

Chapter 1395 Killing The Remaining Titan Bugs

After Caden had effortlessly killed the King of the Titan Bugs, the remaining Titan Bugs no longer posed a threat to Liam and his team.

However, Liam and his comrades didn't let their guard down. After all, the stronghold of the Titan Bugs housed more than just one Titan Bug with the strength of a Primogem King.

Therefore, Liam and his teammates took a moment to recuperate and restore their strength to its peak. After that, they proceeded to clear out the remaining Titan Bugs throughout the territory.

In truth, except for Lindy, Annabella, Shiloh, and Trudy, all the other Primogem Kings on the team were well aware of the real reason why Caden had stepped in to save them.

In their eyes, Liam was their amulet.

If Liam hadn't been there, though Caden might have still intervened, he certainly wouldn't have appeared as early as he had when the King of the Titan Bugs had shown its lethal intent. Caden likely would have wanted to wait and see if the team could handle the challenge on their own.

The Human Clan's senior leaders generally let the younger generation fend for themselves. They believed it was important not to interfere excessively in their development, allowing them to face even potentially lethal challenges on their own.

In their mind, those coddled from hardship would not survive in the unforgiving world. The Human Clan prized resilient and capable individuals, not those who needed constant protection.

In other words, the team had achieved a miraculous feat by surviving this ordeal unscathed, and it was all thanks to Liam. His presence ensured that Caden would intervene in time, for which Lewis and the others were immensely grateful.

Of course, they didn't resent Caden for doing what he had done. As the Lord of Rosefinch, Caden couldn't always be there for every member of the Human Clan.

With the King of the Titan Bugs gone, the remaining Titan Bugs became disorganized and demoralized as expected.

The death of their king did not significantly reduce the overall strength of the Titan Bugs since the place was still populated with many Titan Bugs at the level of a Primogem King.

However, with their most formidable leader gone, the remaining Titan Bugs didn't know what to do and were easily defeated.

Seizing this opportunity, Liam and his team worked together to kill the Titan Bugs. Liam took this time to further hone his mastery of the "Fatal Hex".

Meanwhile, Shiloh and Trudy began the task of collecting the corpses of the Titan Bugs.

The Gibson family's sword array had not played a decisive role in the battle. Nevertheless, no one held any resentment towards Shiloh and Trudy. They were comrades who had shared both triumphs and trials together. Everyone understood that sticking together and surviving as a team was no small feat.

Moreover, the Gibson family's sword array was a closely guarded secret of their lineage. The fact that Shiloh and Trudy had been willing to deploy such a valuable resource in battle made the others feel grateful.

This gesture of trust made Shiloh and his sister especially respected.

Our ads aim to provide better support for authors.

