

Chapter 361 Test

Melissa felt anxious in the afternoon after hanging up the phone.

She would constantly check her phone while treating patients.

She was afraid of missing a call, and she was even more scared of getting any bad news when she answered the call.

Suddenly, she noticed a luxury bag on the desk. Her expression darkened as she glanced upward.

"Are you here for a follow-up check-up? Kindly exit and take a left turn."

"Melissa." Arielle took a seat with a gloomy expression.

She spoke in a hushed tone, taking into account the patients standing in the queue outside the office. "Melissa, I'm aware of your contact with Everett's parents. Is the news true? Did something really happen to Everett?"

"I'm sorry, but I'm here to provide medical assistance. If you have any concerns about your health, I'm happy to address them. However, if you wish to gossip, I suggest you go outside the hospital premises."

Melissa didn't bother to be polite with Arielle. She gave a wink to Leilany beside her.

Leilany saw it and then opened the door while shouting, "Next patient, please!"

"No, Melissa..."

In a hurry, Arielle rose from her seat and glanced toward the window before fixing her gaze on the person in front of her, her eyes filled with a mix of darkness and disdain.

Either intentionally or unintentionally, she touched her nose and coughed to conceal the emotions in her eyes.

She had come to this place solely to seek some information. If something happened to Everett, it would work in her favor. As she couldn't marry into the Mayfield family, Melissa wouldn't be able to do so either.

Furthermore, she would be able to openly handle Melissa's two children.

In any case, if anyone obstructed her plan, she would make sure they paid the price!

She maintained a neutral expression but appeared feeble, feigning anxiety.

"I'm extremely concerned about Everett's well-being. Even if you're unwilling to disclose the truth, please let me know if he is safe."

Melissa furrowed her brow and gave a frigid look to the woman who seemed so anxious that she was on the verge of tears.

As far as she was concerned, she would never trust Arielle's words again.

"I refuse to divulge any information to you. Kindly leave if you don't require medical attention."

"You..."

"Excuse me, if you have no intention of seeing the doctor, please leave. It was quite difficult for us to secure an appointment with Dr. Sherman, and we're waiting for our turn."

The patients standing behind her started telling Arielle to depart. Despite the temptation to confront them, Arielle stiffly turned away.

Arielle spoke rigidly. "Melissa, your demeanor has already given me the answer."

After uttering those words, Arielle departed while being observed by the other patients.

As she walked, Arielle maintained a brisk pace and was preoccupied with her thoughts.

If Everett died overseas, what would be her next course of action?

Melissa was in a sour mood following Arielle's visit.

Despite experiencing discomfort, Melissa persisted in treating the remaining patients. However, she canceled an operation due to her worsening mood. She was even uninterested in reviewing her and Leilany's medical reports brought back by Leilany.

"You look dreadful, Melly." After tidying up the room, Leilany spoke up, concerned. "Why don't you go home now? I'm afraid you might faint."

"I'm okay." Melissa declined the suggestion, shaking her head, and cautiously placed her phone back into her bag. "Nonetheless, I still have to depart and check on my family."

"Alright." Leilany nodded.

Melissa packed her stuff and exited the office.

However, she was caught off guard to find a sizable crowd obstructing the entrance, seemingly eager to hear something.

As soon as she opened the door, the individuals quickly stood up straight, feigning a casual stroll.

 Limited-time offer: 30 minutes of free reading>>

Claim Now

