

Chapter 879 Strict Conditions

Witnessing Liam's response, Niko's joy was evident. However, behind his facade, he harbored even more disdain for Liam.

"Liam is truly a simpleton. Offer him a tiny benefit, and he falls for it right away," he muttered scornfully under his breath.

In an attempt to appear magnanimous, he mustered a fake smile and turned to Yesenia.

"Yesenia, it was indeed our fault before. To compensate your family, just ensure Julie signs this contract, and I'll reward you with five million."

Echoing Niko's charade, Doyle added, "Auntie, uncle, five million is a fortune for your folks. Imagine the comfort it'll bring to your lives."

In a conniving collaboration, the duo seamlessly wove a deceptive narrative, portraying themselves as benefactors to Julie and her family.

Liam, however, cut through their charade with a derisive chuckle. "Niko, Doyle, your sincerity is as thin as paper. Just five million? I think it's time for you both to leave. If you can't sign the contract, Derek won't be lenient."

he falls for it right away," he muttered scornfully under his breath.

In an attempt to appear magnanimous, he mustered a fake smile and turned to Yesenia.

"Yesenia, it was indeed our fault before. To compensate your family, just ensure Julie signs this contract, and I'll reward you with five million."

Echoing Niko's charade, Doyle added, "Auntie, uncle, five million is a fortune for your folks. Imagine the comfort it'll bring to your lives."

In a conniving collaboration, the duo seamlessly wove a deceptive narrative, portraying themselves as benefactors to Julie and her family.

Liam, however, cut through their charade with a derisive chuckle. "Niko, Doyle, your sincerity is as thin as paper. Just five million? I think it's time for you both to leave. If you can't sign the contract, Derek won't be lenient."

Niko, though seething inside, plastered a fake smile on his face.

He started to say, "Liam, five million is quite substantial..."

Cutting him off, Liam retorted, "Five million is indeed substantial, but I bet the benefits you'll reap from this contract far exceed that, right? Either make a more substantial promise or consider our negotiations over!"

With a dismissive wave, Liam feigned ushering them away.

Niko's reluctance surfaced. Teeth clenched, he swiftly offered, "Fine! After Julie helps us sign the contract, I'll give you ten million. Satisfied?"

But reluctance marred his face. Half of his twenty million fortune would now go to Liam's family.

Yesenia, however, was thrilled by this offer. Grabbing Liam's hand, she urged him to agree.

But Liam, unmoved, shook his head. "Ten million won't cut it!"

Faces changing, both Niko and Doyle were taken aback. Doyle exclaimed, "Liam, don't push your luck!"

Mockingly, Liam continued, "So, do you want to leave now?"

Silenced by Liam's words, Niko and Doyle reconsidered their stance.

Liam proposed after a momentary silence, saying, "Aside from the ten million, you also need to make Julie a senior executive in the Williams group. If you don't agree to it, you can leave now!"

Niko and Doyle exchanged dismayed glances. Finally, Niko reluctantly agreed.

"Fine! I'll recommend Julie as the marketing director of the group! Is that acceptable, Liam?"

Liam, seemingly satisfied, responded, "It sounds good to me."

After the two schemers hurriedly presented the prepared contract to Julie for her signature, Liam, with a smug expression, watched their hasty departure.

Having secured the contract, Niko and Doyle contemplated how to renege on their promises.

The notion of extending genuine benefits to Julie was a mere facade from the start. At this moment, Niko's scheming mind began to churn, contemplating the intricate web of deceit he would weave to go back on his promise.

After they left, Yesenia, delighted by the turn of events, beamed with joy. She couldn't help but envision Julie's success within the Williams family's group.

Approaching Liam, she asked, "Liam, how did you know Niko and his son would come to apologize?"

"Simple. I had Tristan handle it," Liam replied.

Upon hearing this, Yesenia's disdain surfaced. "Do you really believe Mr. Murray would listen to you? Spare me the boasting, Liam. Tell me the truth."

Liam, realizing his words held no weight, fabricated a reason.

"Tristan publicly gave Julie the contract in front of the city's elites. But it was another company that tried to sign the contract with him. No one would like that, would they?"

Only after hearing this did Yesenia and Julie grasp the situation.

Julie, elated, couldn't help but express her gratitude. "Thank you, Liam!"

Yesenia scoffed. But contemplating the ten million and Niko's pledges, she conceded, "Not bad, Liam. You played smart this time!"

Meanwhile, Newell exchanged an excited look with Baxter.

Julie joining the Williams family's group meant more opportunities for them to communicate with her, a step closer to their ultimate goal.