

Chapter 379 Rest Assured

It was midnight but the Mayfield family's house was brightly lit, and everyone was awake.

Vivienne came back from the banquet, tears running down her eyes as she saw Everett.

She had been holding back so many emotions and now it was the time to give vent to them.

"Mrs. Mayfield, Everett is back and he is fine." After bandaging her wound, Melissa came to comfort her. "Don't be sad. What if you fall ill again?"

"No, I am fine. I'm happy."

Vivienne reached out to wipe her tears, but she had a strong grasp on Everett.

She was a strong woman but her son's death wasn't something she could bear. Now seeing him alive, she couldn't remove her eyes from him.

A frown creased her forehead. "Everett, tell me, did you go to Europe because of Colin?"

"Yes, your hunch is right." Everett had no reason to conceal the truth now. "Colin has always wanted to get the company, but he has never been able to do so. Since the last time in Malorcia, he has been sending people to assassinate me. I went to Europe to find out the people behind him."

"Don't you ever keep such dangerous secrets from me and your father," Vivienne said admonishingly.

Everett should have confided in them.

"How's the investigation going?" Johnny cut in, his voice stern. "This isn't a light matter. If we don't get rid of it, it will always threaten the group."

"I know, which is why I went to Europe where Colin once stayed."

Everett leaned against the table, a frown marring his handsome features.

"These forces are much stronger than other companies in Andeport. They control multinational companies, and they are from a union. Their most obvious purpose is to expand their business in our country."

"So they think hurting you will help them achieve their goal? How dare they!" Vivienne's face darkened with anger. "Those people aren't capable of doing legal business, so they resorted to doing terrible things behind our back!"

It was impossible to guard against them all the time.

Melissa hadn't said a word yet, but she was carefully listening.

With what Aloys had told her before, everything that had happened made sense to her.

It was not surprising that they chose to start their plans in Andeport.

Andeport's economy was the strongest among these cities. It played a leading role. After mastering the market of Andeport, they could gradually expand their business in other cities.

If an international enterprise wanted to enter the domestic market, their best bet would be to choose Andeport. Moreover, the whole economy of Andeport was led by the Mayfield Group, so those people wanted to get the Mayfield Group.

If they succeeded in controlling the Mayfield Group, they could easily deal with the other companies.

Everett tapped the table with his fingers, with a cold light glinting in his eyes. "The news just came out. Let Colin do whatever he wants for the next few days. I will secretly find out all spies of the company and deal with them at the next shareholders' meeting."

One could notice a coldness in his face.

Johnny nodded with satisfaction. This would be the best way to handle things. Even if they couldn't get rid of Colin, it would temporarily stop him from stirring trouble.

He smiled with a sense of self-mockery. "Oh, I'm really old. I don't have enough energy left in me. It's not easy to remain calm like it was in my youth. Everything ruffles me."

"Johnny, just leave everything to Everett." Vivienne flashed an assuring smile to her husband and said, "We have our son to manage the company. And then there are two precious grandchildren that Melissa has given birth to. You need not bother yourself too much with company affairs."

"Well, that's right. I'd better rest assured and retire peacefully."