

Chapter 37 Chairman's Plea

Alexander shook his head helplessly as he watched his woman at the doorway vanish.

He anticipated her level of shyness.

He had packed her a yogurt and a sandwich in her suitcase so that she wouldn't leave hungry.

Ember hastily retrieved her phone from her purse as soon as she exited the building.

When she checked it, she saw numerous missed calls from Sarah, the chairman's assistant, as well as a few calls from her friends and coworkers.

"Hello, Ember, hurry up and come to the company. Regarding the altercation between you and Rose yesterday, the chairman has been looking for you multiple times this morning through Sarah, and it seems like the chairman is quite irate since it's already noon, and you haven't shown up."

Ember also had some apprehension after hearing this.

"Do you know what the chairman wants to discuss with me specifically?"

"I'm not aware of the specifics, but I heard that Rose is still being held at the police station despite the chairman and Rose's family utilizing several contacts to try to have her released."

Ember was astonished to hear her colleague's remarks over the phone, and her lips immediately opened.

She realized she hadn't even questioned him about his role in the release Rose.

She looked through her contact list to get his phone number in response to these inquiries.

When she spotted his phone number and wanted to contact him to ask, an image from today's bathroom suddenly flashed across her head.

She decided to let it go when her cheeks once more went crimson.

Ember was aware of the wounds on her face before entering the organization.

She got to the company in a hurry. Sarah was there to meet her.

" Director William, our chairman needs to speak with you right away. Please report to his office."

" I'll go immediately."

Ember didn't even have time to take a breath after getting Sarah's notification. She entered the chairman's office right away.

The chairman's office was located on the top floor of their building. On her way there, her mind uncontrollably wandered to her undercover husband, Alexander, and how he might be involved in this matter.

However, even if he had orchestrated everything, she didn't want to figure it out at the moment.

Rose certainly didn't expect her to end up like this. Someone like her should stay inside for a few more days and experience the consequences of her actions.

Ember stopped at the door of the chairman's office, took a deep breath, and then knocked before entering.

"Sir, you wanted to see me?"

Facing her boss, despite all the accumulated grievances she had towards him on ordinary days, Ember put on a smiling face.

"Director William, you finally came. Please have a seat."

As soon as Ethan Miller, who was also Rose's uncle, saw her, he jumped up from his office chair with a smile on his face. His attitude towards Ember was even warmer than when dealing with a million-dollar deal.

Ethan's attitude surprised Ember.

"Sir, did you call me regarding Rose?" Ember went straight to the point.

"Rose's matter is not important. The reason I called you today is because I heard that you were injured. I just wanted to take a look at your injuries. Seeing the large piece of gauze on your face, I can tell it's quite serious without uncovering it. But don't worry, the company will not only fully reimburse your medical expenses as a work-related injury, but also provide a substantial amount as compensation for your mental distress."

Ethan's attitude made Ember transition from surprise to shock.

The saying goes, "Every merchant is a scoundrel," and Ethan was the best scoundrel among scoundrels.

He had always been a tightwad, but today he suddenly became so generous. There must be something behind it.

Realizing this, Ember smiled knowingly. "Sir, if you have something to discuss with me, please be direct. There's no need to beat around the bush."

"The company has been spreading rumors about Director William's kindness and grace. Now that I see you, it's true that you are an insightful person." After speaking, Ethan's smiling face suddenly turned serious. "Regarding you and Rose's matter, my sister only has one daughter Rose. She has been pampered since childhood, and I know her temperament well. If she has offended you in any way, please be more forgiving."

From the moment Ember entered the room, the Ethan she saw was not the same Ethan as before.

Previously, he would occasionally use soft words with her on some client matters, but he had never stooped so low.

Today, he had completely thrown self-esteem to the wind.

"Sir, Rose and I were not only college classmates but also roommates. We have had a relationship for many years. While she may be a bit spoiled, I have never held it against her. Not in the past, nor yesterday."
