

Chapter 14 She brought him many surprises

On their first meeting, he had already calculated the whole family. Ember thought that she had met an weird person today.

At this moment, her nominal husband sitting at the table seemed to be surrounded by several women.

She didn't even have the energy to deal with this blind date.

"To be honest, my ex-boyfriend broke up with me mainly because he disliked my poor family and also because I liked to buy lottery tickets and owed over 100,000 dollars in debt."

"Over 100,000 dollars?"

As expected, the face of the blind date man changed dramatically. He never expected that the woman sitting in front of him looked pretty good, but had such a bad habit of buying lottery tickets.

"Don't worry, I borrowed 30,000 dollars from my colleague and bought a lot today." Seeing his unpleasant expression, Ember pretended to be indifferent and even showed a sly expression on her face. "If I win the lottery today, I can repay the over 100,000 yuan debt at once. But recently, they have been urging me to repay the debt, and all my money has been invested in lottery tickets. If you are willing to lend me some money first, as long as I win in the new lottery tickets, I will repay you immediately. You can trust me."

Ember deliberately rambled on, and because of what she said, the face of the blind date man changed several times.

"Miss William, I suddenly remembered that I have something to do, so I have to leave now."

Without waiting for her to finish speaking, the blind date man interrupted her and found an excuse to leave in a hurry.

"Why are you so hurry? We haven't finished the dinner!" Ember deliberately asked.

The blind date man deliberately omitted the word "urgent," picked up his briefcase and ran towards the door.

Alexander watched as the blind date man fled and even fell at the door of the coffee shop. He couldn't help but laugh out loud, but choked on his own laughter.

As he choked, the women whom he had just brushed off had caught up to him again.

The blind date man was gone, and now it was time for him and his new wife. However, these chicks around him showed no sign of leaving. Helplessly, he had to turn to his wife for help.

Ember did not expect the blind date man to run away so quickly and even fall at the door. His embarrassed appearance made her very happy. She couldn't help but laugh, but then she heard someone next to her say, "Wife, I'm sorry for cheating on you. You shouldn't have gone out on a blind date behind my back."

Wife.

As soon as Alexander spoke, the gazes of the women surrounding him turned to Ember in unison.

Ember glanced at Alexander, then at the hateful glares shot at her by those women around him, suddenly realizing that he was talking to her.

She glanced at the women around him and understood his means immediately. She didn't want to help him with something like driving away these chicks, but since she had made a mistake first, she had to make amends for it.

To make it more believable, she immediately put on a look of a resentful woman, pointing at Alexander with a pitiful expression, "How can you say that about me? In just a few days, not only did you gamble away all the money at home, but you also owe more than a million in debts. What, does I been so foolish that I would still spend my life with you?"

A gambling addict.

Over a million in debts.

No matter how handsome a man is, no woman likes a man without money and burdened with huge debts.

Before Ember could say anything else, the women around Alexander had already scattered like birds, even the female server had disappeared without a trace.

First, Ember herself owed tens of thousands of yuan from buying lottery tickets.

Then, Alexander, this gambling addict, gambled away all the money at home and owed more than a million in external debts.

Her ability to scare away weirdos is ever-increasing. Alexander thought.

Alexander stifled a laugh and raised his eyebrows.

On this occasion of meeting today, his new wife seemed to have brought him quite a bit of surprise.

However, since she had clearly married him, did she need to give him a reasonable explanation for going on blind dates behind his back?

He looked at her with his dark eyes fixedly, the smile in his eyes had long disappeared, and his expression had become increasingly serious.

"I have something to say."

"I have something to say."

When their eyes met, they even spoke in unison.

Alexander suppressed his doubts about her being married and going on blind dates and gentlemanly gestured to her, "Alright, ladies first."

Even though they were only legally married now, Ember still felt very guilty about what she had done to him by going on blind dates behind his back.

He didn't ask, but she felt that she needed to give him an explanation.

♡ (39)

💬 (2)

