

Chapter 371 Different People

Clink!

There was a sound from outside, a muffled thud as if something had fallen onto the carpet.

Her dress was mostly dry, and Melissa nodded her head in approval.

She put down the hairdryer and put on her dress. She shouted out to Leilany, "What's happening outside, Leilany? My dress is dry and I'm ready to come out now."

Please don't come out, Melly. The words echoed in Leilany's heart and mind although she did not say them. She stared at the bathroom door and hoped Melissa would stay put.

"You'd better behave." The man's voice was low and menacing. "If you want to die, you're welcome to die with her."

After he spoke, he waved his hand in dismissal and grabbed Leilany's collar. He promptly pulled her over to the window.

The person who was waiting outside cooperated well. He took her from the window and threw her down in the aisle of the ship.

"Leilany? Leilany!" Melissa yelled out several more times but did not get a response.

"Maybe she fell asleep?" Melissa muttered to herself and slowly opened the bathroom door.

When she got a good look into the room, she was able to see the broken window on the other side of the dim room.

Something was definitely wrong.

Melissa's eyes grew intense, and she decided to close the door again.

As soon as she moved the door, it seemed to be stuck motionless against something.

A male figure suddenly appeared and hit her with his hand.

"You..."

She only said a single word before she felt a wave of dizziness. She lost consciousness within moments.

When she woke up, Melissa hissed in pain.

She thought maybe she had been hit with a stick, and the pain radiated all over her body. The back of her neck was especially sore.

Melissa's face scrunched up and she could not see much of anything.

There was a stinging pain in her fingertips suddenly. Then she completely regained consciousness.

Wherever she was, it was dark and smelled terrible.

Instinct told her to cover her nose from the nauseating stench, but she realized her hands and feet were bound and it was impossible for her to move.

"Hmm..."

Leilany could see that Melissa was finally awake, so she moved her body to bring attention to herself.

"Leilany?" Melissa noticed her and was shocked. It was hard not to retch because of the smell surrounding them. "What is wrong? What happened?"

"Hmm..."

"Let me try to remove that for you."

They were both tied up, so it was hard to find the right body positions to try and remove the cloth in Leilany's mouth.

"Ugh, Melly. I'll tell you later."

When the cloth was finally removed, Leilany began to retch, and there was still a strange taste in her mouth.

She gave up. She looked at the wall, wanting to lean against it, but she could see the black oil covering it. She complained instead. "We have such bad luck!"

"What is all of this, Leilany?" Melissa was still unable to wrap her mind around what was happening. "Did we get kidnapped?"

"Yes, Melly. These people are after you."

Leilany shifted her body so she could look around more fully. She could see a window much higher up in the room.

Her eyes flashed as she began to move quickly.

"The people who just left said they were going to transfer us, Melly. I think we should try to think of ways to escape now."

"I agree."

Melissa looked around to see if there was something sharp, something she could use to cut their bindings.

At the same time, she thought about who could have kidnapped her and Leilany.

If it was her previous mysterious kidnapper, he would've killed her when she'd fainted before. In fact, he would have simply thrown her overboard to prevent anyone from finding out. She would not be alive now if it were him.

So it seemed it must be a new set of people who kidnapped her this time.

But who?
