

Snatched 951

Chapter 951 Her Gossip

Cora suddenly blushed. "It makes me feel like I'm going to abandon my innocent wife at home, who spends much time outside."

Georgia said, "Now you look more carefree than my Uncle Byron. It is an apt description."

Then Cora thumped her hand. "You are like a fence-sitter! Why am I a playboy now?"

"Aunt Cora, I'm not wrong. The news that you had dinner and sang karaoke with Jerry the day before yesterday was on trend. When my Uncle Byron saw the news, he dropped his coffee cup into pieces."

Georgia said.

Georgia played with the baby and the baby-nursing woman in the Hansen Mansion the day before yesterday. It unexpectedly ran into the scene where Uncle Byron dropped the coffee cup.

At that moment, the baby was frightened and cried, and the elders were also alarmed.

Later, Georgia stretched her neck to look, only to find that there was news that Aunt Cora was dating another man shown on Uncle Byron's phone.

But Cora said, "I'm not dating him alone but having Martin with me, okay? You know those media like to catch rumors the most."

"Getting along happily with Martin makes people feel more scared, okay? It's been said in the news that you will form a new family," Georgia said.

Georgia felt that Uncle Byron lost control and smashed his glass because of the word "new family".

"It was not as exaggerated as it was said in the news. Jerry and I just met each other. Martin hasn't played games with Jerry for a long time, so we spent quite a lot of time together."

Martin grew up under Jerry's care, so his closeness to Jerry was more substantial than other ordinary people.

The two of them now had a unique communication channel. Like their meeting last night, Martin made an appointment with Jerry and asked Cora to take him to see Jerry.

Such a meeting would surely not attract attention if it was an ordinary person.

But with Cora's previous live PK of curing cancer and Byron showing his affection to Cora on public occasions, Cora not only had the label of the first person to cure cancer but also had another label, Mrs. Hansen.

Both aroused much attention, whether it was the previous label or the latter one.

Some time ago, when Byron had a lot of cheating scandals, many gossip netizens focused their attention on Cora, this Mrs. Hansen as well.

So yesterday, when the media released the photo of Cora having dinner with Martin and Jerry, it caused quite a heated discussion.

In addition to sighing: [I thought she would choose to ignore the previous scandals of Mr. Hansen and continue to live a stable life for the money that could not be spent in several lifetimes! But now it seems that this strange woman who is the first person to cure cancer has the confidence that ordinary people don't have.]

Someone else said: [If she's not flirtatious, how can she be worthy of Mr. Hansen's affection!]

Some people also said: [These two are evenly matched, especially in this aspect!]

Some people even supported Cora to marry Jerry and form a new family.

Some said: [That's right, leave that scumbag, and find a young little hot guy to piss him off.]

The comments on the Internet not only made Byron angry but also made the entire Hansen family anxious.

Knowing that Cora would come to attend Georgia's child's 100-day banquet today, Nora called and asked Georgia to help persuade Cora.

"Aunt Cora, based on the previous relationship between you and Jerry, my Uncle Byron must be full of a sense of crisis. I don't think Uncle Byron has slept steadily for a day recently. During the few nights I lived in the mansion, my child woke me up every day in the middle of the night and went downstairs to drink water. Either I saw him drinking, or I saw him come back from outside drunk..." Georgia said.

Chapter 952 Try Again?

Cora listened to what Georgia said, and the hand patting the child stopped mid-air, biting her lower lip with her teeth.

Georgia knew at a glance that her Aunt Cora was still very concerned about her Uncle Byron's health.

"Aunt Cora, since you still care about Uncle Byron, why don't you try to be with him again? You know that what he did was to heal your heart disease, so can you forgive him?"

Cora stared at a particular corner as if she was looking at something in that place and seemed to be looking at an unknown location.

"It's not that I don't forgive him, but I'm afraid I can't give him what he wants," Cora said.

Once Byron got close to her in the past nights, Cora would feel uncomfortable and even think of the dead baby.

"Aunt Cora, you always say I'm silly, but I think you're right now!" Georgia said.

Georgia also said, "If you can't overcome this problem now, it doesn't mean you won't in the future.

Think about it. You haven't passed half of your life, so nothing is impossible. You deny your future because of the current impossibility. You will regret it after many years when you are old."

