

Chapter 1430 Getting The Fragment Of The Heart Of...

Liam was gripped by anxiety, fearing the item he had dredged from the lake depths might not be the Heart of Life fragment.

Because of this, Liam felt almost too apprehensive to open his eyes and look at the object in his hand.

But as soon as he saw what he was holding, his expression transformed from worry and curiosity to joy.

There in his palm lay exactly what he had yearned for—the fragment of the Heart of Life.

Suppressing a surge of elation, Liam carefully inspected the fragment.

The piece, about the size of a thumb and entirely green, lay quietly in his palm, radiating tremendous life force.

Liam had never encountered such an overwhelming life force before.

The thrill of holding the fragment of the Heart of Life was overwhelming.

His journey had been fraught with danger. He had faced countless hardships to obtain this fragment.

After enduring many trials, suffering from the lake's repelling force, and nearly losing his life beneath its waters, he had finally secured the Heart of Life fragment. It was only natural for him to feel overjoyed.

Yet, Liam remained cautious. His excitement didn't cloud his judgment; he knew better than to merge with the Heart of Life fragment immediately.

After all, he was well-versed in the art of merging fragments of the Heart of Life.

With his extensive experience in previous fusions, Liam knew that the fusion process would require a considerable amount of energy.

Given his current condition, akin to that of someone severely injured, attempting to merge with the Heart of Life fragment could easily lead to danger.

For this reason, Liam decided against rushing the fusion. Instead, he resolved to first restore his strength to its peak before attempting to merge with the Heart of Life fragment.

Liam's body was now marred with numerous injuries, and his overall condition was far from perfect.

His mental state had deteriorated from the extended duration at the lake's depths.

Fusing the fragment of the Heart of Life recklessly now could have disastrous consequences, a risk Liam was unwilling to take.

So Liam allowed himself a brief period to recuperate. He sat cross-legged on the ground and closed his eyes, focusing intently on regaining his strength.

His body, having achieved the "Silver-Form Body" level, possessed a robust physique, enabling rapid healing of his wounds.

The recovery took half a day. After that, Liam opened his eyes.

Although not fully restored to peak condition, he was now significantly better than when he had been on the brink of collapse.

The lake, immersed in the Heart of Life's energy for years, was rich with life force.

Simply sitting by the lake had sped up Liam's recovery.

But this natural advantage only modestly quickened his recovery. For complete healing, he knew he needed more focused seclusion.

Once Liam felt a noticeable improvement in his condition, his excitement overcame his patience. He pressed the Heart of Life fragment against his chest, prepared to initiate the fusion.

