

Adorable Twins: Daddy, Stay Away!

Chapter 163 Aloys

It had been a few days since Aloys had returned to Andeport, but as he was busy with his work, he had only had time to see Melissa once, and had not managed to see Lindsey and Merrick at all.

Once he was done with his work, he decided to pick the children up from kindergarten.

He had watched them growing up, after all. He hadn't seen them for a long time now and he missed them.

When the bell rang at the kindergarten, all the children ran to the gates and stood on their tiptoes looking out.

There were teachers there, ensuring that the children did not leave without somebody having arrived to collect them.

Merrick pulled at his sister's coat and whispered, "Get closer to me; otherwise, Mr. and Mrs. Mayfield won't be able to find you."

"I know," Lindsey replied with an unhappy pout. "I won't run off."

At this, Merrick thought he saw something, and craned his neck to see further.

He couldn't just stand there waiting and watching, so he fidgeted constantly, rearranging himself again and again.

"Merrick, what can you see?" Lindsey asked in confusion.

There were so many other children around the twins, but Aloys spotted them at once.

His eyes burst with joy as he waved to them. "Merrick, Lindsey!"

"Mr. Brustin!" they replied simultaneously, as smiles spread over their faces.

Not caring how many people were in their way, they leaped into Aloys' arms.

Chapter 163 Aloys

"Hey, you two have got heavier." Aloys lifted both of them at once with ease. "Tell me, are you still doing what your mother tells you?"

"Yes!" they replied.

"How come you're back, Mr. Brustin?" Merrick wrapped his arms around Aloys' neck and asked excitedly. "How long are you staying? When are you leaving?"

The barrage of questions brought a laugh from Aloys, and he answered each one with consummate patience.

"I'm back because I missed you, and I'm staying for a while."

"Okay."

Merrick was a little disappointed that Aloys would be leaving, but he still felt lucky that Aloys had come back. Had he not, then his mommy might be taken away by Everett soon. Given the choice, Merrick would much rather have Aloys for his father.

He had to help Aloys win his mommy's heart.

Aloys put the children back down on the ground, taking their hands to lead them away.

"Let's go. I'll take you out for food."

Suddenly, two people appeared in front of him, blocking his way.

Vivienne looked at him warily, whipping her phone from her pocket ready to call the police.

"Who are you? And what are you doing with my grandson and granddaughter?"

"Lindsey, Merrick, come to me." Johnny waved his hand, concern blooming over his face, and repeated, "Come here."

Grandson and granddaughter? Aloys frowned at this. "Who are you?"

The twins looked between Vivienne and Johnny, on the one side, and Aloys on the other, torn between the two.

Chapter 163 Aloys

It looked like there had been some kind of misunderstanding.

Lindsey ran to Johnny and Vivienne and smiled sweetly. "Mr. Brustin, meet Mr. Mayfield's parents. They have been taking care of me and my brother."

Merrick said, "And this, Mr. and Mrs. Mayfield, is Aloys Brustin. He helped my mommy while we were living abroad."

After they had been introduced by the twins, their guards were dropped. Vivienne, Johnny and Aloys exchanged greetings, but each one of them still had their reservations.

Just then, a voice cut in, "What are you all doing here?"

Melissa had arrived on the scene.

Chapter 164 Have Dinner Together

Melissa was hesitant.

The situation was embarrassing.

It was her turn to take the day off tomorrow and she could get off work early today, so she informed the nanny that she would pick up the two babies herself. But unexpectedly, Johnny, Vivienne, and Aloys had also come there.

"Melissa." Aloys spoke first. "It's been a while since I returned to the country. I want to spend time with the two children."

"I was going to bring them to see you, Aloys. They were constantly talking about you." Melissa smiled at him.

Johnny and Vivienne were smart. They could understand the two shared an unusual relationship.

Vivienne was alarmed, but she forced a smile.

"Melissa, we have nothing to do, so we came here to pick up the two children. I didn't expect to meet your friend. I have already cooked dinner at home. Why don't we eat together?"

"Yes, let's eat together," Johnny understood his wife's intention and chimed in.

He squatted and pinched Lindsey's chubby cheek. "Lindsey, didn't you say you wanted to eat chicken wings that made by Mrs. Mayfield? She has prepared it for you this time."

"Great! Chicken wings!" Lindsey clapped her hands excitedly.

"I'm not coming." Aloys waved his hand. His handsome face bore no emotion.

He came here for the two children. He had seen them now and didn't want to get involved in the Mayfield family's issue.

Chapter 164 Have Dinner Together

He wanted to stay away from the Mayfield family and Everett.

"Don't refuse. We are all friends," Vivienne said warmly.

She didn't want to question too much about Melissa's private affairs.

However, she wanted to know more about Aloys. The dinner would be a great opportunity for his son to meet his love rival and get ready for a fight so as not to lose Melissa.

Merrick gripped Aloys' hand and pouted. He didn't want the man to leave. "Mr. Brustin, would you like to have dinner with us? It's been a long time since I had dinner with you."

Aloys' heart melted. He squatted before the little boy and comforted him, "Don't worry. When you and Lindsey get a weekend off, I will take you both to the amusement park. Okay?"

"But..." Merrick mumbled.

Lindsey ran to Aloys and held his other hand. "Please come with us."

Melissa looked at her two children and let out a weary sigh.

She could only find the time to explain her current situation to Aloys. But it was impossible for them to go to the Mayfield family's residence.

"How about this? You all come to my house. I've asked the nanny to prepare food. Aloys, let's have dinner together as a way of welcoming you back."

Aloys was touched.

"Okay. That sounds good." He nodded.

"Great!"

The two kids were so happy they were bouncing on the spot with excitement and hugged Aloys from either side.

On their way back, Melissa, the children and Aloys sat in a car.

Johnny and Vivienne followed them in another car, unhappy about the change of plans.

Chapter 164 Have Dinner Together

"Both Lindsey and Merrick are so close to Aloys. They seem to like him more than our son. This isn't good."

"I'm going to text Everett." Johnny took out his phone right away.

Vivienne looked at the car speeding before her and sighed helplessly. "We can't let Melissa marry another man."

She wracked her brain to think of a solution.
