

Snatched 741

Chapter 741 Lovey-Dovey

As Byron stepped forward, he put his arms around Cora's waist, declaring ownership.

Later, Byron greeted John. "Sir Lloyd, Cora still has something to deal with personally."

John just glanced at Byron's hand on Cora's waist and said with a smile, "It's okay, go do your work. I'll take care of myself."

"I will be back when I deal with my own business, Sir Lloyd," Cora said.

The medical center opened today, and many people came here admiringly.

Even several leaders from New York took time to attend the ceremony.

It was not the right time to set up conflicts with these people.

Cora believed in him when Byron said that, so Cora left with Byron.

Soon, Byron brought Cora to the wine area temporarily set up today to greet the guests who came to the opening ceremony.

But Cora didn't see anything that needed to be dealt with. Instead, Byron handed her a glass of freshly squeezed orange juice.

"What do I need to do?" Cora asked.

Cora took the orange juice and looked at Byron wonderingly.

Byron took a glass of champagne for himself, took a sip, and said, "Talking with me is what you need to deal with, isn't it?"

Cora was speechless.

Cora suddenly understood what John had said just now.

"Aren't you bored? I'm just chatting with Sir Lloyd!" Cora said.

Cora broke free from Byron's hand and wanted to turn around and leave.

But Byron followed up again. "It's okay for you to chat with him, but you can't talk about Jerry."

"Why? I don't talk about Jerry because I like him. I'm just worried about him. It's very dangerous for him to go tropical islands alone..." Cora said.

But before Cora finished speaking, Byron dragged Cora back to his own front.

At this moment, Byron was condescending, and his eyes were focused and domineering.

"I know you have no affairs with him, but it's still unbearable here." When Byron said, he pointed to his heart.

Byron convinced himself countless times that Cora regarded Jerry as her family member, and there was no need to care about it.

But in Byron's heart, he refused to accept persuasion and felt extremely sad.

It was also the first time Cora saw Byron express jealousy so bluntly, and Cora was a little confused.

The two looked at each other, and some ambiguous feelings began brewing quietly.

At this point, Georgia's voice came. "Aunt Cora and Uncle Byron, people from all walks of life came to attend your opening ceremony today, but you two are lovey-dovey hiding in a corner. Why not come and talk with us?"

Georgia's voice also interrupted Cora and Byron's romantic atmosphere.

Cora blushed. "We didn't kiss. You, naughty little girl, don't be this naughty, or I'll hit you."

Georgia avoided Cora's hand and said with a smile, "You are only two years older than me, don't call me naughty little girl. And if I didn't show up just now, you two would kiss. What a lovey-dovey couple."

Cora was so shy that she wished to dig a hole in the ground and bury herself.

Seeing this, Byron scolded, "Little girl, although your aunt is two years older than you, she is still an elder. Don't make fun of her!"

Georgia hummed immediately. "Oh, my uncle has spoken for my aunt. I'll stop messing with my aunt, for my uncle's sake."

Seeing that Cora and Georgia were getting along happily, Byron left the wine area to greet the guests.

At this time, Georgia stuffed the bouquet she brought to Cora. "Aunt Cora, I wish you a prosperous business."

When Cora took the bouquet, she saw the Pandora bracelet on Georgia's wrist...

Chapter 742 Groom Lenard

Seeing Cora staring at the table, Georgia smiled and said, "Haha, my bracelet looks pretty, right?"

"Is it from Lenard?" Cora asked.

"Aunt Cora, you have sharp eyes," Georgia said.

Georgia fiddled with the bracelet in her hand. Her eyes brightened.

It was not difficult to see that Georgia liked the bracelet.

But Cora stared at the bracelet, frowning slightly.

Because she also liked the bracelets from this brand when she was in college.

The one Georgia had was which she had worn before, like a popular style.

Also, because it was a typical style, there were many imitations on the Internet.

And the bracelet on Georgia's wrist differed the genuine one in color and luster.

Seeing Cora staring at the bracelet for a long time, Georgia smiled and said, "I know this is a Pandora imitation. Aunt Cora, just set your heart at rest."

"But Pandora is not a luxury brand. How embarrassed he is to give you this," Cora said.

Cora was even more puzzled. Lenard could spend 170 dollars on other girls' looks. Why couldn't he buy a real one for Georgia?

This brand of bracelet was not expensive.

