Chapter 505: Can't Hold a Rabbit

Lin Chushui would be here when he had nothing to do. He would pick some wild fruits from the mountains and make them into dried fruit, just like Lin picking mulberries, and then learn some calligraphy from Lin Changfeng while having dinner with Lin Changfeng.

When Ya Molian arrived, the two of them were having breakfast, and they were a little surprised to see him.

"Brother Mo Lian, why are you here?"

Lin Changfeng put down the bowl in his hand and asked Ya Molian.

"You came early today. Sangsang hasn't come up the mountain yet. He is probably still asleep at home."

Hearing this, Ya Molian's face suddenly turned black. That girl was nowhere to be found sleeping. She was no longer around at home. He only came up to Menghuang Mountain after hearing Lin Changhong's words!

But right now, there is no sign of the little girl on the mountain. Where will she go?

His face darkened even more as he thought about where she would go.

"While you are eating, I just thought Sangsang was here, so I came here to ask. She asked me to catch some quails for her when she went to the mountain. Since no one is here, I will catch them first."

He explained to the two of them, turned around and left.

Nei Lin is the real Nei Lin.

Lin Caisang raised his hands to push aside the dense leaves and squinted at the road.

It's good to come to the inner forest. You don't even need to wear a raincoat. No matter how hard it rains, it will be blocked by the leaves above. In the end, all the rain will just flow down the trees.

Moreover, even if the rain really fell on her body, she could no longer wear a bamboo hat or a raincoat, because it would hinder her sight and make her unable to see anything.

Even the rainy weather could not shake the determination of the animals in the inner forest to come out to look for food. As she walked, she had already caught several wild rabbits, pheasants, and quails, all of which she threw into the pasture space.

As the leaves grew thicker and denser, she felt that it was almost impossible to move even an inch under her feet.

"No wonder Brother Mo Lian didn't let me come. If there were any other people in this place, they would definitely be scared to death. There wouldn't be any animals to catch by then. Only animals would be left to catch her."

While she was talking, she saw a flash of white through the thick thatch, and her eyes suddenly lit up.

"I've been here for so long and all I've seen are gray rabbits. Now I finally see a white rabbit. I have to catch it." She thought to herself, but didn't say it out loud for fear of losing the white rabbit. Scared away.

Gently pushing aside the leaves and thatch, the white mass became more obvious, almost in front of her eyes.

Because of the rain, the rustling sound on the high branches was very loud, which was enough to hide her voice. She took out the net bag that had caught several rabbits before, and then rushed towards the rabbit.

"Ouch!"

One of them didn't pay attention to her steps. The rabbit didn't pounce, but threw herself to the ground. She quickly stood up, raised her hand to pat the slightly wet clothes on her body, and then picked up the net bag.

"It doesn't make sense. Such a long net bag can't hold a rabbit?"

This net bag was specially made by her before, just to catch some smaller animals, such as rabbits, quails, etc. She tried to catch many birds that were parked on the branches. How could she not catch one? A rabbit?

"this....."

She was confused and walked to the place where the rabbit had been just now to see what happened.

But she couldn't see anything, only a large piece of grass. The doubt in her heart was instantly replaced by helplessness. It seemed that God didn't want her to catch this white rabbit, but wanted her to raise gray rabbits. Yes, right?
