Chapter 1272 The Mysterious Heartbeat

After a ten-minute journey, Liam arrived at the mission site through the teleportation array.

Right then, the mission details updated once more.

Liam's brow furrowed as he read the new information.

He learned that this remote planetary system wasn't just not inhabitable; it was rich in resources.

This meant many unique plants and herbs could grow here.

However, lately, nothing would grow at all in this planetary system.

Every herb planted had mysteriously withered and died.

Liam's task was to find out why and fix the problem.

As he absorbed the mission briefing, Liam's expression grew serious.

He believed this task was going to be a tough one.

He expanded his spiritual power, letting it flow across the entire planet.

Something felt wrong, so he focused more intently on the surroundings.

Sure enough, after a careful scan, Liam discovered something strange.

The herbs and plants were withering because their life force was being sucked away as soon as they were planted.

This was something Liam had never encountered before.

Unsure of what to do, Liam called out to Emer in his mind.

When Emer responded, Liam explained the situation and added, "Emer, I haven't sensed any fragments of the Heart of Life on this planet. So, whatever is causing the plants to die isn't connected to the Heart of Life. Do you know why this is happening?"

Emer listened carefully to Liam's words and began to ponder.

After a while, Emer said, "Master, I think the problem is with the planet itself. If the life force is pure enough, it can be compressed and replenished. I think this might be the cause of this abnormal phenomenon."

Liam immediately grasped Emer's theory and asked, "So, you're saying the planet has pure life force itself and is sucking the life out of the plants?"

Emer nodded, saying, "That's my best guess. The planet might be absorbing the plants' life force to gather more pure life force for itself."

Liam fell silent, knowing what to do now.

After disconnecting from Emer, Liam began to explore the planet.

Soon, he stopped in his tracks, unable to hide the look of shock on his face.

While he was exploring, he heard a sound.

That was a loud heartbeat!

Liam was stunned, his eyes wide with caution.

What kind of creature could have such a loud and powerful heartbeat?
