

Chapter 684 Rivals' Party

Upon hearing this, the old lady felt a surge of anger.

Sea God Island had been isolated from the everyday world, undisturbed for ages.

Slamming her cane onto the ground, she summoned a band of native islanders. They emerged swiftly, clad in fur and holding wooden crossbows, their gazes hostile toward the intruders.

Sarai acted as the spokeswoman for the old lady, declaring, "We mean you no harm. But don't push us. Whatever your business is here, don't disrupt our way of life!"

Casting a dismissive glance at the islanders' rudimentary weapons, Adelina saw them as mere child's play.

"If you don't know your place, perhaps it's time I taught you!" she sneered.

Then, drawing a pistol, she fired a shot that shattered the old lady's cane.

Simultaneously, her well-armed subordinates advanced.

"Listen, old woman. If you value your life, don't test me," Adelina warned menacingly.

Javier could no longer contain himself. He stepped forward, exclaiming, "Miss Sandoval, your family is one of the four great clans. Bullying these defenseless islanders? Aren't you concerned about becoming a laughingstock when you return to Invone?"

Adelina scoffed, snapping back, "Javier, quit playing the saint. This isn't your concern. Stay out of it!"

Javier's expression turned grim, but before he could respond, a voice emerged from the crowd.

"I've often heard tales of the Sandoval family's grandeur. I never had the opportunity to witness it on the mainland, but how fortunate I am to see it here on this remote island. Truly, I'm impressed!"

The speaker's blatant sarcasm didn't escape notice, causing Adelina to spin around with anger. Her fury only deepened when she laid eyes on the person!

Standing before her was the man she despised the most, the very person who had brought shame upon the Sandoval family on her wedding day. It was Javen!

"Ah, I was just wondering how to track you down. How convenient that you've shown up here, offering yourself up for death," Adelina sneered.

She quickly scanned her surroundings, confirming that Javen was alone.

A murderous intent surged within her.

"Star Team, it's your moment to prove your worth to our mission. Eliminate this man!"

Beside her, Timothy wore a complex expression.

He was aware that Javen was Liam, who was very powerful.

Every encounter with him left Timothy not only impressed by Liam's abilities but also decidedly worse for wear.

The Sandoval family's elite force might not even stand a chance against Liam.

Plus, there was an opportunity to acquire the Hoffman family's assets without raising alarms. Why confront Liam directly and take the risk?

Still, as much as Timothy was hesitant, he couldn't forget that he was Adelina's husband, and her word was law. Besides, his lackluster stance against Liam at the wedding had already cost him Adelina's favor.

Defying her again might mean losing his place in the Sandoval family before securing the property of the Hoffman family!

So, after weighing the pros and cons, Timothy chose
