

Chapter 1475 Four Strangers

Caden knew deep in his heart that his concerns were not without cause; he wasn't merely rambling aimlessly, nor was he worried about Liam choosing the wrong path.

His real apprehension was that Christos might persuade Liam to join the Sanctuary of Human Sovereign.

The City Lord had explicitly instructed Caden that if the Rosefinch Galaxy wished to secure the promised special privileges in the future, they must ensure Liam became the City Lord's apprentice.

If Liam were to be swayed by Christos, the loss for the Rosefinch Galaxy would be monumental.

This was why Caden had said those words to Liam.

When he saw Liam's earnest agreement, a wide smile of satisfaction spread across his face. He clapped Liam on the shoulder, a look of pride radiating from him as he exclaimed, "Good! Young man, I knew I didn't misjudge you!"

Liam was still confused by his words earlier but didn't say anything about it.

Caden quickly resumed his serious demeanor after his praise.

He cleared his throat and said, "Actually, the reason I called you here is that I have another task for you."

Liam had suspected earlier that there was more on Caden's mind than just explaining the military merit system, especially since Caden had requested his presence on the battleship.

After all, he could figure out the matters of the military merit system over time on his own.

However, Caden's words earlier had distracted him so much that he had momentarily forgotten his initial suspicions.

Now, with the topic reintroduced, Liam straightened up and responded, "What is the task?"

Caden rose from his seat, walking slowly toward the battleship's exit.

Seeing this, Liam promptly got up and followed him.

As they walked, Caden turned to Liam and said, "Let's step outside first. I'll explain everything once we meet someone."

With that, Caden stepped out of the battleship, and Liam followed closely behind, stepping into the dark void of space.

Only then did Liam notice the four massive battleships surrounding the one he and Caden had been on earlier.

Although these four battleships were not of the Venerable Emperor Level, they were nonetheless Divine-King-Level vessels.

Soon, Liam saw four figures approaching—two men and two women.

Each of them bowed deeply before Caden and greeted him respectfully.

A thrill of anticipation stirred in Liam's heart.

He noticed that the aura surrounding each of the four people was remarkably stable, a clear indication that they had each mastered their own domains.

Such stability could only be achieved through diligent and sustained cultivation.

This suggested that these four people were not only skilled but also exceptionally talented.

While Liam could not ascertain their exact ages, he surmised that none of them was over 150 years old.

In front of these four, Caden resumed his serious demeanor.

He acknowledged the four people with a composed expression, saying, "You can all get to know each other first."

Everyone nodded in agreement. An older man among the four people stepped forward to introduce himself to Liam.

"I am Alexis Patterson, a level-nine Primogem Expert, specializing in fire law power."

Liam's gaze shifted to Alexis, detecting a distinct domain aura. It appeared Alexis had mastered the domain of the metal law power.

Although that was considered a second-tier power within the domain hierarchy, it was still undeniably valuable.
