

Chapter 408 Underground Garage

Everett gazed out the window at the setting sun in the sky, and he felt that something was off.

Arielle had gone missing, but she was still in Andeport. Knowing her, Arielle wouldn't be willing to hide in Andeport for long. Either way, the end result would be the same, because the Mayfield Group would spare no time to find her and force her to leave Andeport. Even if Arielle knew this, she still wouldn't want to leave Andeport. Either she was being foolish, or she had ulterior motives.

"No!" A sudden thought crossed his mind, and he stood up quickly, running out of the office.

"Sir? What's wrong?" The assistant didn't know what happened with his boss, but he ran to keep up with him.

"Cancel my online meeting later. I'm going out alone." Everett ordered his assistant as he stormed down the hall, anxiety filling his gaze. He hoped that his idea was wrong. Please.

At the same time, at the hospital, Melissa scrambled to finish the last of her work, checking her watch to see that it was seven o'clock. She messaged Howell at noon and made the plan to meet up at half past eight, so she was going to meet with Aloys now to formulate a plan.

"Leilany, I'm going to leave first today."

"Alright, Melly. Don't worry, you can go. Oh, when you leave, please check if my motorcycle is still there."

"Got it." Melissa was amused by some of Leilany's life choices. Leilany was the only Green Group successor. If she stayed at home, she could be making hundreds of thousands of dollars as spending money alone. She wouldn't even need to drive herself where she needed to go. Instead, she enjoyed riding a motorcycle everywhere.

The underground garage of the hospital had been rearranged, and every day, Leilany's small motorcycle would occupy a single parking space, and then it would be moved elsewhere by the end of the day. Every time, she had to search for a long time throughout the entire garage to find her vehicle.

The garage had just been planned and rebuilt, and everyone had gotten off work already, so it was empty when Melissa arrived.

She found her car, but before she opened the door, a bright beam of light shone in her eyes. It seemed to be high beams of a car. She covered her eyes with her hands and squinted through her fingers. A large off-road vehicle was facing her, stopped in front of the exit of the garage.

The underground garage was huge, and there were plenty of empty parking spots. They shouldn't have been blocking the exit like that. Melissa suddenly sensed that something was terribly wrong.

She quickly opened the door and got in, immediately locking the windows. She tried to keep calm as she took out her phone and sent a message to Aloys before turning the key to start the car. When she was about to make a detour through the garage, the vehicle suddenly sped toward her.

Damn it! It was really coming for her.

The off-road vehicle was very large, and the sound of its loud engine filled the cement garage as it increased speed.

Melissa frowned as she faced her formidable enemy. She immediately turned a corner to avoid bumping into her foe. Stepping on the accelerator, she attempted to escape before they were able to catch up to her.

But whoever was in the off-road vehicle seemed to be desperate, because they raced around the corner and easily caught up to Melissa's car.

She felt a sense of despair in her chest as she saw the off-road vehicle approaching her once again. She examined the situation, and if they hit her car all the way to the wall of the garage, even with an airbag, the violent impact would kill or seriously injure her. She suddenly felt quite afraid.
