

Chapter 1265 Fragment Of The Heart Of Life

Liam had no interest in addressing the crowd of spectators.

Upon noticing that the old man, Fitzpatrick Hammond, was distracted by the group, he promptly activated his Lightning Wings and soared towards the remnants of the star with all his speed.

A helpless sigh escaped Fitzpatrick.

He was keenly aware of the overwhelming force emanating from the remnants of the star—a force that not even a Primogem Expert could not withstand.

Even though he was a Primogem Expert with one star himself, entering the remnants had subjected him to so much pressure that he had barely managed to make it out alive.

He just did not want Liam to die for this.

Fitzpatrick swiftly employed his spiritual power to assess Liam's condition, ready to save him if any threat emerged.

However, this very inspection unveiled something that caused Fitzpatrick's eyes to widen in shock.

To his astonishment, he discovered that Liam was unscathed even after venturing into the remnants of the star.

In fact, the oppressive force emanating from remnants of the star stemmed from a power that could strip away life

The origin of this power was the same as that of the fragment of the Heart of Life that Liam possessed.

Liam released Emer and urged, "Emer, please locate the fragment of the Heart of Life here as soon as possible."

Emer immediately complied with his request.

After a while, Emer said, "We're less than a hundred meters away from the fragment of the Heart of Life! Master, start digging downwards. It should be approximately ten meters below the surface."

After digging for a while, Liam successfully found the fragment of the Heart of Life.

"I've found it!" he exclaimed.

This fragment of the Heart of Life was tiny, barely the size of a fingernail.

"Consume this," Liam said, handing the fragment of the Heart of Life to Emer.

Upon consuming the fragment of the Heart of Life, Emer immediately became highly active. It had been a long time since Emer, after it had recognized Liam as its master, had absorbed such a significant amount of life energy.

Subsequently, Emer transferred all the energy it had just absorbed to Liam.

Because of this, Liam felt a significant improvement in his special powers.

He had leveled up, becoming a tenth-level six-star Primogem Warrior.

Liam had initially intended to leave after absorbing the fragment of the Heart of Life.

However, just as he was on the verge of departing, he suddenly detected another life force within the remnants of the star!

He was surprised by this discovery.

"Could there possibly be another force of World Power here?" he muttered to himself.

He knew that multiple fragments of the Heart of Life couldn't coexist in one place. They would inevitably consume each other. This fact had been confirmed by Emer before.

Hence, Liam boldly speculated that it was indeed another World Power residing within the remnants of this star!

World Power was much rarer compared to the fragment of the Heart of Life.

Thanks to the World Power he already possessed, Liam recognized the multitude of benefits they provided. It could replenish and nourish his primogem energy, restore his spiritual power consumption, and nurture his special power.

Furthermore, the continuous absorption of new World Power could also amplify their effects.

Liam could even potentially cultivate his own Celestial Realm by harnessing more World Power.

Unfortunately, despite Liam's suspicion that a force of World Power existed here, he had no means of absorbing it.

Although World Power was extremely helpful, it needed to be absorbed before it could be properly utilized.

Undertaking this process without a strong foundation was guaranteed to be dangerous.

Therefore, Liam had no choice but to leave for the moment.
