Chapter 332 It's weird if you don't get sick

"However, I think that the girl who was assassinated but was safe and sound must have some ability. Your Majesty, let's take a look first.

"Um."

The great prince responded lightly.

"I hope it's useful."

After a while, the housekeeper hurriedly brought Lin Caisang over.

"Ms. Langzhong, this is the eldest prince. Come and meet him." When the housekeeper saw the eldest prince, he quickly turned to Lin Caisang and said.

"I have met the great prince."

Lin Caisang glanced at the eldest prince indifferently and didn't say anything. Instead, he looked at the nanny beside him who was wearing navy blue clothes.

"Is this the nanny next to the eldest princess? Could you please lead the way?"

The Great Prince: "..."

Where did the girl come from, didn't she take him seriously?

After all, he is also the eldest prince of the Liang Kingdom. Is he actually being despised by a little girl?

The housekeeper was standing next to Lin Caisang. Seeing that she was so bold, he was so frightened that he didn't dare to take a breath.

Mammy also glanced at the eldest prince in embarrassment, thinking that this girl is really a good-natured one.

She had also heard about the fact that Lin Caisang was made things difficult for the Second Prince yesterday. It was said that the lady of the doctor had nothing nice to say about the people around the Second Prince. It was because she was made things difficult for the Second Prince yesterday that she felt that she was not like the royal people. I have nothing to say, so I want to just diagnose the eldest princess's illness and leave, right?

"My lord, this..."

"Aunt Bai, take the girl to my aunt's room. I will be waiting here." The prince did not feel that Lin Caisang was making things difficult for him, and directly ordered to Aunt Bai.

"Yes, Your Majesty."

Aunt Bai let out a breath and turned to look at Lin Caisang.

"Ms. Langzhong, please come with me."

...

The eldest princess's room no longer had the scent of books and flowers. Because of a lingering illness, it had an extra ray of yin energy. Then there was the strong smell of medicine, which made Lin Caisang frown.

"Aunt Bai, please ask someone to open the window in this room. No matter how energetic a person is, he will become sick if he is exposed to such an unpleasant smell for a long time."

She ordered to Aunt Bai.

"Is this... okay?"

Aunt Bai hesitated and asked cautiously.

"Of course you can. It's also very important to keep the air in the room fresh every day." Lin Caisang nodded and said very definitely.

If she were in such an environment, she would probably feel uncomfortable all over her body within a few days. It would be strange if she didn't get sick over time.

"Yes, I will order someone to open the window now."

Aunt Bai responded, and soon several maids came in and opened the windows one after another. The bright sunshine came in, and the breeze took away the smell in the room, which was refreshing.

Lin Caisang walked slowly behind the screen and saw Aunt Bai lifting the quilt a little to reveal the eldest princess's arm, placing a piece of silk cloth on her wrist, and then looked at her.

"Ms. Langzhong, please diagnose the eldest princess's pulse."

"Um."

Lin Caisang walked over and sat down on the stool next to the bed.

In fact, Ya Molian had already told her before that the poison the eldest princess was poisoned was a chronic poison called gangrene. She had read the most basic poison book in the Jinzhu Space, and it contained records.

She still knows how to solve it.

But just in case, she still had to check her pulse, and she also wanted to show it to Aunt Bai, who was watching beside her.

However, when she put her hand on the eldest princess's wrist, her expression suddenly turned cold, and she couldn't help but frown, and then felt the pulse carefully.
