

Chapter 26 Don't Pressure Him

Melissa looked at this charade and scoffed to herself.

She knew it would be hard for these people to leave her alone, particularly Emily. In retrospect, she knew clearly how this woman had landed the position of Mrs. Sherman.

Emily was well-groomed and wore gorgeous makeup today, which revealed that she had been living a comfortable life.

"Let me re-iterate something to you, Mrs. Sherman. Your daughter disregarded my medical advice and drank alcohol in the ward, nearly resulting in serious consequences. She even falsely accused the medical staff. There is much evidence to support these claims," Melissa stated coldly.

After all, she was telling the truth while Arielle was being ridiculous.

Emily was left speechless. She continued to sob on the ground.

When Everett finally came, Arielle sprang to her feet as if she were about to jump from the building.

"Please persuade Arielle to ditch her plan, Everett. She only listens to you," Emily cried out and ran up to Everett quickly, as if the man was the last and best chance to save her daughter from committing such an act. She encircled his waist with her arms while smearing his hand-made suit with snot and tears.

Everett watched her with disgust. His assistant quickly yanked her away from him.

"Mrs. Sherman, don't worry. I'll try to convince her."

Earlier today, Everett was at a meeting when he received a call with this ridiculous news. While he assumed Arielle was making a joke, he wasn't expecting her to cause such a ruckus this time.

"Please stay away, Everett. I no longer want to live. Nobody believes what I say. No one cares about me. I don't see any reason to continue living."

Although Arielle was in a dangerous position on the rooftop, she remained in a safe zone since there was a guardrail behind her.

Melissa gave Everett a sidelong look. If possible, she wanted to get some popcorn as she watched the scenes unfold.

She wondered if this man's brain was malfunctioning in any way. How did he manage to love such a lying bitch for so long? Melissa likewise mocked herself for being so naive as to have loved such an idiot back then.

Everett sensed that someone nearby was gazing at him. He turned his head and stared into a pair of mesmerizing eyes. But all he could see was snark and disgust in them.

It was obvious that the doctor believed that he and Arielle were complete fools.

Everett was perplexed why Arielle resisted medical help. She continued to cause problems for Melly and made sure everyone knew about it.

"Arielle, please step down first. We can resolve this through discussion, regardless of what you want to happen."

Everett was rather frustrated. He frowned, the coldness in his gaze visible. He was more annoyed by this shitshow than he was concerned about Arielle.

Arielle could see by the look in Everett's eyes that he still didn't believe her.

What if he refused to marry her despite his promise if things continued to go this way?

She quickly winked at Emily as she considered this.

Emily immediately knew what her daughter meant after seeing Arielle's expression. She took a few steps forward while faking a fall.

"Don't be too hard on yourself, Arielle. You and Everett will tie the knot someday. You'll then live a happy life and eventually have a child. You can't leave us like this!"

Emily cried and acted worried about her daughter, and then she turned quickly to Everett.

She pleaded, "Everett, you've been in love with Arielle for so long. When are you planning to marry her? Your parents, my husband, and I are no longer young, and we want you to marry and have a child. Do you want her and us to suffer and die?"

Emily looked sad. She pounded her chest while sitting on the ground, and it seemed like she was about to pass out at any moment.

"Don't pressure him, Mom. Everything is my fault."
