

Chapter 318 Fireworks All Over The Sky

The entire bracelet had a light purple color.

Based on the observation that the bracelet felt warm when it made contact with her skin, it was likely to be very costly.

Melissa was shocked and considered removing it.

"I can't accept this. It's too expensive."

"You're being too polite, Melissa," Vivienne insisted, gripping her hand tightly. "I've always regarded you as my daughter, and since you've given birth to Lindsey and Merrick, you deserve it. This bracelet is not nearly as valuable as the years of hard work you've put in. Lindsey and Merrick wouldn't have been so well-behaved if you hadn't raised them so well."

Melissa and Vivienne argued until Melissa gave in, likely because Vivienne was on the verge of tears.

Ultimately, Melissa ended up wearing the bracelet, but she was contemplating how to return it to Vivienne.

Melissa felt grateful to Johnny and Vivienne.

However, it wasn't that she didn't know the boundaries. They wished for her to return to the Mayfield family, but...

Everett appeared to have perceived her thoughts and approached her. "I'll try my best, so don't worry."

"Everett!" Melissa forced a smile and took a step back, feeling helpless. "I'm not sure what you're referring to."

"You know what I mean."

Vivienne witnessed the interaction between the two of them. Without interrupting them, Vivienne proceeded to invite the children to have dinner.

The six of them gathered around a large dining table.

Lindsey desired to sit next to Everett, so the rest of the group had to accommodate her request.

Eventually, Lindsey rubbed her round belly and burped before fixing her gaze on the tall figure beside her with her large eyes.

She tilted her head and asked him a question. "Mr. Mayfield, how come you didn't give my brother and me any gifts?"

"Lindsey," Melissa quietly reminded Lindsey about her manners.

Melissa was bothered by the idea of returning the gift, but Lindsey seemed to request presents from Everett.

Despite Lindsey's focus on gifts, Everett remained composed and calmly set down his fork.

"How could I not have a gift for you? I'll take you to see it later. I promise it'll be a surprise."

"Alright!"

Upon hearing this, Lindsey suddenly became thrilled and eagerly awaited the surprise.

Once everyone had finished their meal, Everett rose and retrieved the car key.

"Let's go. I'll take you to see the present."

"Fantastic!"

The two children darted into the car ahead of the others.

As youngsters, they were exceedingly curious and fond of playing, so Everett's unfinished sentence piqued their interest.

Following a thirty-minute drive, the car stopped on a bridge.

This bridge happened to be the oldest and grandest in Andeport. Despite having only a handful of passing cars, it was a favorite spot among couples.

Today was no different. A sizable group of people had amassed on the bridge.

However, they weren't there for a leisurely stroll or romantic rendezvous. Rather, they appeared to be anticipating something.

With ease, Everett guided the group of five toward the forefront of the bridge and rested his hands on the railings.

Fearing the children might wander, Johnny and Vivienne clasped their hands tightly.

In contrast, Melissa stood idly, requiring no action on her part.

Meanwhile, Everett stood beside her, a peculiar expression in his eyes. "This is a one-of-a-kind gift that everyone in Andeport will witness."

Immediately his words trailed off, and a firework erupted in the distance, illuminating the sky.

Subsequently, a stunning display of fireworks filled the entire expanse of the sky.

Melissa then gazed upward, beholding the spectacle of the fireworks.

It had been years since she witnessed such a grand spectacle, and it left her a little spellbound.

However, a few words suddenly reached her ears in a low and resolute voice.

"I love you, Melissa."

She turned around and locked eyes with a man.

It was Everett. He spoke up and declared his love for her.
