

Chapter 768 Tensions Flared

Three days later, the test commenced.

Liam, accompanied by Emmeline, swiftly made their way to the designated spot in the central area to assemble, awaiting the commencement of the test.

In a reassuring tone, Emmeline consoled Liam, "Liam, don't be anxious. I have faith in you."

Liam replied with a grin, "With your encouragement, I won't falter."

No external individuals were permitted to access the testing site, so Emmeline gestured her support to Liam and slowly left.

There was already a significant crowd at the gathering area by this point. Dozens of individuals had gathered, their gaze focused on Liam.

The reason for this attention was straightforward: Liam, a participant in the test, was on a crutch.

Conversations and speculations circulated within the crowd about Liam's identity.

"Who's this guy? I've never seen him before."

"I'm not familiar with him, but he seems quite audacious. Coming here on a crutch, does he not understand the severity of the test?"

"Who knows? Perhaps he's just a fool. He'll be out of the competition shortly after it starts."

Rumors flowed through the crowd, but Liam paid no mind to them. He remained unperturbed by others' opinions, his thoughts entirely focused on what he needed to do once the test commenced.

After Emmeline left, Bryan, who had been eyeing her greedily in the crowd, shifted his attention to Liam.

Bryan taunted, unbridled, "I knew Emmeline had a man at her home. Today, I discover that you're handicapped. I can't believe you'd come to the test in this condition. Don't you realize the tough nature of the test? Are you expecting someone to take pity on you?"

Liam merely gave him a cold glance and had no intention of engaging with him.

Seeing Liam's lack of reaction, Bryan grew bolder and sneered. "Since the test hasn't started yet, you'd best leave now, or you'll end up completely incapacitated when it does."

Fueled by anger, Liam moved closer to Bryan, relying on his crutch.

Despite his limp, he exuded an air of authority. After giving the crowd a disdainful look, Liam said icily, "I have no idea where this dog came from, but it's making quite the racket."

Bryan, being young and impulsive, was incensed and moved closer to Liam with his comrades.

Bryan didn't cease his hostile approach until they were just four paces apart. However, he refrained from taking any further action.

In the central area, it was prohibited to engage in physical altercations, as per the Salvation Society's regulations.

Especially now, with the test set to commence, many prominent figures within the society were closely monitoring the situation. Any violation of the Salvation Society's rules would result in expulsion from the island or even death on the spot.

Bryan threatened, "Loser, I'm determined to join the Salvation Society. Emmeline and her mother will be mine eventually. Since you don't appreciate my advice, I'll make you a sex slave."

Liam maintained his icy composure and refrained from engaging in a fight in this unfamiliar setting. He feared causing more trouble.

He thought to himself that Genesis Island wasn't that vast, and Bryan couldn't escape. Liam figured it was better to confront Bryan after the test.

With a cold expression, Liam said, "I suggest you focus on making it into the Salvation Society this time."

Taken aback by Liam's response, Bryan gritted his teeth and replied, "Fine, we'll see about that."

He then turned around and left with his men.
