

Chapter 939 Wait For The Right Moment

Liam checked the message, chuckling and rolling his eyes.

He decided to let Carsen do whatever he wanted.

Right now, he just wanted things to cool down a bit.

He was waiting for the right moment.

Taking down the Dark Gang was Liam's way of showing off the Five-Star General's strength and his stance on the Hoffman family. He wanted other Salem families to get the message loud and clear.

Liam's gaze became serious.

Just two days were left till his big feast.

By then, everything he had lost would have been returned.

Those who had messed with him would seriously regret it!

The next morning, Carsen's message popped up, confirming Liam's expectations.

The Dark Gang's wipeout shook up the whole Salem's underground world.

After all, the Dark Gang was the big shot, but some mysterious force had taken it out. That was some serious power!

Word spread fast among Salem's influential families.

The head of the Morphew Family, sitting at the top, told everyone about the Dark Gang's downfall at an emergency meeting.

Then, he said sternly, "The Dark Gang had Kingland Group's and the Hoffman family's backing. Getting wiped out like this means someone big shot is pulling the strings. Who in Salem has that kind of power?"

An elder in the family thought for a moment and said, "I bet it's General Carsen making these moves. No one in Salem, except for him, could take down the Dark Gang that easily!"

This comment got people talking in the hall.

"Looks like General Carsen's throwing down the gauntlet against the Hoffman family."

"But I don't buy that this is all General Carsen's doing."

"Are you clueless? The General's making a bold statement about the Hoffman family. It's plain as day!"

Hearing the different opinions, the head of the Morphew Family caught on. He raised his hand, signaling for silence.

Then, he said, "General Carsen's not beating around the bush. His stance on the Hoffman family has been made crystal clear. Starting today, no one from the Morphew Family member is to be involved with the Hoffman family. Anyone who breaks this rule will face punishment!"

This Morphew Family gathering was just a snapshot of similar talks happening across Salem that night.

These families, already big players in Salem, recognized the Dark Gang's wipeout as a Five-Star General's message.

The General's strength this time made these families shiver. They knew it was meant to make them see the situation for what it was.

In response, these families started gearing up to align themselves with the Five-Star General.

Meanwhile, over at the Hoffman family's residence.

Gallagher sat in the family hall, his expression dark. He noticed the hush among the family members and then rumbled in a low voice, "Speak up. Why do you think the Five-Star General wiped out the Dark Gang?"

This got the silent members talking.

"I reckon he's gunning for the top dog spot in Salem. We're thriving here, making us his main competition!"

"Exactly! He sees us as his rival, and that's why he's trying to keep us down!"

"Isn't this a bit much? The Five-Star General might be a big shot in the military, but this is Salem. Our Hoffman family's roots run deep here. Trying to bully us with force is downright disrespectful!"

"Yeah! If push comes to shove, we can face him head-on. We've got our own backers, after all!"

Listening to the chat, Gallagher's brow furrowed deep.

Even though the Hoffman family had major clout in Salem, they were peanuts in the eyes of the Five-Star General. It made more sense to keep the peace unless absolutely necessary.

After all, Gallagher hadn't crossed paths with the General yet, and he wasn't sure if his planned partnership strategy would be acceptable to him.

Gallagher's gaze turned cold as ice as he considered a possibility.

Maybe the General's flexing had been orchestrated by the Governor, Bowen.

Convinced he had cracked the code, Gallagher slowly said, "Looks like we need to pay a visit to the government office ourselves. If the Five-Star General's really looking to swallow us up, we've got no choice but to bring out that big shot! The Hoffman family's journey to today has not been a walk in the park! We will not be defeated easily!"
