

Chapter 1572 Assassin Clan

Thanks to Caden's influence, the karmic bond between Liam and the Soulsky Clan gradually weakened.

Slowly, Liam felt his body grow lighter, as if a weight had been lifted from his shoulders. Just then, Caden said, "I have now completely severed all your connections to the Soulsky Clan."

Liam opened his eyes, feeling gratitude swell within him. "Thank you for your help, Lord of Rosefinch!" he said sincerely.

Caden let out a warm laugh. "No need to be so formal. I've watched you progress every step of the way, and I am confident that someday, you will surpass even me. I'll likely need your help in the future."

"I'll never forget what you've done for me, Lord of Rosefinch," Liam said earnestly.

Katherine, who had been watching from the side as Caden talked with Liam, couldn't help but let out a sigh.

Caden really lucked out on this one!

To have a bond like this with Liam meant that Caden's future would be nothing but smooth sailing.

Still, Katherine took comfort in the fact that both her grandson and great-grandson had a good relationship with Liam as well.

Then, as if something had just occurred to him, Liam asked Caden, "By the way, Lord of Rosefinch, when Farris pulled me into that consciousness space earlier, he mentioned something about a Dremer race's hit list. What does that mean?"

Katherine's eyes went wide with shock when she heard this. "Wait, what did you just say, Liam? The Dremer race's hit list? You're saying you're on that list?"

Liam nodded. Since he was the one who brought it up, he didn't see a reason to hide anything. "Based on what Farris told me, yes, that seems to be the case," he said.

Katherine's expression turned grim before she suddenly turned to Caden. She glowered at him despite his status.

"Caden, you old fool!" she scolded, pointing at him accusingly. "You just love sending Liam on these dangerous missions, don't you? Now he's on the Dremer race's hit list! After all this, do you think you even deserve his trust at this point?"

As Caden was getting chewed out by Katherine, he didn't dare argue back and simply fell silent, lowering his head like a kid being scolded.

At that moment, Liam realized that being on the Dremer race's hit list must be seriously bad news for him.

Otherwise, Katherine wouldn't have lost her cool like this. Caden wouldn't be looking like this, either.

Liam understood what Katherine was talking about. She was clearly talking about when Caden had sent him on that mission to rescue Nocturne's law power.

Liam didn't hold it against Caden, though. After all, he had seen firsthand how hard Caden had worked to train him.

If anything, it was probably his own impressive performance in battle that caught the Dremer race's attention.

Once Katherine finished her long scolding, Caden finally seemed to snap out of it. He turned to Liam in surprise, realization dawning in his eyes. "Liam, did you say that you learned about the Dremer race's hit list from Farris?"

Liam nodded.

Caden's expression suddenly turned grim.

"So that's it. I knew it!" he muttered to himself. "No wonder the Soulsky Clan's emissary always comes here whenever someone from the Human Clan is put on that list. It seems that the Soulsky Clan has been the Cosmic realm's assassin clan all along!"
