

Chapter 485 Tell Him The Truth

Everett's sudden anger took Melissa by surprise. She was shocked as she hadn't seen him lose his temper in a long time.

Melissa's voice was muffled as she clenched her fists. "There's something I can't tell you right now. I'll let you know after I handle it."

Suddenly, Everett grabbed Melissa's shoulders and locked his gaze onto hers.

"I know you've been spending time with Aloys lately. Did you ask him for help? I want you to treat me as your closest person and not distance yourself from me. Do you understand that? I will make amends for what happened between us in the past." Everett's voice was steady and serious.

Upon hearing Everett's words, Melissa felt moved.

She acknowledged Everett was a different man now. She realized she still had feelings for him, and now she was touched by his sincere words.

Clenching her fists, Melissa gazed up at him.

She breathed a sigh of relief as she gazed into Everett's eyes.

Memories of the numerous times Everett saved her flooded her mind, and she couldn't help but feel grateful for his presence in her life.

Melissa thought if Everett had made mistakes in the past, it was time to let go and move on. She didn't want to hold onto those negative emotions anymore, especially since Everett had saved her several times recently.

"I..."

Melissa struggled to find the right words and bowed her head.

Eventually, she shared information with Everett regarding the Carter family from Tinton. As soon as he heard what Melissa had to say, Everett's expression turned to a frown.

"Your mother was from Tinton, where the Carter family resides. However, your mother had a strained relationship with them. What would happen to you if you visit them?"

Melissa was apprehensive and believed Everett was against the idea of her visiting Tinton. However, in the next moment, Everett had a change of heart.

"Ultimately, I know your objective is to locate the antidote. If you are determined to go, I can arrange for someone to ensure your safety."

Everett's words caught Melissa off guard, and she was momentarily taken aback. She turned to look at him. "Aren't you going to stop me?"

Everett met Melissa's gaze. "I would prevent you from going if there was a better alternative. However, at present, our primary focus should be on locating the antidote."

Melissa fell silent for a moment before she spoke again. "Thank you."

A smile formed on Everett's face, and he was content with Melissa's response. Although he felt she was overly courteous in thanking him, he was pleased she recognized his willingness to assist her.

"No need to thank me. I haven't slept soundly ever since I found out you were poisoned. I've been working day and night to find a way to detoxify your system. So, please don't feel the need to be overly polite to me."

Was that true?

Melissa was taken aback upon learning of Everett's relentless efforts. She'd previously believed Everett was simply occupied with his work at the company, but now she realized he'd been devoting his time and energy to finding an antidote for her. This realization left her feeling touched and grateful.

Melissa felt a warm sensation in her heart.

The previously icy exterior of Melissa's heart melted away completely.

The following day, Everett made arrangements to have bodyguards assigned to Melissa's protection.

The bodyguards positioned themselves in front of Melissa and Everett, showcasing their skills and abilities. Melissa and Everett observed them like judges during a talent show, evaluating their performances.