Georgia and Efren also separated before, so she was very aware of this feeling of being tortured by love.

Especially now that she was reunited with Efren and felt unbelievably happy every day, she couldn't help but think that if she hadn't reconciled with Efren back then, she would regret it now.

It was precisely because of such an experience that Georgia's persuasion had some impact on Cora.

When Cora wanted to say something to Georgia, Efren suddenly pushed the door open and walked in.

"I seemed to hear the baby crying just now. Is he hungry?" Efren asked.

As soon as Georgia noticed that Efren came in, she hastily stood in front of the table, completely blocking the half-eaten spicy pasta on the table, and then showed Efren a beautiful smile.

Cora handed the baby to Efren. "He must be hungry. The diaper is still clean."

Efren took the baby skillfully and then made milk for the baby with one hand.

In addition, Efren coaxed the infant child with a rare and gentle voice. "Be good, baby, don't cry. Dad will make the milk right away."

Cora smiled and said, "Why don't you give the child to me or Georgia? It's inconvenient for you to hold it like this."

But Efren said, "It's okay. I'm used to it. You must be exhausted after staying in the clinic all day today.

As for Georgia..."

Cora saw that Efren's gaze swept over the chili oil on Georgia's lips and continued, "She should have her own business to attend to."

Cora saw that scene and believed in her previous judgment.

Mr. Serrano certainly knew that Georgia ate spicy pasta secretly, but he was indulging.

Cora was afraid she would turn into a super-wattage light bulb if she stayed, so she quickly found an excuse to leave.

After leaving the lounge, Cora went to find Martin.

In the end, Nora stopped Cora first.

"Cora, I know you're still angry now, but can you help me stop Byron drinking tonight for the sake of him not making any mistakes?" Nora asked.

Nora's anxious expression made Cora frown slightly.

"Why can't he drink?" Cora asked.

Chapter 953 Father and Son Reconciliation

Cora remembered that Byron was relatively self-disciplined before.

Even if others toasted at the dinner, he would not be overdrank.

Therefore, Nora didn't worry too much in terms of his ability of drinking.

But today, Nora begged Cora in such a humble tone. Obviously, the problem was not simple.

Nora said, "He had stomach bleeding from drinking a few days ago, and the doctor said it was caused by excessive drinking every day recently."

Cora was shocked and asked, "Does he drink a lot of wine every day?"

Nora answered, "Well, after you and Martin returned to the Yoris family, he drank it every night."

As Nora mentioned this, her face was full of worry. "I was worried that someone would toast him at night, and he drank it again. He had come out of the hospital two days ago. If he drinks it again, he will be stomach bleeding again."

Moreover, Nora talked about Martin's recent state with Cora. She expressed her hope that Cora could let them take care of Martin if she was busy with her business. They had much free time.

At the same time, Byron was having a father-son conversation with Martin.

Byron said, "Martin, I know that I secretly located you and your mother before, which made you angry.

But at that time, I was worried about your safety, and there was nothing I could do."

With a poker face, Martin expressed that he would not accept Byron's apology because what happened that time made him feel very ashamed and even feel like he had betrayed his mother.

Byron asked again, "Martin, do you want me to be separated from your mom? Or do you want your Uncle Jerry to be your stepfather?"

Martin said, "Uncle Jerry is good. He can play games with me every day, and he can also teach me some codes."

Byron felt very worried. "He can play games with you, and so can I. As for the code, I think I am superior to him, for example, the positioning applet last time..."

Martin was a little interested in his words because until now, he couldn't figure out how Byron implanted the applet.

"I can't control what Mother thinks." Martin's attitude was obviously soft.

Byron became relaxed a little bit and said, "Martin, I'm not asking you to change your mother's mind. I just hope you can tell me the destination when you and your mom are out at night."

Seeing that Martin didn't respond, Byron continued, "It's not safe for women to hang out at night, especially a beautiful woman like your mother."

When Byron said this, what appeared in Martin's mind was the scene in which his mother would put the leather shoes that his father left in the LO apartment at the door every day.

At that time, he asked his mother curiously why did she place his father's shoes out?

His mother told him, "Other people will think that Dad is also at home, and we will be safer."

Because of this, Martin felt that Byron's words were quite reasonable.

Martin looked at Byron eagerly and asked, "If I tell you where we are, will you tell me the code of the applet that day?"

