After the meeting, Liam promptly made his way back to the Hoffman family's residence.

At this moment, the turmoil in Invone began to wane. Even though Rohan had escaped, the newly empowered Liam wasn't fearful of him.

The situation of Invone was now stable. Liam was confident that Rohan couldn't cause further chaos.

Shortly after, thanks to the senator's mediation, the Hoffmans swiftly secured reparations from both the Sandoval and Padilla families. The Hoffman family rapidly regained its former prowess. They stood undisputed as the leading family in Invone.

Sergio felt a deep satisfaction, realizing a dream he'd held onto for years, lifting a heavy burden from his shoulders.

During the Hoffman family's internal conference, Liam broached the subject of the primogem to Sergio, inquiring if it was familiar to him.

Sergio's face clouded with uncertainty. Despite Receiving no insights, Liam chose not to press further, resolving to research on his own later.

Suddenly, Sergio proposed, "Speaking of which, my great-grandson hasn't been named, has he? Since we're all gathered, let's give him a name."

This aligned perfectly with Liam and Julie's intention as they had previously discussed it.

At that instant, Liam suggested, "What about Asher? It symbolizes that he, like the Hoffman family, is destined for a bright future."

After pausing briefly, Sergio chuckled. "Sure, then let's call him Asher."

As she exited the hall, guilt washed over Julie. Despite the improving circumstances, her rash action had nearly cost Liam his life.

For what felt like ages, their relationship had been unstable. But now, they had finally overcome all obstacles and were expecting a child again. Her deepest wish was for Liam to be by her side daily, living a fulfilled life.

Gently caressing Julie's hair, Liam soothed her, "That's all in the past. I promise we'll have our wedding soon. And this time, it will be a big one. Every notable person in Invone will witness our wedding, alright?"

Julie's eyes sparkled as she nodded. "Whatever you decide."

Back in their room, Julie clung tightly to Liam.

The upheaval in Invone had kept them apart for so long. Overwhelmed by emotion, she pressed her lips against his.

Her actions grew bolder, her fingers tracing paths on Liam's skin. The thought of being away from him again soon made her gaze even more tender.

Liam was clearly affected, but he held back slightly. "Julie, we shouldn't. It might harm the baby."

Growing even more passionate, Julie started undressing Liam, gasping. "It's fine. I spoke with the doctor. I'm three months along, and our baby is doing well. There's no risk."

Liam's restraint was waning. With Julie's words fueling his desire, he couldn't resist any longer.

At that moment, Julie removed her clothes. Liam carefully laid her on the bed, then slightly propped himself up.

"Ah..." A contented moan filled the room.
