

Chapter 1190 Let Me Heal You

Following Adamson's decision to join forces, a significant clash was imminent.

The true arena for Primogem Warriors of the eighth level lay among the clouds.

Their aerial prowess surpassed that of the seventh-rank Primogem Warriors, offering both superior flight capabilities and sustained combat capacity in aerial engagements.

Leading the charge into the sky was Carlden, swiftly followed by Adamson and Cillian.

A fierce aerial battle ensued high above, gradually extending beyond Liam's sight. The only indicators Liam had of the intense battle were the thunderous reverberations and dazzling flashes in the sky.

Concern for Carlden weighed heavily on Liam's mind as he silently wished for a favorable outcome.

Sensing Liam's apprehension, Laura promptly offered reassurance, saying, "Fear not; Protector Dorcas is sure to prevail!"

Shayla, familiar with Carlden as Protector Dorcas but lacking details, took the opportunity to inquire, "Liam, why does Protector Dorcas show such support for you? Could you enlighten me on what transpired during your time undercover in the Saint Society?"

Liam offered a concise response. "Protector Dorcas used to be my senior within the Salvation Society."

Shayla's eyes widened as she grasped the significance, a mix of realization and astonishment evident in her expression.

The members of the Salvation Society were undoubtedly bold. Liam and Carlden had both penetrated the Saint Society, with Carlden even assuming the role of a protector!

But Shayla wouldn't snitch; harboring disdain for the Saint Society, her allegiance firmly rested with the Salvation Society.

Thus, the trio awaited the aerial battle's resolution with bated breath.

Thirty minutes elapsed.

Carlden emerged again.

His movements were fluid, indicating minimal injuries. Casually, he instructed Liam, "Let's return."

Although curious about the result of the conflict, Liam sensed Carlden's reluctance to delve into it and silently nodded. Accompanied by Laura and Shayla, Liam followed Carlden back to their base.

Upon arrival, Carlden told Liam, "Come with me."

Observing Carlden's selective request, both Shayla and Laura didn't follow.

Liam complied, trailing Carlden into a room, where they promptly established a secure barrier to prevent any potential eavesdropping.

Once assured of their privacy, Carlden relinquished his restraint and expelled a mouthful of blood.

Liam's heart raced as he hurried to assist Carlden, suddenly discovering a severe injury on Carlden that exposed the bone.

Observing the severity of Carlden's wound, incurred while protecting him, Liam experienced profound guilt and worry, his voice laden with regret. "Your injury is a result of my actions. I'm truly sorry!"

Carlden smiled and reassured Liam, "It's alright; my injury isn't severe. I just need time to recover. The others suffered worse, particularly Cillian; he'll probably be bedridden for a month. Honestly, if Adamson hadn't protected Cillian continuously, I would've killed Cillian. Nobody harms my people and escapes unscathed!"

Liam felt relieved and touched by Carlden's words, experiencing a sense of warmth he hadn't felt in a long time.

He genuinely praised, "You confronted two adversaries and inflicted significant harm on one. It's a remarkable achievement!"

Carlden chuckled, displaying evident delight.

After praising Carlden more, Liam suggested, "Please lay down and allow me to attend to your injuries."

Carlden was surprised by Liam's offer, which he would typically dismiss if it came from someone else.

The notion of a sixth-tier Primogem Warrior healing an eighth-tier one? That was unprecedented!

However, given that it was Liam offering, Carlden chose to trust him.

After a brief consideration, Carlden complied with Liam's suggestion, reclining with a smile and saying, "Very well. Let's see what abilities you acquired in the maritime secret realm!"

Liam nodded and initiated the utilization of the Life Conduction Origin Technique to heal Carlden.

The bleeding ceased almost immediately.

Carlden watched with a blend of astonishment and admiration. Because the green healing light emitted by Liam had the potential to accelerate Carlden's recovery by more than seventy percent.

This was remarkable!

Carlden was very proud of Liam.

In reality, Carlden had been watching Liam and his companions since their departure from the secret realm. He had chosen to remain concealed on purpose, aiming to assess Liam's development by discreetly observing him.

Witnessing Liam's exceptional healing capabilities firsthand, Carlden's contentment grew.

He nodded in approval.

Evidently, Liam's venture into the maritime secret realm had resulted in substantial progress—a genuinely wonderful outcome!