

Chapter 628 The Exposure Of The Traitor

After tidying the battlefield, Liam activated his specialized intercom and sent the coordinates to Mehdi's team.

He couldn't help but respect the efficiency of Mehdi's men.

Upon getting Liam's signal, they showed up with remarkable swiftness.

Gesturing to the chaotic scene, Liam commanded, "Strip the fallen for their clothing. Swap out your weapons, too, and make it quick!"

His team was puzzled, unclear about Liam's plan. To maintain the element of surprise, Mehdi had kept them in the dark, instructing them to simply follow Liam.

Liam offered no clarification. He merely instructed those who were ready to take cover.

His watch silently counted the passing minutes.

His watch silently counted the passing minutes.

As twilight descended, Liam, positioned on a hill, had a clear line of sight to Aaron and Fiona, who had acquired the rare-earth mineral. They were now within their ambush zone.

"Time for action. Shoot, but don't injure anyone," Liam directed emotionlessly.

Suddenly, a flare shot skyward.

Echoes of gunfire and yelling filled the air as they sprayed bullets near Aaron and Fiona.

Upon Liam's command, they carefully aimed their shots, making sure to hit only the ground near Fiona's feet.

Fiona's expression shifted dramatically. Before she could even draw her weapon, several dark gun barrels were already aimed at her head, courtesy of a well-executed surprise attack.

The location was ideal for an ambush. Fiona had no chance to find decent cover.

In less than thirty seconds, the two of them found themselves surrounded.

While Fiona appeared somewhat rattled, Aaron remained composed despite the gravity of the situation. He boldly stepped out of their makeshift prison as soon as they were surrounded.

Liam had already issued commands to his squad, not stopping Aaron's actions.

Witnessing this unfold, Fiona grasped the situation. With quivering lips, she questioned, "Mr. Montgomery, are you really..."

Though Fiona had harbored some suspicions after speaking with Liam, seeing the reality nearly shattered her composure. She couldn't bear to think that Aaron, usually so dependable, could be a hidden traitor within their team.

In the midst of the turmoil, Aaron missed Fiona's word "really." He glanced at her and exhaled resignedly. "Don't hold it against me, Fiona. I'm backed into a corner."

With that, Aaron turned around and commanded, "Proceed!"

He couldn't bear to watch Fiona die.

However, the anticipated gunshot never echoed. His expression twisted in confusion. Whirling back around, he found multiple gun barrels aimed at his head.

Caught off guard, Aaron yelled, "What's the meaning of this? Don't you recognize me?"

Just then, Liam's voice broke through. "We know exactly who you are, a traitor in the resource team!"

Emerging from the shadows, Liam advanced toward Aaron, his eyes filled with disappointment.

"Your scheme is a bust. I've already neutralized the Black Spider's ambush unit. Everyone here is on my side. You stand no chance."

Aaron's face registered disbelief, but Liam's arrival obliterated any lingering illusions.

A whirlpool of emotions engulfed him, leading Aaron to a sudden, manic laughter. His energy seemed to wane. Once a man in his prime, he now appeared old. He crumpled to the ground.

"So, this day has finally arrived!"