A hundred dollars was enough to buy a genuine one.

But Cora was unsure what was happening between Georgia and Lenard, and it was hard to say everything.

"Lenard said that he wants to save money to buy a house this year and plans to get married next year.

I also think that jewelry and other things are things outside the body, so there is no need to spend too much on them," Georgia said.

Georgia looked at the bracelet with a sweet smile.

"Are you planning to marry Lenard?" Cora asked.

Cora was a bit confused and felt how awful Georgia would feel if Georgia knew that Lenard spent 170 dollars on other girls' styling at once. Still, Lenard was unwilling even to buy a genuine one for Georgia.

And Cora was also worried about whether there was a misunderstanding if she told all of this to Georgia.

Cora was even more worried that her intervention would cause the two to break up.

"Well, I'm not young anymore. So after Grandma's birthday, I plan to take Lenard back to visit them," Georgia said.

Georgia continued, "Lenard is the head of the business team of our insurance company. When the time comes, I will ask my dad to promote Lenard as the company's acting president. Lenard has been looking forward to being promoted as the manager. And if he is promoted to be the acting president suddenly, he should be even happier.

"Well, I have several houses under my name. I will take Lenard's parents to look after them when it comes. We will get together on weekends and bond with each other. It's the same as the way you and Uncle Byron live now. Just thinking about it makes me feel delighted," Georgia said.

Cora looked at Georgia, thinking about the future, with a happy smile. Cora couldn't say anything when it came to her lips.

Anyway, Nora's birthday was coming up anyway.

"Wait till Georgia brings Lenard to meet Georgia's parents and other family members, then let's make plans." Cora thought.

Cora temporarily left the matter behind, talked and laughed with Georgia, and invited Georgia to have a piece of baked banana pie at her house on weekends.

Cora thought that the next time she met Lenard again would be on Nora's birthday.

But no. On the other day, when Cora went to the Ranson Hotel to pack two meals and was about to deliver them to Byron, who had just passed the meal due to a meeting, Cora saw a red sign at the door of the Ranson Hotel: [Groom, Lenard Sullivan. Bride, Layla Kardon.]

Maybe it was because Cora was thinking about Georgia's affairs. Lately, Cora was extremely sensitive to the word "Lenard Sullivan".

After seeing the sign, Cora walked towards the side hall where the wedding was held...

Chapter 743 Groom Lives in Bride's Family!

The wedding banquet in the Sullivan family looked grand, the hall was decorated extraordinarily beautifully, and quite a few guests were coming and going.

However, the bride and groom, the protagonists of the wedding, were not receiving guests at the door.

Only both of their parents were.

Cora asked the young man who was helping to receive the guests.

The young man replied, "The bride and groom are changing into the second set of traditional dresses at the back."

When Cora was thinking about whether to pack up and leave or stay, the young man asked Cora again, "Are you the woman's relative or the man's?"

Cora said, "I am their mutual friend."

The young man didn't doubt Cora, so he invited Cora to the banquet.

"Madam, please sit at this table first, and I'll let the bride and groom come over and say hello to you later," the young man said.

Although there were strangers around, Cora still nodded.

"Anyway, I have to see if Lenard is the one she knows." Cora thought.

Just then, Byron sent a message and asked Cora: [Why haven't you arrived yet?]

Cora said: [If you're hungry, go to the pantry and eat some pastries. I'm still queuing here!]

Byron replied: [Mrs. Hansen also has to wait in line. You ask the manager to pack it himself.]

Cora said: [It's not far from your company. There's no need. I'll be there soon.]

When Cora was chatting with Byron, the guests at this table were all saying one by one that they were friends of the man or the woman.

When it was Cora's turn, Cora pretended to have a voice call with Byron and was too busy to introduce herself.

Cora was no friend of anyone, and the self-introduction would reveal the truth.

After Cora pretended to mutter a few words, someone at this table said excitedly, "The bride and groom are here."

Some people even stood up and took pictures with their mobile phones.

"I have to take a photo and share it on Instagram. My old classmate married the daughter of the Kardon family," someone said.

"Lenard spends quite a lot to marry her, right?" Someone asked.

"No. I heard the girl likes Lenard and paid 340 thousand dollars for this marriage," someone replied.

"Lenard is fortunate. Marrying this wife can save twenty years of struggle," someone said.