Byron thought that it would take several hours for Martin to agree to him, but he didn't expect Martin to change his thoughts so quickly. Therefore, Byron smiled out of satisfaction.

Byron replied, "Of course, I will tell you, and I will teach you some other tricks."

Martin stretched out his little finger.

Byron was stunned for a moment, then quickly stretched out his little finger to hook Martin's finger, which was the symbol of reaching an agreement.

When the father and son reached an agreement, a wealthy businessman came up and toasted Byron.

However, just when Byron took the glass of wine from the man, a slender hand stretched out to take the wine glass from Byron's hand...

Chapter 954 Do You Care About Me?

This action made Byron, Martin, and even the rich businessman who had toasted just now look at the owner of that hand in astonishment.

Cora looked at them with a slight smile, and the beautiful goblet fell into her white and slender hands. It seemed that the goblet became more crystal and attractive.

Byron didn't know why Cora did this, but he was in an inexplicably good mood.

His deep eyes were even tinged with a feeling of a smile.

The rich businessman wanted to get angry at first. It was an important thing for him to have a toast with Mr. Hansen, but he was prevented by a woman.

But when he saw that the woman was Cora, the wealthy businessman was suddenly a little confused.

Looking at the gentle smile on Byron's face, the wealthy businessman suddenly felt that the rumor that they had broken up was wrong.

It was clear that they loved each other.

When the rich businessman was stunned, Cora smiled and said, "Mr. Hansen has been ill recently.

Why don't I drink this wine instead of him?"

The rich businessman dared not let the woman who was gazed at affectionately by Mr. Hansen drink.

He quickly refused, "It's okay. I will wait for Mr. Hansen to recover, and then I can drink with him."

Byron appreciated this man's emotional quotient, so he answered the questions this man had just asked.

Since the doubts of the wealthy businessman were answered, he left after expressing his gratitude.

As soon as the rich businessman left, Cora put the glass of wine in her hand on the waiter's tray.

Cora said, "Don't drink if you have a bad stomach. You are not as healthy as teenagers. It's not necessary for you to be reminded about that."

After saying these words, Cora took Martin's hand and left together.

Byron was overjoyed. He quickly grabbed her wrist and brought her back into his arms.

He asked, "Cora, do you care about me?"

Cora showed an indifferent attitude to him when she was in Georgia's lounge just now, which made him very desperate.

In a flash, she cared about his health again.

Although Byron didn't know what was going on, he was in an inexplicably good mood.

"I just don't want people to criticize me that your stomach condition was not good because my cold attitude made you overdrink."

Cora still showed a cold expression. She did not even look at Byron.

But when Byron looked at her pretty side face, he couldn't help but smile.

Byron said, "Cora, I know you care about me. That's good. Let's take it easy. Everything will be fine."

Afraid that he would be happy in vain, Cora hesitated for a moment before pulling her hand out of his palm...

After the off-duty time of the next day, all the Hansen Group employees left the company one after another, but Byron was still sitting in the office.

After Cora and Martin left him, he didn't know where to go after getting off work every day.

At first, he wanted to have a drink with Harry, but Cora's words were deeply remembered in his mind.

Therefore, he ignored the message of having a drink together sent by Harry just now.

However, Byron didn't know where he should go.

But at this moment, a sentence popped up on his computer screen: [Mom is going to attend the alumni meeting tonight.]

Byron cheered up immediately.

It seemed that yesterday's alliance was useful.

Martin started to tell him where Cora was going.

Byron immediately operated the computer and asked Martin about the address of the alumni association by means of code.

Martin gave the address very readily but also reminded: [Don't appear too suddenly, or mom will suspect me.]

Byron replied: [I'll go with Uncle Harry, pretending to meet by chance.]

Chapter 955 What Are You Laughing At?

As the sunlight weakened, after Cora came out of the medical clinic, she went straight to a hotel.

At this time, many people gathered in the hall, such as Tyler, Matt, and Sally.

When Sally saw Cora, she was so happy that she threw herself into Cora's arms.

They chatted as soon as they met, and Sally got straight to the point. "Did Mr. Hansen really cheat? I don't think he is a jerk like that, but there is too much gossip outside. I am worried about you."

When she was watching videos in Grakrord City before, she had seen a lot of analysis of Byron's thoughts.

