

Chapter 1437 Alterations

As Caden consented to proceed, he initiated a special mission to explore the No. 396 planetary system via the Network of Human Sovereign.

Simultaneously, across the Rosefinch Galaxy, qualified cultivators received notifications about this new mission.

Yet, the mission details for them had been subtly modified by Caden, even though the name of the mission remained the same. The details were nothing like what Liam had received before.

Originally, the mission had involved surveying both the gray and white zones of the No. 396 planetary system. It had now been narrowed to include only the white zone, shifting the focus away from exploring the differences between the two zones.

The revised mission criteria required participants to collect water from the lake in the white zone and deliver it to the Network of Human Sovereign for points.

Caden also set a strict limit on the amount of water that could be collected from the lake. Exceeding this limit would result in severe penalties, including a deduction of points.

Despite these limitations, cultivators from throughout the Rosefinch Galaxy were eager to participate.

For many, this mission was an effortless way to earn points. They just needed to collect lake water and submit it to the Network of Human Sovereign.

It posed no visible risks.

Consequently, thousands of cultivators accepted the mission soon after receiving it.

Meanwhile, Liam, already in the white zone, had secured the lake water he planned to carry back with him and was gearing up to depart.

However, his departure did not mean leaving the No. 396 planetary system entirely.

He was merely planning to leave the white zone to explore more of the planetary system.

Given that this planetary system harbored both the Death Power domain and a fragment of the Heart of Life, it hinted at other potential discoveries.

This was merely Liam's theory. But whether or not there were other treasures, he had already made significant gains here.

He had obtained a fragment of the Heart of Life and mastered the Death Power domain.

His power had significantly increased because of this.

If further opportunities arose, Liam was well-positioned to seize them.

Regardless of the outcome, he knew he was in a no-lose situation. He was poised to be the greatest beneficiary no matter how events unfolded.

Upon exiting the white zone, Liam assessed the remaining time to finish his mission in the No. 396 planetary system.

He had ten days here in total.

Having spent significant time absorbing the Death Power domain and integrating the fragment of the Heart of Life, he found himself on the ninth day now.

This left Liam just a day to submit his mission.

Provided there were no unforeseen delays, he anticipated no difficulties in meeting the deadline.

Although the things Liam had gained in the No. 396 planetary system greatly surpassed the potential loss of 2,000 mission points for a late submission, he naturally preferred to meet the deadline.

Chapter 1438 Stop

As Liam was transitioning from the white to the gray zone, prepared to delve deeper, he caught a movement.

There wasn't any imminent threat.

Liam just spotted a large group of people rapidly approaching from a distance.

This left Liam somewhat shocked.

He had been in the No. 396 planetary system for nearly ten days.

Yet, during this time, Liam hadn't come across any other members of the Human Clan.

For a brief moment, he wondered if he was hallucinating.

But upon closer inspection, Liam confirmed the reality of the approaching group.

They were indeed real.

Relieved, Liam assumed these people were also participants of the special mission. Liam had harbored genuine concerns that something unforeseen might occur during his time here.

Without dwelling on it, he naturally assumed these individuals were part of the same contingent, having entered the No. 396 planetary system for the special mission. They likely hadn't met earlier because he had gone directly to the mission site upon his arrival in the planetary system.

Liam believed these people were probably here because of the commotion caused by his absorption of the Heart of Life fragment. Thus, he didn't give this much thought.

He refocused on the gray zone, ready to explore further.

Yet, as he stepped into the gray zone, unaffected by its lethal aura, the group's attention sharply shifted towards him, their expressions altering markedly at that moment.

One man, looking particularly astonished, called out, "Hey, stop!"

Liam turned, his brows slightly furrowed and his tone detached. "What's the matter?"

After the past incident about Jason, Liam had learned that while unity was common among the Human Clan in the Cosmic realm, there were exceptions.

So, he always maintained vigilance when interacting with strangers.

The man, sensing Liam's impatience, maintained his smile and asked, "Buddy, how did you manage to enter that area? My friends and I tried earlier, but we couldn't withstand the deathly aura of the gray zone. You, however, seem unaffected."

A flicker of caution passed through Liam's eyes.

He hadn't anticipated that a simple oversight of him would reveal so much.

Yet, Liam could tell the man harbored no ill intentions; his inquiry had stemmed from pure curiosity.

This realization allowed Liam to relax slightly.

His tone softened as he replied, "I carry certain artifacts that protect me from the deathly aura."

Carefully, Liam chose not to disclose the fact that he mastered the Death Power, not wanting to face any danger because of this.

Rate the book using the stars!