

Chapter 483 Forced To Apologize

"Stop!" Peter rushed toward his daughter, accidentally bumping into the leg of the table and falling down. His glasses slipped from his face as he fell, shattering, and suddenly he couldn't see anything clearly. "Melly! Stop it!"

Melissa suddenly released her grip from Keira. "Mr. Cooper, I'm helping you teach your daughter, lest she suffer more in the future." She brushed nonexistent dust off her hands.

Peter was finally able to stand up, making it over to Keira who was screaming.

"Melly, are you crazy? How could you hit someone like that? You're a doctor!"

"Mr. Cooper, Keira came at me first. Look. She tried to break my hand!" Leilany spoke up, raising her hand to show the swollen tissue. It looked serious.

"Well..." Peter glanced at his daughter reproachfully. Keira looked at him, feigning innocence.

"Leilany, my daughter may be naive, and it's her fault that she hurt you, but that doesn't make it right for Melly to do the same."

"Your daughter insisted on moving Melly's things, but this is still her office. Why should Keira hire people to move Melly's belongings from her own office? Mr. Cooper, if I remember correctly, my father just donated a batch of medical equipment to the hospital." Leilany pointed out.

Peter's demeanor changed immediately. He wanted to get revenge for Keira, but he held back.

"Dad, don't listen to her. Look how swollen my face is!"

Keira showed her injured face to her father, seeking sympathy. She was hoping that he would send for someone to beat Melissa.

Instead, Peter turned to her, disappointment on his face. "You deserve it. You just broke Leilany's wrist, apologize to her immediately."

"What?" Keira was shocked. She turned to her father, tears beginning to form in her eyes. "Dad, what are you saying?"

"I've told you many times to not call me Dad in the workplace. Do you want everyone to know that I have an imbecile for a daughter? Apologize to Leilany now!"

Keira realized at this moment that her father valued his interests over his own daughter, and she clenched her fists, holding back her tears and turning to the woman. "I'm sorry! It's my fault."

Leilany pretended that she hadn't heard her clearly. "What did you say? Louder, please."

Keira knew she was just making things difficult for her, but she played along, embarrassed. "I said I'm sorry!"

Keira exited Melissa's office, bloodied and morose.

Peter followed her out, grasping her arm. "I had to do that back there. You shouldn't have offended either of those women."

"Why? Dad, you own this hospital. How can anyone be so arrogant to us?"

Peter was rendered speechless. Losing face in front of his daughter deeply frustrated him. "Keira, I'm not weak, but the Green family has donated a lot of equipment to our hospital, and we can't lose their support."

"I don't want to hear it. You're just afraid of them. You're nothing. My mother has bragged to her friends that you're the director of the hospital, and that you have special capabilities. But you turned out to be nothing."
