

Chapter 492 Peter Was Embarrassed

The middle-aged woman hesitated, and then spoke up. "Dr. Sherman, I'm sorry. I didn't know about the rule. I shouldn't have caused you trouble."

Melissa frowned. The woman had done nothing wrong. She had merely sought treatment for her daughter.

"Ma'am, you're right to ask for my help," Melissa said.

"But... Mr. Cooper said that no one can save my daughter now," the woman said hesitantly.

"I can," Melissa declared confidently.

Peter grinned slyly, delighted by Melissa's declaration.

He had been plotting to create problems for her, but now she had willingly made a potentially unattainable promise.

He stepped aside, adding, "Before entering the resuscitation room, you must sign a contract. You'll take full responsibility for the patient's treatment, which won't be connected to the hospital."

"I agree," Melissa said, undeterred.

Puzzlement colored the faces of onlookers as she entered the resuscitation room.

Thirty minutes later, Melissa emerged. Peter and several doctors immediately went in to check the girl's condition.

To their astonishment, the girl's vitals had stabilized, and she was conscious.

It was nothing short of miraculous.

Peter, who had been ready to mock Melissa, was left speechless. He couldn't believe what he was seeing.

The middle-aged woman dropped to her knees, showering Melissa with gratitude and lauding her as an exceptional doctor.

"Please, stand up," Melissa insisted gently. "It's my duty to save your daughter. I'll do my best to treat her, regardless of the outcome."

As Peter slinked away, deflated, the other doctors swarmed Melissa, peppering her with questions about her methods.

She explained the treatment thoroughly.

"Dr. Sherman, you're incredible! Why didn't we think of that approach?"

"If you weren't at our hospital, it would be a tremendous loss."

By the following day, the story had become a sensation.

Everyone knew of the doctor who insisted on saving a patient's life even if she had to bear all the consequences alone.

Melissa was showered with praise by the people. While Peter faced harsh criticism.

Left with no choice, Peter summoned Melissa.

Melissa also wanted to ask Peter about something, so she came to the hospital to meet him.

"Dr. Sherman, I was wrong. I dismissed you. Please forgive me and return to our hospital."

Melissa knew Peter's true motives; he was acting out of concern for his reputation, not genuine remorse.

"Mr. Cooper, after banishing me initially, isn't it hasty to ask me back? Will your staff take you seriously once they know?"

Peter's face flushed with embarrassment. He realized Melly wouldn't let him off the hook easily.

Swallowing his pride, he forced a smile. "I've looked into the previous incident. Someone deliberately framed you on the forum. Rest assured, I've identified the culprit, and she'll apologize to you shortly."

Our ads aim to provide better support for authors.

