

Chapter 1385 New Teammates

After understanding the cultivation system of the Cosmic realm, Liam remembered it. Turning his attention to Lindy and the others, he introduced his companions with a warm smile, saying, "Before now, I was engrossed in my cultivation practices and didn't get the opportunity to introduce these two friends of mine. This gentleman here is Chad Bragg, and beside him stands Everett Burke. They're both esteemed at level seven as Primogem Kings. Just yesterday, I invited them to join our team."

Lindy and the others greeted Chad and Everett with nods and smiles, instantly welcoming them. Their credentials as level-seven Primogem Kings made them invaluable additions to the team, crucial for their survival in the perilous stronghold of the Titan Bugs.

After mutual introductions, the group's dynamics solidified, forging a more robust alliance as they shared their respective strengths and expertise.

Observing the team's newfound camaraderie, Liam seized the moment to say, "Now that you're acquainted, let's proceed!"

With unanimous nods, they moved deeper into the stronghold of the Titan Bugs.

En route, Liam prompted Chad and Everett to acquaint themselves with the Gilbson family's sword array.

After all, Chad and Everett were the strongest in the team. If they could master the techniques of the Gilbson family's sword array and join forces, taking down the leader of the Titan Bugs —a formidable level-nine Primogem King—would be well within their reach.

Shiloh and Trudy, on hearing that Chad and Everett were keen to learn the Gibson family's sword techniques, had no objections. They were even eager to demonstrate the critical maneuvers and strategies.

Within half a day, Chad and Everett had proficiently learned how to wield the Gibson family's sword array.

Liam then asked everyone to take a break.

Considering their precarious position within the stronghold of the Titan Bugs, and with the location of their adversaries unknown, it was essential to keep their strength at its peak.

Seizing the moment, Chad and Everett approached Liam to discuss the next steps.

After pondering for a moment, Liam said, "It appears our best strategy is to draw as many cultivators as possible to our cause. The stronghold of the Titan Bugs brims with unforeseen dangers, and there are too many Titan Bugs here. Amassing a larger group will significantly enhance our odds of accomplishing this mission."

Chad and Everett were lost in thought. Then, with a slap on his thigh, Everett declared, "That's easy! Many friends of Chad and I have already accepted this mission. Given that our team is short-handed, why not invite them to join us? United, our chances of success will surely increase."

Liam and the others were pleasantly surprised to learn that Everett and Chad had numerous friends already stationed within the stronghold of the Titan Bugs. Their spirits lifted immediately.

Liam nodded in agreement. "Fantastic! Please, get in touch with your friends now. Thank you so much for this."

Chad and Everett chuckled. "You're welcome. We are allies now. To ensure the success of our mission, joining forces is indeed the right course of action."

Without delay, Chad and Everett reached out to their comrades via the Network of Human Sovereign, directing them to their current location. Then, they eagerly awaited the arrival of their friends.