At that time, she wished she could fly over directly and ask Cora to clarify.

However, it was impossible for her to come over immediately because she was about to give birth at that time.

Cora said, "He didn't cheat. He was in the hospital." Cora then told Sally what happened during this period.

Sally said, "I happened to give birth at that time. Otherwise, I would have come directly to accompany you, and you wouldn't be so sad."

But Cora said, "It's over now."

Cora didn't want to continue this topic and soon asked Sally about her baby and her husband.

It turned out that the man whom Sally was about to marry before was the bad man who had been seducing her and making her think she was cheating.

But after Sally became pregnant, the man took the initiative to stand up and take responsibility, and everything was fine.

Tyler reminded, "If you keep chatting, we'll almost eat up everything."

Seeing that they were chatting all the time, Tyler couldn't help reminding them to eat quickly.

Cora and Sally joined their conversation, eating and drinking together.

In the middle of the dinner, when Cora was going to the bathroom, Sally's cell phone rang just in time.

So, Cora went to the bathroom alone.

She didn't expect that when she came out of the women's bathroom and was washing her hands on the public sink, someone from the sink on the other side came up and washed hands.

Cora focused on cleaning every corner of her fingers with hand sanitizer, without even raising her head, but she vaguely felt that there was a man beside her, who was tall and strong.

Well, the cologne on his body was the same type as Byron's, and it smelled equally charming when combined with the smell of tobacco.

Cora couldn't help but glance at the man's long fingers, which were being rinsed under the faucet, and found that the ring this man was wearing was the same as Byron's.

Even his hands look as charming as Byron's.

Cora couldn't help laughing, wondering if she was influenced by Georgia's words, which made her always think of Byron inexplicably.

But at this moment, a familiar male voice came from one side. "What are you laughing at?"

Cora's movements faltered.

She recognized that the voice belonged to Byron.

She raised her head suddenly and saw Byron looking down at her from above.

In a pair of deep eyes, there was a feeling of a smile, which was very attractive.

Cora came back to her sense in confusion and asked, "Why are you here?"

Byron answered, "Harry and I made an appointment to have dinner here. I came over to wash my hands and saw you giggling here."

He explained calmly, without the urgency of waiting anxiously in the hall just now.

Byron did explain everything thoroughly, but Cora always felt that something was wrong.

Byron asked, "Why are you here? Isn't your car sent for maintenance? I'll take you back later."

Byron saw Cora thinking and asked her again.

Cora answered, "I'm here to attend the alumni association. Sally will take a taxi with me later." She tactfully rejected Byron.

Byron was about to say something when Matt suddenly came to the bathroom.

Matt stared at Byron's figure, and suddenly he thought something!

He remembered where he had seen Byron before.

Chapter 956 For Sake of Cora?

Matt yelled, "I know where I've seen you before!"

Matt's exclamation made both Cora and Byron pay attention to him.

Cara said, "Matt, he is Mr. Hansen. You must have seen him often in the news. And you have met him several times before."

Cora didn't take it seriously and explained to Matt with a smile.

On the other hand, Byron stood quietly on the side, waiting for Cora to communicate with Matt patiently.

Given Byron's status, he could not have been so humble.

Matt was Cora's senior brother, and he had taken good care of Cora before, so Byron was willing to treat Matt kindly.

He didn't expect that Matt would say, "I know he is Mr. Hansen, your husband. But what I want to say is that I remembered seeing him at our school's scholarship awarding ceremony before!"

Cora was shocked. She glanced at Byron and said, "Matt, your memory must have been wrong. Byron finished his university life abroad. How could you have seen him at the scholarship award ceremony?"

Matt said, "He's not a student at our school, but I actually saw him at the scholarship ceremony because he was there as a guest of honor."

When Matt said this, Byron seemed to think of something deeply.

But Cora's attention was all on Matt, and she didn't realize it temporarily. She smiled and said, "How is it possible? I am a person who receives a scholarship every year, and I have never seen him go up to the podium to present awards."

Matt said, "He really sat in the area where the award presenters were. I used to be a cadre of the student union and was responsible for receiving them. I really met him. He is... he is the founder of Sunda Group."

Matt finally remembered everything. "Yes, he is the founder of Sunda Group, and most of the scholarships in our school at that time were provided by him."