"Why is lucky? Lenard is the groom living with the bride's family. The children will not have his last name," someone said.

Several people were discussing it heatedly.

The wedding banquet today was not small, with around fifty tables.

Except for the people at this table, everyone else stood up excitedly and took pictures of the bride and groom, ready to post them on Instagram or keep them as memories.

Cora initially thought that it should not be Lenard.

Cora thought, "After all, he was still saving money to buy a house this year and planned to get married next year,

It should be just a misunderstanding because I worry about whether to tell Georgia about those things lately that I can't bear any trouble."

So Cora wanted to wait for everyone to sit down, making sure this Lenard was not that Lenard so that she could slip away quietly.

At this moment, people finally stopped taking photos.

Many people returned to their seats one after another, including those at Cora's table.

Cora saw the two happily walking behind the flower girls without so many people blocking the view.

The moment Cora saw the groom's face clearly, she was confused.

Cora didn't even notice her phone was vibrating all the time.

Because the man who walked with the bride, even if he put on a high-end suit and made a good look,

Cora still recognized at a glance that it was the man Georgia wanted to take to meet the parents and spend the rest of her life together!

And the woman in the beautiful wedding dress was none other than the girl who Lenard had spent thousands of dollars styling for her at the hairdressing salon that day...

Chapter 744 Smash or Beat?

Cora felt her hands and feet suddenly turned cold.

Cora didn't know how to tell Georgia about it.

Georgia looked so happy and yearned, saying she would take Lenard to meet her parents that day.

But the fact was that the man who promised the future with Georgia was now walking on the carpet hand in hand with another girl and lived with the girl's family for millions of dollars.

At this moment, the woman sitting next to Cora reminded her. "Your phone is ringing."

Cora looked down and realized that Byron had called her and made three calls.

Because Byron hadn't seen Cora, he worried something happened to her.

Cora quickly grabbed her phone and left the table.

Only when Cora was outside the hotel she answered Byron's call.

"Where are you? The manager said he didn't see you coming over," Byron said.

As soon as Cora answered the phone, Byron's anxious voice came.

Byron was worried Cora would wait too long at the Ranson Hotel, so he called the hotel manager directly and asked him to receive Cora in person. novelbin

As a result, the manager searched around but did not see Cora.

At that time, Byron immediately got nervous, took the car keys, and hurried to the Ranson Hotel.

Along the way, Byron also called Cora from time to time.

But Cora didn't pick up the phone, which reminded Byron of the scene where Martin was kidnapped last time.

So while rushing, Byron also contacted the police.

It was supposed that the police would also arrive on the scene soon.

Although the call was connected now, Cora had not made a sound for a long time, which made Byron feel that something must have happened to Cora.

"Did anything happen to you? Don't worry. I'm already outside the gate of the Ranson Hotel," Byron said.

When Cora heard Byron's words, she hurriedly looked outside the hotel gate.

When Cora saw Byron walking quickly towards this side, she rushed to him and threw herself into his arms.

Seeing Cora rushing forwards, Byron quickly reached out to catch her.

"It's okay. I'm here..." Byron said.

Byron patted Cora on the back, seemingly comforting her.

But at the same time, Byron buried his face in the crook of Cora's neck, as if only by smelling her breath in this way could he calm all the uneasiness in his heart.

Cora leaned in Byron's arms, listening to his strong heartbeat. The uneasiness gradually faded away.

"Byron, what should Georgia do?" Cora asked.

"Georgia? What does this matter to her?" Byron said.

Byron was a bit confused.

Cora told Byron everything, including that Georgia dated Lenard, the fact that Lenard gave Georgia a cheap, high-quality imitation bracelet but spent a hundred dollars on another woman and that Lenard held a wedding with that woman today, and Georgia knew nothing about it.

"I think you should call Georgia over to cut off her thoughts completely. Something needs to be dealt with in advance," Byron said.

"Then I'll tell Georgia to come over," Cora said.

"Well, I'll stay here. If Georgia wants to ruin their wedding, I'll let the waiter do it," Byron said.

Byron's words gave Cora confidence. Cora immediately called Georgia and told her Lenard was marrying another woman.

Soon, Georgia arrived at the Ranson Hotel.

But in fact, Georgia still didn't believe that Lenard married another woman today.

