

Chapter 431 Make Trouble

"She came back because of Everett?"

Melissa suddenly got a terrible feeling.

She only wanted Peter's daughter to remain unaware of the rumors between her and Everett, and to not interfere with her peaceful workdays.

"Yes, she did." Leilany nodded in agreement and went back to gossiping. "Are you going to be jealous? It is true that Keira returned for Everett."

"Of course I'm not going to be jealous. I'm just hoping she doesn't try to mess with me." Melissa rose from her chair and made her way to her desk. "Prepare for work. Since I didn't come in yesterday, I anticipate a high volume of patients today."

"You're right, Melly. It's quite difficult to secure an appointment with you these days. I even heard that someone sold their appointment number for a lot of money."

Melissa's prediction came true.

Dozens of patients did arrive in the morning. They began lining up from the office all the way to the hallways outside.

A group of individuals approached from a short distance. They were led by a woman donning name brand clothing and high-heeled shoes. She appeared to be around twenty-five years old. She was quite beautiful, but upon closer observation, one could detect a hint of malice in her demeanor.

Her arms were crossed over her chest and she raised up her haughty chin.

"Have all of these patients made appointments with Melly?" Keira asked.

"Yes, Miss Cooper."

Several doctors, each the director of a different department, trailed behind her. They donned white coats and wore flattering expressions.

They continued to follow her and spoke to her continuously.

"Miss Cooper, we have toured nearly every department in our hospital. Your father has instructed me to help you locate a suitable office space of your liking."

"Okay." Keira narrowed her eyes and directed her gaze toward the queue, contemplating for a moment. "Let's head over there and take a peek. I believe that office space looks splendid."

"Well..."

The directors looked around at each other anxiously.

It was quite apparent that the direction Keira was eyeing was none other than Melly's office. Melly was a renowned figure in the hospital, recognized as the Divine Surgeon ever since she'd arrived. Additionally, she was backed by the prestigious Mayfield family, making her untouchable by anyone within the hospital.

Nonetheless, the woman standing before them was Peter's only daughter. She was also not to be trifled with. They knew better than to risk incurring her wrath and potentially facing consequences.

Even though they were anxious about it, they still followed behind her as she headed to Melly's office.

As Leilany sat at her desk documenting medical cases, she noticed a woman wearing high-heeled shoes. The woman was suddenly standing in front of her just as she was about to call in the next patient.

Leilany spoke without looking directly at the woman's face.

"If you require medical consultation, kindly register at the front desk on the first floor. The next patient, please proceed inside."

"I didn't think that Dr. Sherman's assistant would be so arrogant."

The woman's voice was dripping with sarcasm.

Leilany looked up with a frown.

She could see the woman's luxurious clothes and perfect makeup. It was obvious she had been born into a wealthy family.

Leilany rolled her eyes and replied in kind to the woman's sharp attitude. "We have rules in this hospital. Dr. Sherman is at work, and if you want to see a doctor, you have to register first. If you came here to have a useless chat, then I suggest you go now."

"I absolutely will not be leaving."

After speaking, Keira sat down in Melissa's office and blinked her perfectly made up eyes. She stared at the woman sitting across from her.

There was a small, hostile smile on Keira's face.

"I'm happy to finally meet you, Dr. Melly Sherman. I've heard so much about you."

She put emphasis on the last words as if she was implying something negative.

Keira had been abroad, but she was still well informed about Everett.

She'd also heard many rumors about Melly and Everett.

What made Keira the most furious was that Everett had stepped in front of a knife for this woman.