Cora still showed an expression of disbelief. "No, no, Matt, you remembered wrongly. Although he is indeed related to Sunda Group, he is only the person in charge of the domestic Sunda Group."

While they were arguing endlessly, Tyler came out of the hall.

Seeing the three of them at the bathroom door, Tyler also hurried over.

Tyler asked, "Byron, are you here to look for Cora? I wondered just now why she didn't come back after coming out for so long."

Byron answered, "Harry and I were having dinner here, and we just happened to meet."

Byron's expression was slightly cold, which made Tyler a little puzzled. "What are you talking about?"

Matt seemed to have found an ally and asked, "Tyler, you also met Mr. Hansen in the awarding guest area, right?"

Tyler was confused and asked, "What?"

Cora explained, "Matt said firmly that he had seen Byron at our school's scholarship award ceremony before and that he was the founder of Sunda Group. I was explaining to him that Byron was only the person in charge of the domestic region..."

Tyler heard the words, Sunda Group and then thought of the time when Sunda Group donated a huge scholarship to the college, which happened to be the beginning of the year of Cora's enrollment.

Tyler suddenly thought of a sentence that described the summer scene, "Summer is when the sun shines, and the butterflies dance with the flowers."

Tyler looked at Byron suddenly. His eyes were full of shock and disbelief.

Therefore, from establishing Sunda Group to donating a large sum of money to their medical college as a scholarship. Were these things all for Cora's sake?

From the beginning, Byron's target was Cora.

Chapter 957 Change a Wife?

But under Tyler's gaze, Byron's expression became unnatural.

At that moment, Tyler knew that he was right...

After a while, Tyler stopped Matt discussing and said, "Alright, come back with me for a drink. I can't stand it anymore."

But Matt muttered, "I can't drink alcohol. And if this issue can't be discussed, I'm afraid I won't be able to fall asleep today."

But Tyler didn't care about it and dragged Matt towards the direction of the hall. "If you can't sleep, I'll make you a few more drinks."

Matt was finally dragged back to the hall by Tyler.

Seeing Matt's return, the alumni began to drag him to drink together.

However, Matt couldn't help but ask Tyler while drinking, "Are you really giving up Cora?"

Matt thought Tyler dragged him away to give Byron and Cora a chance to be alone.

So he also said, "Let me tell you. If you like Cora, you'd better keep chasing her. I always feel that Mr.

Hansen seems to conceal many things without telling Cora."

For example, Byron was the award presenter of their college, and Matt confirmed that he remembered correctly.

Byron could have answered the question which whether he was the award presenter in one sentence.

Byron didn't say anything. He just watched Matt arguing with Cora...

In addition, a few days ago, there were various reports of Byron's cheating on the Internet.

Matt felt that this kind of scumbag was not good enough for Cora.

However, Tyler told Matt, "Even if Byron concealed many things, I would accept the fact that Cora chose him."

Tyler always thought that he had known Cora the longest and had the deepest affection, so he was the best choice for Cora.

But now it seemed that he was not the one who loved Cora the most from the beginning.

It wasn't him who gave his whole love to her.

Thinking about it now, he felt that Cora was right to choose Byron...

Matt asked, "What do you mean? You make me confused!"

Matt felt that Tyler's words were ambiguous, which made him feel puzzled.

Tyler answered, "You don't need to understand too much. Let's enjoy our drink tonight."

Tyler raised his wine glass and clinked glasses with Matt...

On the other side, Cora saw that Tyler and Matt had gone back to the hall, and she wanted to follow them.

But Byron stopped her. "Cora, shall I send you and Sally back later?"

"No, we made an appointment to take a taxi." Cora still hadn't figured out how to face this man.

Then, she left.

Byron looked at the figure of Cora walking away quickly and sighed softly. He wondered, "Aren't you curious at all about what Matt said?"

In fact, he had already prepared everything just now. If Cora took the initiative to ask him, he would tell her.

But in the end, Cora still didn't ask him for confirmation, so he didn't know what to do.

Feeling upset, he returned to the hall where Harry was in.

Harry asked, "What's wrong? It seems that I fail to be the excuse of your presence."

When Harry saw Byron coming back alone, he knew that tonight's meal was in vain.

Harry asked, "Why don't you just change a wife?"

Even though Harry's proposal was rejected by Byron immediately, he continued to say, "After I experienced a failed marriage, I feel that there is nothing indispensable."