After all, last night, Lenard called Georgia for over an hour and said that he was busy with a big order today and might not have time to reply to her message, and asked her to take care of herself so as not to get hurt.

Lenard was so gentle last night. How could he turn around and marry someone else?

Georgia didn't believe it.

Until Georgia saw Byron in the hotel lobby saying to her, "If you want to smash their banquet or beat up the couple, just ask Uncle Byron to let someone do it."

A sudden thunder hit Georgia's heart, and she seemingly felt this was real...

Chapter 746 Break off All Relations Between Us

Cora was worried that Georgia would be bullied, but she didn't intervene, seeing that Georgia hadn't shed tears and her attitude was very tough.

It was better for Georgia to deal with difficulties in person.

After going through this difficulty personally, Georgia would become mature.

Others couldn't represent Georgia after all.

That was why Cora just stood aside to ensure that Georgia would not be wronged when Georgia was seeking justice.

Of course, if Georgia wanted to beat up that bastard, Cora didn't mind helping her.

Lenard explained, "Georgia, I didn't intend to lie to you. Layla and I were forced to be a couple under pressure from the family. Georgia, you are my lover."

Lenard glanced at Cora and recognized her as the owner of the hair salon, so he felt confused.

It seemed that he didn't understand why Cora appeared here with Georgia.

But right now, he was more worried about Georgia getting out of control and ruining his wedding.

Therefore, he tried to ignore Cora's presence and quickly explained, "Layla's father is the president of our insurance company. He said that as long as Layla and I get married, I will be on the manager candidates list this time. You know how hard I've worked for my promotion recently. novelbin

"Give me a few more years! I will definitely divorce Layla and marry you. Honey, please believe me. Go back and wait for me now, okay?"

"You married someone else just to get promoted?"

Georgia was about to cry and scolded angrily, "Don't attribute your greed to our relationship! Lenard, I used to believe that you would not be willing to spend more money on a date with me just because of your family background. You are essentially a down-to-earth and capable young man! But now it seems that you are greedy and shameless!"

Lenard was going to marry someone else, but he still deceived her!

She was just too well protected by the Hansen family before, so she was a little more innocent, but she wasn't stupid!

"Honey, I know you are angry now. You are unwilling to accept my explanation. But I do like you, and I have no choice but to betray you in order to give you a bright future," Lenard said.

Lenard added, "My family situation is awful, and I'm the eldest in the family. I have younger siblings.

When I marry you, I not only need to buy a house for myself but also consider the matter of my brother's marriage in the future. Moreover, I have to think about my sister's future employment."

In fact, he liked Georgia.

When they were a couple, Georgia never asked him for anything and never demanded he give her a gift. She even paid for certain expenses on the date.

Occasionally, she would take the initiative to give him gifts and send him some delicious meals.

In addition, she would carefully help him give some small gifts to his brothers and sisters.

It was just that Georgia's frugality and hard work had been dwarfed after Layla's appearance.

Although Layla would ask him to send some expensive gifts, she would give him the same return, such as buying some luxurious skin care products or bags for his younger siblings.

Layla would not take the initiative to bear the expenses when they were dating, but she would transfer money to him, which was several thousands of dollars at a time.

Layla was not as considerate as Georgia, but Layla could give him a bright future.

So he finally chose Layla.

"As long as I marry Layla, these problems will be solved easily. When I divorce her, I can get half of her property, so I can give you a spectacular wedding ceremony..."

When he said this, Georgia suddenly refuted coldly. "It's enough. I don't need what you get by deceiving others. You never know what I want!"

As long as she was with him, she could accept every kind of hardship.

Even if she didn't accept the Hansen family's help, with her social connections, she could change the poverty of Lenard's family.

However, some people annoyed her today!

"Let's break up! From now on, we break all relations between us."

Chapter 747 Waiting for You to Beg Me

"Honey, if you break up with me now, you will regret it."

Lenard said confidently, "I will be promoted soon, then the economic situation will greatly improve. I plan to give you several brand bags! If you break up with me now, you won't get anything."

Cora heard that. She couldn't help widening her eyes.

Lenard was planning to use material things to make Georgia fall in love with him again?

It was reasonable!

After all, he didn't know that what Georgia owns most were material things.

As Cora's anticipation, Georgia's antipathy towards Lenard became more and more apparent.

"If you don't want me to mess up your wedding, don't call me honey anymore," Georgia shouted.

