

Chapter 1480 Dispute

However, Liam's suggestion failed to garner unanimous support from the other four members of the team.

After all, they were not familiar with Liam and were therefore hesitant to trust his judgment.

Alexis furrowed his brows slightly and asked in a serious tone, "Liam, why are you so sure about that?"

Alexis's question clearly expressed his skepticism toward Liam's decision, demonstrating his reluctance to accept Liam's guidance without further clarification.

At that moment, Gabriela also chimed in, "Yes, Liam, if you want the team to follow your lead, you need to provide some reasons. We're here to search for the law power of Nocturne. We can't just go somewhere based on your speculation. If we discover the law power, that will be good; but if not, wouldn't it be a wasted effort?"

Liam understood the concerns of Alexis and Gabriela and acknowledged that their reservations were reasonable.

Although he was personally selected by Caden for this mission, he had no prior relationship with the other four, making their reluctance to trust him understandable.

Besides, each member of the team was talented and very skilled.

For Liam to earn their unconditional trust, he would need to demonstrate something extraordinary to them.

Unexpectedly, Cataleya held a different view from Alexis and Gabriela. She smiled slightly and supported Liam, saying, "I actually support Liam's suggestion. We have no clues about the whereabouts of Nocturne's law power. Rather than searching aimlessly, it's better to start somewhere. Even if we don't find it based on Liam's guess, we can always continue our search from there."

After Cataleya expressed her stance, everyone turned their gaze towards Hilliard, who had been silent.

Hilliard understood the gravity of the discussion and immediately snorted dismissively, saying, "Is it really worth our time to follow the lead of a ninth-level Primogem Expert? How reckless! Does Liam truly comprehend the myriad creatures and demons lurking within the secret realm? Does he think we are now still as shielded as we were back in the Rosefinch Galaxy? The only reason he was selected by the Lord of Rosefinch is he likely has some unique insight into law power. But considering we are all experts in our own domains, why should we listen to him?"

Hilliard's words were sharp, and it was evident to all that he was hostile to Liam.

In fact, Hilliard's rejection of Liam's proposal stemmed from jealousy. Cataleya, whom Hilliard had long pursued, had just voiced her support for Liam, much to Hilliard's displeasure.

Liam's brow furrowed at Hilliard's biting words.

Each member here had been chosen by Caden for their exceptional talents, and it was uncommon for them to direct such acrimony towards one another.

Liam surmised that Hilliard's affection for Cataleya and his envy of her backing him were likely the catalysts for his vehemence.

Regardless of Hilliard's underlying motives, Liam's demeanor grew icy. Given Hilliard's irrational stance, he saw no merit in prolonging the debate.

With a dismissive snort, Liam declared, "Fine! If you so disdain my judgment, then let us go our separate ways here! We shall pursue our paths independently, and whoever first uncovers the law power of Nocturne can bring it back!"