He added, "I remember you liked a girl from the medical college very much before. There was an awards ceremony in that college, and you even went back to participate in that ceremony. I think that you'd better choose that girl as your wife..."

Chapter 958 Planned for a Long Time

Byron sneered, then grabbed his glass and wanted to drink.

But when the wine reached his lips, he suddenly remembered something and put the glass back in a daze.

Seeing this scene, Harry couldn't help asking him, "Why don't you drink?"

"I promised Cora that I won't drink any more recently," Byron replied calmly this time.

Harry made a series of disgusting noises and said, "It's not good for you to obey Cora's words like this.

Women are very rebellious. If you treat her too well, she usually won't treat you well."

Jane was like this.

Even if he gave her everything, she would not even want to have his child in the end.

Harry even thought that if Jane was willing to give birth to their child, no matter how big a mistake she made later, he would do his best to protect her and take her away.

But some women were so heartless.

After so many years, he still hadn't moved her.

"You should go to the girl from back then now and let Cora know that she can't handle you."

Harry was sitting here by himself just now. He was already drunk.

This kind of buoyant feeling was good. He was relaxed.

Even if she didn't get a response from Byron, he could still talk and laugh by himself, "That girl was so nice back then. I heard that she got a scholarship every year, and she was still the favorite of their medical school..."

In those years, when Byron returned, Harry would always take him to play together.

So Harry also knew that Byron was interested in a girl from medical school.

But Byron was tight-lipped. He didn't mention a single word about the girl's specific information.

They only knew roughly that the girl's academic performance was good. Every time Byron went back, it was just to attend her scholarship ceremony.

But when it came to this, he couldn't help but compare the girl Byron liked with Cora.

"The girl is an eight-year medical student in the medical school. What about Cora?"

This time, Byron, who had been keeping an indifferent face, finally responded, "School of Medicine, an eight-year medical student."

Harry sobered up a lot.

Because he suddenly remembered that at the dinner held by the Yoris family when Cora came back, Sara had always praised Cora for her excellent academic performance. She completed her studies with the scholarship she received.

So not only did Cora have the same grades as the girl Byron liked, but even the school she attended was the same.

Suddenly, Harry had a bad thought. "Could Cora be that girl from back then?"

This time, Byron answered, "I am not sentimental."

The words shocked Harry so much that he couldn't speak for a while.

It took a long time before he said, "So, is Cora the girl back then?"

Byron didn't respond again this time. It could be regarded as an answer.

As a result, Harry became more active.

"So when Eason just broke off the engagement with Cora that day, you deliberately took me to the bar to drink. Your purpose has always been Cora, right?"

Harry still remembered the day when he ran into Byron, holding Cora and kissing her out of control!

It turned out that it was not a sudden decision that day, but had been planned for a long time...

Chapter 959 Attend in Person

When Byron heard Harry mention the past, he thought of his first formal contact with Cora...

That day when he learned that Cora was refused, he never thought that he would intervene in her life so soon.

However, in the bar at that time, she was so charming. Countless men cast their eyes on her, looking eager to try.

At that time, Byron looked at that scene and felt that if he didn't do anything, he could only watch her in Eason's arms as before.

So that day, he went to Cora's side regardless of everything and made those who were waiting for the opportunity to seduce Cora retreat to the side.

Byron didn't expect that his original intention was to drive away the men around Cora.

Who knew that Cora was so proactive that day, hugging his waist and igniting that night...

Afterward, every time Byron recalled what happened that day, he was grateful that he took the initiative to go up.

Otherwise, he could only watch others take her back.

After that beautiful night, Cora's motivation to take advantage of him for revenge was too obvious. Of course, he couldn't be so humble to help her.

That was why he rejected Cora at that time. And that was why so many things happened later.

"Byron, how can you be so calm? You like her so much, and you can still watch Cora fall in love with your nephew?"

Harry was still emotional.

But Byron only said, "Can I stop her when she took the initiative to find a boyfriend?"

Harry said, "If it were me, I would take the chance no matter if she is active or passive!"

Then, Harry proposed again, "I think taking advantage of this relationship is a good opportunity for reunion. No woman will not be moved if she knows that she has been silently guarded for so many years."

Byron didn't make a sound and seemed to disapprove of Harry's proposal.