Georgia felt disgusting when she heard Lenard calling her honey.

So after saying this, she dragged Cora away.

Lenard was shouting from behind, "Georgia, I'll wait for you to come back and beg me!"

Lenard felt inferior when he dealt with Layla and Layla's family, while he was happy as he dated Georgia.

Layla and her family always said how much something was worth in front of him.

Besides, they joked that Lenard's monthly salary was insufficient to buy these.

Lenard didn't dare to say anything in front of them, and he said that it was true.

Actually, in his heart, he felt extremely wronged and fantasized about Layla's family bowing in front of him and begging for mercy when he was about to break up with Layla in the future.

However, his fantasy was a little far away from him.

That was why now he needed an easy-going woman like Georgia to be by his side so that he could feel the dignity of being a man.

But right now, Georgia didn't plan to mess up his wedding, which made him heave a sigh of relief.

As for making Georgia fall in love with him again, it was supposed to be solved until the wedding was finished.

And he firmly believed that Georgia would come back and beg for himself.

After all, he deceived Georgia into believing that he could buy luxurious bags for her.

Those girls around him, even if they didn't own that kind of bag, they had been saving money to buy brand bags.

Although Georgia had never owned that kind of bag, she must be like those girls who secretly saved money to buy bags.

In the end, Georgia would definitely not be able to resist the temptation and return to his side.

Lenard saw Georgia leaving. Then he turned back to the wedding.

When toasting the guests with Layla, his smile was still extraordinarily bright.

He pretended that there was nothing bad happened just now.

Byron had been smoking in the lobby of the Ranson Hotel, waiting for Cora and Georgia.

Soon, Cora and Georgia came out.

Byron also stubbed out the cigarette, stepped forward, and asked, "How is it?"

He wanted to ask Georgia how the conversation was going, whether they planned to drag the bride and groom out to beat them up or to ruin the wedding.

Nevertheless, Georgia drooped her head and didn't answer, looking frustrated.

In the end, it was Cora who replied to Byron, "Georgia and Lenard just broke up!"

"That's it?" Byron asked.

It seemed that Byron didn't agree with this result.

Obviously, he was not very satisfied with this peaceful way of handling things!

However, Georgia didn't want to talk about this, so she skipped this topic and asked him pitifully, "Uncle

Byron, can I have a drink with Cora?"

Of course, Byron did not agree.

He deliberately skipped lunch today, trying to trick Cora into going to the company to accompany him.

Because Cora needed to accompany Georgia to handle the dispute between Georgia and Lenard, he was still hungry.

Cora was very forthright and didn't look at him. She directly agreed to have a drink with Georgia.

Cora replied, "It's no need to ask Byron. I'll accompany you."

Byron expressed his dissatisfaction to Cora, "I am hungry right now!"

Cora replied, "You're already in the hotel, so you can ask the staff to prepare some food for you."

Then, Cora and Georgia left directly without looking back.

Byron didn't know what to say.

Byron even wanted to kill Lenard.

Without Lenard, he would have eaten the meal prepared by Cora and had sex with Cora. However, he had to bear hunger right now.

He was the kind of person who would bring some trouble for those people who annoyed him, so he quickly called Carter...

Chapter 748 Received Wreath

Byron ordered, "You send twenty wreaths to Lenard's wedding site in Ranson Hotel."

Byron's order made Carter feel a little confused.

"Wreaths? Not bouquets or flower baskets?"

Carter once thought that Byron made a wrong expression.

After all, wreaths were usually for funerals.

However, Byron said, "You are garrulous. How did you get promoted to the position of special assistant?"

Carter immediately realized that Byron clearly knew what he had said just now.

It must be someone at this wedding banquet who angered Byron.

Carter immediately said, "Okay, I will send someone to send it right away."

In less than half an hour, twenty wreaths were carried into the side hall of the Ranson Hotel one by one.

Guests discussed, "Wreath?"

"What's going on?"

"Is it the wrong delivery?"

Layla's parents were toasting with the guests when they heard a lot of noise coming from the door.

They looked up and saw those white wreaths neatly placed in front of the side hall.

There were full of wedding decoration ornaments.

But when the wreaths were placed suddenly, everything became gloomy.

They hurried forward and negotiated with the porter, "You must have delivered these wreaths incorrectly because we are holding a wedding!"

