

Chapter 45 The Invitation

Arielle's attitude drastically changed, but Melissa had guessed the reason.

How could Arielle allow her to perform another surgery on her? After all, she had made a lot of trouble before the previous operation. Melissa had no idea what would happen if they were to have another surgery.

Melissa nodded and left, waiting for Arielle to leave the hospital soon. Once Arielle left, Everett would be out of her hair.

As soon as she returned to the office, her gaze fell on a gilded invitation on her desk. It was an invitation to a domestic medical conference and banquet.

She looked at the sponsor's name behind the paper and immediately threw it into the trash can.

Everett had been getting involved in everything and annoying her.

"Dr. Sherman, the hospital director's assistant came to give the invitation. He personally asked you to attend it because you're the only one in the hospital who is qualified to attend it," seeing the look on Melissa's face, the assistant explained. ①

Melissa looked down at the black invitation in the trash can like she hadn't heard of it.

She didn't want to go. This medical conference was nothing. People could perform the research in the lab.

Suddenly, a message popped up on her phone. It was from one of her university teachers.

"Melissa, I just received an invitation. Your photo is on the list. Is that really you?"

Melissa knew she couldn't avoid the medical conference now.

The teacher was curious about her sudden disappearance over the past few years. Therefore, she wanted to take this opportunity to talk to her. Melissa was this teacher's favorite student back then.

Melissa couldn't refuse. She bent down, picked up the black card, and put it into the drawer.

The weekend had arrived, and the weather was good. Melissa got up early and dressed up. She changed into a casual suit, which made her look professional yet beautiful. Her entire look put together was perfect for the conference today.

"Mommy, you look so beautiful. I have never seen a beautiful woman like you."

Lindsey grinned happily. She always knew the right thing to say to compliment her mother. She reached out and touched Melissa's coat. Then, she looked up and smiled sweetly.

Lindsey was used to seeing her mother in a white coat, but Melissa looked more beautiful in the suit.

Melissa smiled at her daughter's compliments and stroked her head.

"I am going to a meeting today. It's very important, so I can't take you there. You two be good and stay at home, okay?"

Melissa squatted down, pulled her daughter and son, and wrapped them in a tight embrace.

"I am always well-behaved. Can't you take me along with you?" Lindsey asked, batting her lashes.

Apart from going to school, Lindsey liked staying with her mother.

"Oh, no, Lindsey. The meeting is only for adults, so we can't go."

Merrick was an expert in fooling and pacifying his sister. After all, Melissa worked overtime often, and Merrick always looked after his sister at home. He would always come up with lies to coax his sister.

Lindsey always believed her brother, so she stopped bothering Melissa.

"Mommy, come back soon."

Lindsey sent Melissa out of the door, saw her get into the car, and came back inside the house.

"Merrick, I want to go out and play." She turned around and asked her brother.

Children were always curious and excited. No one could stop her and make her stay at home.

"Lindsey, our mother is not at home." Merrick playfully patted Lindsey's head. "We can't go out without her permission."