

Chapter 491 Curing The Sick

"Excuse me, are you a medical professional? I assure you we will do everything in our power to save your daughter. However, we must be realistic about the situation. Additionally, I must inform you Dr. Sherman has resigned from her position, so even if you wished for her to treat your daughter, it would not be possible," Peter said.

After experiencing feelings of disappointment, the woman lowered her head. Her last resort was to pray for God's protection.

"Mr. Cooper!" A nurse rushed over and called out to Peter immediately after he finished speaking. "Mr. Cooper, Melly wants to meet with you."

Upon hearing Melly's name, the middle-aged woman became excited. "Did you say Melly? Isn't that Dr. Melly Sherman at your hospital?"

The nurse appeared perplexed. After the middle-aged woman's question, she nodded reflexively. "That's the one, but Dr. Sherman has resigned already."

The woman was overwhelmed with excitement to the point she almost cried. Was she really that fortunate?

Without delay, she ran into the hospital's hallway. She scanned her surroundings until she spotted Melissa.

She rushed over and knelt down in public before Melissa.

Melissa was taken aback at the sight of this middle-aged woman kneeling before her and weeping.

"Ma'am, what are you doing? You should stand up immediately. It's cold on the floor."

"Dr. Sherman, I won't stand up unless you promise me you'll do everything possible to save my daughter."

"Your daughter?"

gravely ill.

Melissa helped the middle-aged woman to her feet. "I do wish to assist your daughter, but I must inform you I have resigned from this hospital. As I am no longer a practicing doctor here, unfortunately, I am unable to provide any medical assistance."

"Yes, but..."

The woman began to cry when Melissa told her this.

"My daughter is currently in the resuscitation room, and Mr. Cooper has informed me they are unable to save her. It's heart-wrenching to wait helplessly by her side, knowing I might lose her. Dr. Sherman, you are the only one who can save my daughter."

Melissa was taken aback upon hearing this. She hadn't anticipated the severity of the girl's condition and the fact no one else seemed to be able to help her.

"Take me to your daughter now."

Upon hearing Melissa's response, the middle-aged woman stopped crying and composed herself. She began to lead Melissa toward the resuscitation room where her daughter was being treated.

However, as they took a few steps, Peter intercepted them.

"Excuse me, but as you are aware, Dr. Sherman is no longer affiliated with our hospital. She cannot provide any medical services here."

The middle-aged woman grew increasingly anxious at Peter's words. Her daughter's life was in grave danger, and any delay or obstruction could prove fatal. She was overcome with worry.

"Mr. Cooper, I implore you to make an exception. At this point, I believe only Dr. Sherman can save my daughter's life."

"I find it hard to believe Dr. Sherman can be of any help in this matter. I suspect she is simply offering you emotional support. You shouldn't believe what she is saying. Melly, this woman may not know the rules. I'm sure you're aware of the consequences of providing medical assistance in our hospital without proper authorization? If anything goes wrong, you will be held liable for any negative outcome that occurs."

The middle-aged woman was shocked to hear about the hospital's regulations and looked at Melissa with a mixture of terror and desperation.

According to Peter, it seemed there was no hope for the woman's

< Chapter 491 Curing The Sick

+120 Points at most daughter. Wouldn't Dr. Sherman be blamed for her daughter's death if she were unable to save her?

Our ads aim to provide better support for authors.

🙏 I want no ads >

100,0%

17:10