

Chapter 1445 Discipline Them

By now, Liam had amassed a total of 110 days of free cultivation time in the training field.

Lindy and the others had told Liam that it was prudent to conserve this free training time until he ascended to the Primogem King level for maximum benefit.

Heeding their advice, Liam chose not to use these free cultivation days for the time being.

Thinking of his duel against Joseph tomorrow, Liam felt reluctant to relinquish the points he had diligently gathered. His plan was to spend today in seclusion within the cultivation chamber to prepare for the duel.

He had explored other strategies to mitigate potential point losses.

Yet, these alternatives were far from ideal.

One such method involved using all his points to secure additional training time or to purchase items through the Network of Human Sovereign.

This would minimize his points to an extent where even losing the duel would not cause much damage to him.

However, this tactic felt like conceding defeat before the battle even began.

While it was a prudent strategy, Liam believed that few would willingly deplete their hard-earned points for this.

After all, this would mean completely resetting all the points they had painstakingly accumulated from various tasks.

People often clung to a glimmer of hope in such situations; thus, although feasible, Liam had never heard of anyone actually employing this method.

Liam decided not to use this method because he was confident in his abilities.

Meanwhile, the City Lord became aware of the impending duel between Liam and Joseph via the Network of Human Sovereign.

Caden, present during this revelation, appeared displeased. Joseph, a celebrated genius of the Rosefinch Galaxy, had often been given leeway by Caden for his arrogance due to his talent.

Caden had not anticipated that Joseph would provoke Liam this time. Although Joseph's intentions weren't lethal, his evident covetousness towards Liam's possessions was undeniable.

This made Caden feel deeply embarrassed, his face flushing with humiliation.

The City Lord glanced at Caden, noting his agitated state, and understood his thoughts perfectly. With a casual comment, he said, "It appears the youth of the Rosefinch Galaxy indeed need some discipline now."

Caden's face remained grim, but he nodded vigorously in agreement with the City Lord, assuring him, "Rest assured. I will ensure these self-important geniuses are properly disciplined."

The City Lord gave a slight nod and fell silent thereafter.

However, his eyes sparkled with curiosity, indicating his keen interest in Liam's upcoming duel.

From what the City Lord knew about Liam, it wasn't entirely out of the question for Liam, currently at the ninth rank of the Primogem Expert level, to challenge someone at the fourth rank of the Primogem King level.

This was, of course, merely speculative on the City Lord's part.

He was unsure of the duel's outcome.

But one thing was certain: if Liam lost to Joseph, he would not intervene to prevent Liam from losing his points.

After all, if Joseph emerged victorious, it would be within the rules and might even serve as a lesson for Liam not to be overly confident in himself.

Meanwhile, in the main city, Liam found himself at the entrance of the training chamber, his mind filled with thoughts.

He proceeded to the low-level training field and spent 1,000 special points to secure one day of cultivation time at ten times the normal rate.