Harry simply complained, "During cremation, your mouth will not be able to burn. It's so stubborn!"

Byron said, "I'm just thinking about the success rate of doing this."

"Regardless of the probability of success, I think we must try it. Do you want to watch Jerry sleep with your wife and beat your son?"

As soon as Harry finished speaking, Byron immediately threw the cigarette at him, then got up and left.

"Damn it, my white suit! This is what I just bought..."

Harry was still cursing and sweeping the cigarette away.

After Byron left the room, he waited at the gate for Cora and the others to end their party. At the same time, he thought about what Harry said just now and felt that it was right.

So, before Cora showed up, he called Carter, "Tomorrow, I will attend the new product launch conference of Sunda Group in person!"

Carter didn't take it seriously. "As the person in charge of the domestic branch? I see. I'll prepare a speech."

Because all along, Byron had only declared to the outside as the domestic director of Sunda Group.

After he finished speaking, he was about to hang up the phone.

But at this time, Byron suddenly said, "No, I will attend as the president of Sunda Group."

On the other side of the phone, Carter was surprised.

However, he also seemed to understand why Byron made such an arrangement suddenly and quickly replied, "Okay, I will prepare it."

So, five minutes after the two of them ended the phone call, all major media sent a newsletter:

[Tomorrow at eight o'clock, the founder of Sunda Group will attend the new product launch conference of the branch in New York.]

Chapter 960 An Invitation Card

The party of Cora and the others was coming to an end. They were about to pay the bill and leave.

At this time, Matt took out his mobile phone to check the time and happened to see the news.

For a while, Matt exclaimed, "Cora, look! Tomorrow morning, the founder of Sunda Group will attend the press conference of the branch in New York."

"What?" Sally was busy talking on the phone before and didn't know about the discussion between Matt and Cora. She came up curiously and took a look at Matt's phone.

But after seeing the complete content of the newsletter above, Sally was stunned.

"What does the founder of Sunda Group have to do with Cora? Her husband... Her ex-husband is just the domestic director of Sunda Group."

Sally said.

But Matt said, "No, Mr. Hansen is not just the domestic director. He is the founder of Sunda Group!

When we were in college, he provided scholarships."

"No, why don't we remember this?" Sally wondered.

Matt looked at her directly. "You were not a member of the student union at the time, and you didn't receive a scholarship. How could you know this?"

Sally was so angry. She walked towards Matt, waving her fist. "You know too much. Be careful!"

Matt and Sally quarreled for a while, then rushed to Cora.

"Cora, I think you should pay attention to this press conference tomorrow. There must be an answer you didn't expect."

Cora wondered, "Even if he is the founder of Sunda Group, he doesn't seem to have anything to do with me."

They hadn't reconciled now. No matter how rich Byron was, it had nothing to do with her.

But Matt said, "But don't you think he has lied to you so much and has other motives?"

When Cora was about to say something, Tyler came up to him. "Cora, Matt is drunk. Please ignore him. How are you and Sally going? I can send you off."

"My mother called just now and said that she would send a car to pick me up and Sally. And she let Sally stay at my house tonight." Cora said.

"Then I'll take Matt back here. Tell me when you get home." After Tyler arranged everything, he pulled Matt away.

Matt didn't want to leave now and was still talking to Tyler, "Why didn't you let me explain it to Cora?

You thought my analysis made sense just now!"

"Sooner or later, Cora will know his affection, so we shouldn't get involved in it." Tyler said.

"His affection? What affection?" Matt asked.

The latter words, as the two walked away, could not be heard.

Cora watched Tyler and the others leave and left with Sally.

Just when they came out of the hotel, Cora saw the slender figure leaning on the side of the car.

Byron was smoking a cigarette. The smoke enveloped him, adding a bit of gloom.

But the moment when he saw Cora, his eyes suddenly lit up. All the haze was instantly dispelled.

He strolled towards Cora with a smile on his face.

Sally couldn't help but say, "As expected of Mr. Hansen, he is so charming."

But after sighing, Sally said again, "Cora, I don't mean to sleep with him. I just think it's a pity that you broke up."

"You..." Cora was speechless.

At this time, Byron had already come to the two of them. "Can I send you back?"

"No need. My mother sent a driver over." Cora said.

Byron nodded and then took out an invitation card from his pocket...