

Chapter 1168 The Death Of The Zephyr Ape

When the Zephyr Ape found itself unable to move its limbs, panic set in, engulfing it in a wave of unrelenting fear.

Realizing it was in grave danger, the Zephyr Ape's demeanor shifted drastically. Its eyes were wide with terror. It pleaded with Liam, casting aside all traces of its former pride in a desperate bid for mercy.

"Human! Please, let me live! In the Myriad Beasts Valley, I know of countless hidden treasures. I'll reveal their locations to you! Spare me, and I swear to serve you forever! I admit my mistake in opposing you. Please, have mercy!"

Liam, witnessing the Zephyr Ape's drastic shift in demeanor, was taken aback by its intense will to survive, to the extent of groveling at the feet of a human.

Yet, Liam felt no pity for his adversary, the very one who had once pushed him to the brink.

Skepticism clouded his thoughts about the Zephyr Ape's promises. A primogem beast turning into a servile follower seemed unlikely, and frankly, Liam saw no need for such a follower.

The Zephyr Ape's desperate offer of treasures hidden within the Myriad Beasts Valley did little to sway him.

With the Shadow Sword firmly in his hand and his Compressed Space Containers brimming with treasures, Liam was unimpressed by the ape's desperate bargains.

He dismissed the ape's pleas with a scoff, saying, "You're mistaken. Those treasures you speak of? They don't interest me. My priority is to deal with you, once and for all!"

Liam thrust his sword into the Zephyr Ape's chest without a second thought, piercing its heart and ending its life.

As the Zephyr Ape died, Liam finally felt relieved. The mark the Zephyr Ape had left on him faded away along with its death.

This battle underscored Liam's growing prowess.

Now, he stood as a formidable power, unrivaled by anyone beneath the seventh rank.

He even felt bold enough to challenge the early-seventh-rank beings of the Blood Clan.

As he contemplated his newfound strength, Liam clenched his fists, gazed into the horizon, and muttered to himself, "Adamson, I'm catching up to you. Next time we cross paths, it'll be the end for you! Julie, Asher, wait for me to save you!"

Liam turned his focus back to the Zephyr Ape's body.

He chose not to discard it.

This was, after all, the flesh of a primogem beast, far more precious than any creature native to Blue Star.

Given that the Zephyr Ape had consumed vast amounts of Universe Crystal Dew, its body still held traces of that potent energy.

Such a treasure could not only bolster power but also prolong the life of any ordinary being.

Without hesitation, Liam wielded his Shadow Sword to slice the Zephyr Ape into segments, efficiently storing the remains in his Compressed Space Containers.

Once done, he slid the sword back into its sheath.

The recent battle with the Zephyr Ape had opened Liam's eyes to the true potential of his Shadow Sword.

Despite its current ordinary grade, it was undeniably powerful. He could only imagine the capabilities it would have once restored to its original glory.

A glint of excitement shone in Liam's eyes.

Restoring the sword to its peak would be transformative.

However, such a restoration would demand a vast amount of shadow energy.

This meant that Liam had to unlock the special power of the shadow element.

With this in mind, he took a deep breath and retrieved the Shadow Flower from the Compressed Space Containers.

Before, he had set this flower aside for Susannah's recovery.

Fortunately, Susannah had got a Shadow Flower and healed herself, leaving this one for Liam.

Liam decided to use this Shadow Flower himself. Because there was a potential to awaken his special power of the shadow element by consuming the Shadow Flower.

Yet, he knew well the inherent conflict between the special power of the light element and the shadow

So, Liam wasn't sure if he could manage both types of special powers simultaneously.

His expression clouded with worry for a moment, but then set into a determined resolve.

For the sake of mastering the Shadow Sword, he was ready to take the risk.

Without another moment's delay, Liam tossed the Shadow Flower into his mouth!
