Chapter 489 A hot potato

The land here may not even have a place to set foot during the rainy season, so everyone thinks it is too waterlogged. Even if the crops grown here will not die in the dry season, no one is willing to do so. purchase.

Moreover, there are no villages here, and there are no villagers to buy land. They can only rely on the wealthy businessmen in the county to buy land. Naturally, no one cares about it.

Last but not least, Miss Lin, I would also like to advise you to think about it. Wild wolves and wild boars often appear here, which is quite unsafe. Not to mention those wild wolves in groups, which can destroy trees one by one. The knocked down wild boar sounds scary. "

"Um."

Lin Caisang nodded.

Wild boar? Wild wolf? So what are you afraid of? Once the wall is built stronger, tigers won't have to be afraid, right?

"How big is it here?" she asked.

"What?"

The official was stunned again when he heard her question.

Those people who wanted to buy land before were brought here by him to take a look. They were all satisfied and were scared to run away by his few words.

But the key point is that these few words cannot be ignored. His predecessor was killed because he didn't tell anyone clearly when he sold the land, but the person who bought the land still had some connections. If you hold on tight, your official position will be lost.

The land was returned to the county.

If he doesn't say anything now, when the buyer finds out later, he will still be the one to suffer. Who knows who is supporting those ordinary people who look like they are wearing ordinary clothes.

With the lessons learned from the past, no one would dare to slack off when buying land now.

"I said, how big is the area here...how many acres of land are there." Lin Caisang asked again when he saw that he didn't understand.

"Uh, this..."

In fact, he was shocked after he understood what Lin Caisang said.

"If a whole piece of land is sold here, there will be a lot of land. It must be more than 3,000 acres. At that time, my previous official came to measure it. I have to go back to the county to check the details."

He thought for a moment and said.

"Are they all three acres?" Lin Caisang asked again.

"Yes, they are all three to two acres," the official replied.

"Miss Lin, do you want to buy them all? If you really want to buy them all, I can go to the Ming County Grand Master and give you a discount. What do you think?"

He tentatively asked Lin Caisang.

Lin Caisang: "..."

This official is so interesting that he even changed the word 'you' to 'you' for these places.

It can be seen that these lands are still a hot potato in his hands, but it is just these lands. Even if they cannot be sold, they should not be a hot potato, right?

But the way she looked at him, it was clear that he was.

"Sir, is there anything else you haven't told me about this land?" She couldn't help but ask.

Don't look back. If she buys it back and causes any subsequent disputes, the gain will outweigh the loss.

"Hehe, hehe."

The official smiled guiltily when he heard her question.

"To be honest, Miss Lin, speaking of this land, it has some connection with my predecessor. It was because of this land that Mr. Lao Dan was dismissed from his post by the county magistrate."

"Huh?" Lin Caisang raised his eyebrows.

"It's like this. There was a wealthy businessman who just moved to the county and wanted to buy a piece of land. The old man brought his people here. At first, he didn't explain the situation here, including the wild beasts in the mountains and the rainy season. There's nothing I can do about it.
