

Chapter 489 Bad Things Happen To Good People

Within twenty four hours, Leilany was finally out of danger. Nonetheless, she was too frail and no one was permitted to visit her.

Over the last couple of days, Tracy wept incessantly and even fainted on a few occasions. Melissa was by her side to offer her solace and support. Otherwise, Tracy wouldn't have been able to endure the ordeal.

"Dr. Sherman, Leilany is incredibly fortunate to have a friend like you. You've been at the hospital nonstop for the past two days, and you must be exhausted. Leilany is doing well now, and it's time for you to take a break and rest."

"Mrs. Green, this is something I need to do. When Leilany wakes up, I want to ask her a few questions."

"I heard that Leilany had a disagreement with the daughter of your hospital director a few days ago. Is there any correlation with you?"

"Yes."

Melissa gave a succinct account to Tracy regarding the events of the day.

Tracy became upset when she heard Melissa's explanation. "Is Mr. Cooper's daughter that arrogant?"

Tracy tightened her fists. "I won't let this go. Still, Dr. Sherman, if Leilany hadn't defended you, she wouldn't have injured her wrist. I hope you can stay away from Leilany from now on."

Melissa comprehended the implications of the woman's statement. Tracy feared Leilany might get hurt again if she continued to be around Melissa.

Melissa didn't blame Tracy for her decision. After all, Leilany was injured, and it made her mother uneasy to see her in pain.

"Mrs. Green, please don't worry. I have already resigned from the hospital, so I won't have any future contact with Leilany."

"I didn't know you'd resigned..." Tracy had an attitude shift. "Okay... I can suggest another hospital for you. Where would you like to go? If it's within my power, I will surely assist you."

"No, thank you."

Silently, Melissa retracted her hand and prepared to depart.

"By the way, since you don't work at the hospital anymore, Leilany will likely try to contact you once she wakes up. Would you mind blocking her phone number?"

Melissa froze. She understood that Tracy didn't want them to work in the same hospital because she was worried about her daughter's well-being and wanted to avoid any further harm.

However, Melissa was hesitant to block Leilany's phone number as it might strain their friendship. It seemed like a drastic measure.

"Mrs. Green..."

"I understand my request might hurt your feelings, but please forgive me for being a worried mother."

Tracy was so worried about her daughter she hadn't been able to sleep or eat well in the past two days. She looked much thinner from losing a lot of weight. As she stared at Melissa with a pleading expression, Melissa found it difficult to refuse her request, despite her reservations.

"Alright, Mrs. Green. I promise."

Feeling disheartened, Melissa left the hospital and stood at the entrance. She stared at the gray sky, consumed by a sense of gloom.

Was what happened to Leilany her fault?

If Keira and Peter were truly involved in this matter, Melissa was determined to ensure they faced the consequences and bore the responsibility for their actions. She was not going to let them off the hook easily!

Meanwhile, Leilany's colleagues were discussing the issue.

"I heard that Leilany was involved in a car accident and is currently in the ICU."

"What? How did that happen?"

"It has to be true. She hasn't been back to work for days. Haven't you noticed?"

"Oh. That's so unlucky!"

"Leilany was such a vivacious and charming girl."