One of the porters said, "It's not wrong because the address is the side hall of Ranson Hotel."

Layla's father said toughly, "But we didn't order these things! Take them away quickly, or don't blame us for being rude."

All parents hated to see white wreaths at their daughter's wedding site because it was an unlucky symbol.

However, the porter showed a shameless attitude.

One of the porters said, "We are only responsible for delivering things, not for moving them away."

Layla's mother asked, "You are shameless. Aren't you afraid that I'll complain to your leaders?"

The porter replied, "Go ahead and complain! Porters who are responsible for delivering funeral objects are limited. The boss can't find anyone to do such a job. Do you think he will fire us for such a trivial matter?"

Neither side would compromise. The situation began to escalate.

Seeing this, Lenard complained to the hotel manager.

Lenard said angrily, "We are holding a wedding here today. Your attitude is annoying."

After becoming the son-in-law of the Kardon family, Lenard's attitude was obviously more arrogant than before.

But the attitude of the hotel manager was even more arrogant.

The manager said, "It's none of our hotel's business. It's your wedding. You must have offended someone. That's why your wedding has been ruined by these wreaths!"

Before the wreaths were delivered here just now, the manager received a call from Carter, which told him about the matter of the wreaths.

The manager was sly, so he quickly guessed that this family either offended Carter or Byron.

No matter which one of them was offended, the Kardon family lost their happy life in the future.

Then he didn't need to be respectful to them.

Seeing that the manager didn't respect them, Lenard had to compromise slightly.

Lenard asked, "You don't stop these troublemakers. If other people know your attitude, no one will hold their weddings in your hotel."

The manager didn't change his attitude and said, "It doesn't matter that we will lose some potential guests. Ranson Hotel has many potential customers."

The manager added, "When your wedding is finished, you remember to take these wreaths with you.

Don't occupy our hotel's land."

Then, the manager left directly.

As soon as the manager left, the Kardon family and the Sullivan family were looking sadly at the lined-up wreaths.

Chapter 749 Bad Omen!

Layla's parents were the first to question Lenard, "Lenard, did you offend someone outside?"

Lenard immediately thought of Georgia, who had left angrily.

However, Georgia hadn't worn expensive clothes, and she said her salary was small. It was impossible for her to afford these wreaths.

Besides, Lenard believed that Georgia couldn't have the ability to order the staff of the Ranson Hotel to allow those porters to bring wreaths to their wedding site.

Therefore, he immediately denied, "I have always been cautious in dealing with people. I won't offend anyone. Could it be you offended someone?"

"It's even more impossible for us," Layla's mother immediately denied it.

Layla's father quickly scolded them, "Okay, now is not the time to discuss who should be responsible for it. Find someone quickly and throw these things out."

Many of the guests invited today were Layla's father's friends who had business connections with him.

He felt humiliated as long as he saw these wreaths.

Lenard perceived that Layla's father was not in the mood, so he thought that this matter must have an inseparable connection with Layla's father.

Nonetheless, he didn't dare to disobey Layla's father, so he quickly found several friends and asked them to help carry the wreaths out.

However, even though the wreaths were thrown away, the wedding didn't look as magnificent as before.

Some people mocked them in private, saying it was a bad omen...

On the other hand, Georgia didn't know that Lenard's wedding was ruined because of wreaths.

Georgia took Cora to the small apartment, which was specially rented in order to create a poor girl image.

In that apartment, there were simple and cheap decorations everywhere.

But in many corners of that apartment, there were photos of her and Lenard.

In almost every photo, she smiled happily. Those photos were full of a loving atmosphere.

When she looked at these photos before, she felt extremely happy.

However, when she looked at those photos now, she found it extremely ironic.

After Georgia threw those photos into the trash can one by one, she found two bottles of red wine in the cabinet.

These two bottles of red wine were randomly taken by her when she and Lenard were shopping in the supermarket.

She opened one bottle of wine and poured Cora a glass of wine.

Georgia said, "The taste is definitely not as good as my uncle's. I hope Auntie will not dislike it."

Cora replied, "I don't know how to taste the flavor of wine, so I don't have any requirements."

Then, Cora took a sip.

And Georgia drank directly from the bottle.

Cora said, "You'll get drunk if you drink like this. There's no need to hurt yourself for that kind of person."

