

Chapter 1131 We Can't Let Him Leave

Dobbs' scream filled the air as the shadow beast tore off his right leg. The excruciating pain was beyond what he could bear.

He belatedly realized that his clever tricks had disastrously backfired.

If he had the chance to do it all over, he swore he would steer clear of any kind of scheming.

Meanwhile, Slater shook uncontrollably as he witnessed the gruesome scene unfolding before him. His brother, who had only been trying to save him, was now badly injured.

Liam's gaze remained fixed on the unfolding horror, his brow furrowing. Then, he sprang into action. As the shadow beast was viciously devouring Dobbs' leg, Liam charged forward and landed a blow so powerful that it sent the shadow beast hurtling through the air.

He didn't stop there. Following the beast's trajectory, he unleashed another punch, the wind whistling due to the sheer force of his blow. His punch struck the beast squarely, killing it instantly. The beast, at mere sixth-level, stood little chance against Liam's overwhelming power.

As the commotion died down and the aftermath of the fight became clear, the Prescott family team members gathered around the scene. Their earlier disdain for Liam had morphed into respect, bordering on fear.

Watching his team rally around him, Dobbs and Slater felt a surge of confidence welling up within him.

Dobbs knew that if it hadn't been for Liam, he would have met his end.

Holding onto his injured leg, Dobbs suddenly accused Liam, "This is entirely your fault. You've been concealing your true strength, affecting the judgment of our team! If you hadn't lured that beast toward me, I wouldn't have been in this predicament. Idris, you also saw that, right? If he hadn't lured that accursed shadow beast straight to me, would I now be injured like this? We can't afford to keep this troublemaker around any longer. Kill him!"

Liam was taken aback by the sheer nerve of the Delgado brothers. He had just saved them, yet here they were, placing the blame on him.

He snapped back, his voice seething with anger. "None of this would've happened if you hadn't tried to set me up by drawing the shadow beast to me in the first place! You have no one to blame but yourselves. You deserve every bit of the misery you've been through!"

Dobbs' and Slater's faces visibly flushed with embarrassment. Sensing they were on the losing end of the debate, they hastily switched gears and shifted their attention to Idris. "Idris, you've got to back us up! This man has kept his true strength hidden until now. Isn't that proof that he can't be trusted? We must kill him!"

Susannah's irritation flared at their words.

"I witnessed everything," Susannah chimed in. "Dobbs, Slater, it was your idea to lure the shadow beast to Kolton's side to kill him. You've brought this upon yourselves."

Although the brothers usually adored Susannah, they were unmoved by her persuasion this time.

They resented her decision to side with Liam. Internally, they cursed Susannah for prioritizing Liam over the welfare of her team.

After a tense pause, Idris finally spoke up. "Kolton, it's time for you to step away from our team. Dobbs lost his leg because of your actions. It's clear you no longer belong here."

As Idris geared up to expel Liam, Susannah felt a wave of reluctance sweep over her.

She promptly intervened, saying, "No! We can't let Kolton go!"

Idris, usually compliant with Susannah's desires, remained steadfast in his decision this time.

He looked at her earnestly and said, "Look, I get that you enjoy having Kolton around, but there are boundaries we must adhere to. His actions have inflicted serious harm on one of our own. Keeping him in our team will only provoke widespread anger and create rifts within the team. In a place as perilous as this, we simply can't afford to take that risk."
