

Chapter 497 Go To Timton

"Thank you, Aloys," Melissa said gratefully. As she was about to get into his car, another car stopped beside her.

Everett stepped out of the car and forcefully pulled Melissa's hand, pushing her into his car without a word.

Mona was shocked by what she saw and rushed over to Everett's car. "Mr. Mayfield, I..." she began, but Everett interrupted her.

"Get in the car!" he snapped.

"Yes."

The car quickly drove away, leaving Aloys standing alone, clenching his fists.

"Why did you do that? I haven't even said goodbye to Aloys yet," Melissa protested.

Everett's mood darkened at her words. He snorted, "Say goodbye to Aloys? Are you close to him?"

"Yes, if Aloys had not helped me, I would have died," Melissa replied firmly.

Everett felt a pang of guilt at her words. He gripped the steering wheel tightly, lost in thought. Finally, he spoke up. "It's my fault for what happened in the past. I shouldn't have kicked you out."

Melissa clenched her fists tightly and stared out the window, watching the scenery fly by.

She was hurt deeply by what had happened in the past, and she rarely talked about it. But she had never forgotten the pain and heartbreak of those days.

Feeling the tension in the car, Everett fell silent.

When they arrived at the airport, Melissa got out of the car, Mona following her with the suitcases.

While they were in the waiting hall, Everett hugged Melissa tightly.

"What's the matter? Why did you suddenly hug me?" she asked.

Hearing no response, Melissa looked away, her eyes filled with pain. "Don't bring up the past, Everett. The old Melissa is dead, and I am someone else now."

How much pain had Melissa endured? Everett knew that he was to blame for her pain. He took her hands gently in his, looking deep into her eyes.

"Please give me a chance to make it up to you," he pleaded.

Melissa gazed at Everett and tightly clasped his hands. She hesitated for a moment, unsure of how to respond. After a few seconds, she said in a hoarse voice, "It all depends on how you behave."

Everett took her suitcase from Mona with a smile, determined to do everything for Melissa personally.

He watched her board the plane and reminded her to be careful.

Melissa felt touched by his actions and smiled at him. "Wait for my good news. I am confident about my skills. I am the best in the industry."

"I know your medical skills are great, but you have a dangerous task, so be careful," Everett replied with concern.

Melissa was saddened when she heard this. She suddenly felt unsure if she had made the right decision.

The plane took off, and Melissa slept for a while. One hour later, she arrived in Timton.

Before she arrived in Timton, she had already gained a detailed understanding of the area.

Melissa walked through the large and small streets. She finally arrived at the Carter family's residence located in a high-end villa area.

< Chapter 497 Go To Tinton

🎁 +120 Points at most

As she approached the closed door, she noticed the presence of a security guard.

Our ads aim to provide better support for authors.

🙏 I want no ads >

100,0%

13:46