Cora's persuasion made Georgia smile awkwardly. Georgia added, "Although Lenard is a jerk, I loved him. Auntie Cora, let me get drunk, and I will never feel sad for this kind of scum again."

Seeing Georgia so sad, Cora could only let Georgia continue drinking.

After drinking half a bottle of red wine, Georgia said, "Actually, I've seen Layla before when I stayed with Lenard. Lenard had deceived me that Layla was a colleague, so I believed it. Now I feel I'm stupid."

Cora wanted to tell Georgia about Lenard spending thousands of dollars at the hair salon for Layla.

After consideration, Cora gave up telling her about that.

Anyway, Georgia had broken up with Lenard, so there was no need to break her heart.

Later, Georgia was drunk.

It was getting dark, and Georgia refused to sleep in this house.

"Auntie, take me home. I will never come to this place again. I miss my warm and comfortable big bed..."

Cora couldn't stand her acting like a baby, so she called Byron and asked him to pick them up.

After hearing Cora's appeal, Byron said, "Go downstairs. I'm downstairs."

Chapter 750 Fire Him

When Cora helped Georgia go downstairs, Cora saw Byron leaning beside his gray Porsche.

Byron helped Cora push Georgia into the back seat, and then he got into the car.

Cora asked, "Why are you here? Didn't you say you're busy today?"

Seeing him as soon as Cora came downstairs, she felt happy.

Sometimes, the most touching thing was not the pledge of eternal love, but the lover was by your side when you needed your lover.

Byron replied, "I'm afraid Georgia is drunk, and you won't be able to help Georgia, so I decided to come here."

However, considering that the two girls would be happier talking and chatting alone, he didn't go upstairs.

Hearing what he said, Cora couldn't help smiling.

Byron kept worried, so he chose to wait for them downstairs.

Cora remembered that he was talking with the police when she and Georgia left Lenard's wedding site, and she looked for him in the hall.

At that time, he said, "Yes, my wife has been found. Thank you for your help today."

Then, Cora realized that he had been unable to contact her before, so he worried that something bad might happen to her. He not only came to find her in person but also contacted the police, planning to come to find her together.

At that moment, she realized that he still cared about her very much.

Even though her face was bruised, it didn't change Byron's love for her.

Because she felt happy after she and Byron sent Georgia home, Cora couldn't help but propose. "Do you want to go to watch the movies?"

Byron said, "Are you dating me?"

Byron was interested in her proposal.

Cora turned around and asked with a smile, "Well, do I have the honor to watch a movie with you?"

"If you kiss me, I will agree with you."

Byron didn't expect that Cora would kiss him. The reason why he made a request on purpose was to make himself not look so impatient.

Unexpectedly, Cora stood on her toes to kiss him, which made him a little flattered.

Byron asked in surprise, "What happened today?"

Cora answered, "Don't like it? It's fine if you don't like it."

Cora turned to leave.

Byron immediately chased after her, dragged her into his arms, and extended the kiss just now infinitely...

Afterward, they didn't go to the cinema because they had sex.

The next morning, as soon as Cora got up from bed, she hurriedly called Georgia.

After confirming that Georgia's mental state was fine, she breathed a sigh of relief.

However, Byron asked her, "Why do you care about Georgia so much?"

Cora perceived a little bit of jealousy from his tone and smiled.

Cora replied, "I'm worried that she will do harm to herself because she has been betrayed."

Byron pulled her into his arms and kissed her twice.

He said, "Don't worry. Georgia won't be so vulnerable."

Cora was appeased, so she felt relieved.

"However, thinking about it, I'm still angry. Georgia planned to bring Lenard back to her home to meet her parents on Madam Hansen's birthday. In the end, she was prevented by the president's daughter."

Byron was puzzled and asked, "Who is the president's daughter?"

"It's the daughter of the president of the insurance company affiliated with the Hansen Group. Lenard said that if he marries Layla, he will be promoted," Cora answered.

Cora leaned against Byron's arms and told him what she had heard that day.

Byron said, "I don't know if you don't tell me. There is such a powerful acting president in our company."

In fact, Byron knew that Cora didn't tell him this matter by accident.

Cora was seeking his help to take revenge on Lenard for Georgia's fake.

Byron was willing to help her and called Carter in front of her, "Check out the insurance company affiliated with our group, confirm which acting president is surnamed Kardon, and then fire him!"