Cora would set out early and come home late every day because she was busy with opening her medical clinic.

Hence, she could only sort and do the laundry after work each night.

Byron quickly found his clothes in the laundry basket, as well as his cigarettes. However, at the same time, he also discovered the lipstick stain on his shirt.

Recalling the fact that Cora had helped him undress last night, he reckoned that she must have seen the lipstick mark. However, she did not say anything about it.

Byron stared at the lipstick mark and squeezed the cigarette case in his hand while his eyes became deep and cold...

Cora planned to head to the medical clinic after sending Martin to the kindergarten.

The clinic was already undergoing renovation. To avoid having to redo anything and affecting the project's progress, she spent most of her time there supervising the work.

While on her way to the medical clinic, she kept thinking about the lipstick stain on Byron's shirt last night, which made her feel uneasy.

At this moment, a teacher from Martin's kindergarten called, "Hello, are you Martin's parent?"

"Yes, I am! Did something happen to Martin?" Cora asked, feeling as if her heart was about to jump out of her chest.