Chapter 131

After hearing that, a woman's face appeared in his mind, and his hand stopped caressing her back.

Lucia? How could he think of her at this time? August frowned and lowered his eyes to reassure Jeanne.

"No. I will keep my promise to you."

"Really?"

Jeanne lifted her eyes, her large eyes shining with tears.

"Will you marry me?"

"Emm."

August answered.

But there was a surprising difference between this answer and the previous ones. It was now as firm as before.

As soon as he calmed Jeanne's emotions, he coaxed her into eating some porridge sent by the caregiver.

Looking at the relaxing side face of Jeanne sleeping in bed, August finally felt relieved.

He had been caring for her like this many times since she was sick, and he really owed her this.

August pressed his forehead and walked out.

He gently closed the door with his hand and turned around to see a man standing next to him.

An iron-gray suit encased the handsome, tall man, but his face exhibited almost a sickly pallor.

An evil expression appeared on the man's face as he raised an eyebrow at August.

"Mr. Adams, long time no see."

Upon recognizing the man in front of him, August narrowed his eyes slightly.

Surprisingly, it was Jeanne's biological elder brother - Merlin Kelly.

Merlin Kelly's lips curled up into a smile, but his gaze was still cold.

He stepped forward, sizing up August, and said in a cold voice, "August, how could you treat my sister like that?"

When Lucia turned around and saw August standing at the door, her back tensed and her body stiffened. She had specially come with the lunchbox when there were few people so as not to bump into him, but unexpectedly, she was caught right in the middle of it.

August was holding a document in his hand.

When he saw her, he raised his eyes to glance at the lunch bag on his desk and asked with his lips parted, "What is it?"

Lucia clenched her hands tightly and said casually, "Nothing special. I made too much bento this morning...so I brought you some."

Hearing that, August looked a bit less cold. He stepped forward and took a glance at what was on his desk, asking, "You made bento? Since when did you start to do this?"

The last few times when he was at her place, she had always slept until she woke up naturally in the morning, but today she got up early and prepared the bento. It was really like having the sun come up in the west.

Lucia could tell that the man was teasing her.

Unable to argue, she just curled her lips and said, "If there's nothing else, I'll leave now."

Seeing that the man had no reaction, she started to step outside, but before she reached the door, she thought of something and stopped.

"By the way, what is the company going to do about Ted?"

Ted had been caught in bed with another woman by his wife Lilian Stebbing.

The scandal was still a hot topic online and kept on making headlines.

It was the last straw for the marriage between Ted and Lilian Stebbing, which existed in name only now.

The Kellogg family was making noise about divorce and property division, and Ted hadn't shown his face for days.

August's face darkened slightly when Ted was mentioned.

After a few seconds, he said in a cold voice, "The company is checking the accounts of the Eastliner Trading. Ted's current whereabouts are unknown. I'm sure he can't stay at the Lion Group anymore."

The Eastliner Trading was a subsidiary of the Lion Group.

Lucia nodded thoughtfully when she heard his words.

Thinking of Irene, who was also involved in this matter, she wanted to say something but stopped.

August seemed to read her mind and said lightly, "Irene has been recuperating at home, and her uncle Mike has already handed in the resignation for her on account of this matter."

Hearing that, Lucia fell silent and said nothing about it.

She turned to glance at the lunchbox on the desk, saying, "Remember to eat it while it's warm."

Seeing the situation, Lucia frowned. She stepped forward to stand directly in front of Emma and raised her hand to gesture to the group.

"Be quiet. Please calm down, guys. Let's find out what's going on first."

If they went on like this, the problem would not be solved no matter what they said.

Hearing her words, the group got less and less noisy.

In the end, everyone fell silent.

Lucia looked at Emma and opened her mouth to ask, "Why didn't the Finance Department approve it, Emma? Did they tell you the reason?"

Emma held the documents in her hand and said in a low voice, "They said our documents were incomplete."

An impatient colleague next to her took the documents from Emma, checked them and said with a frown, "Incomplete? Last month, we applied for a budget with the same documents when we needed to buy a batch of office supplies, and they approved it. Why wouldn't they give us the money this time?"

Other colleagues took the documents to check and echoed, "Yes, I did the same thing before!"

Lucia took a look at the documents, feeling confused as well.

They had been doing the same thing on a regular basis, and there was nothing wrong with it.

"I think the Finance Department is doing this on purpose! They are finding quarrel in a straw, because they don't want us to get the quarterly bonus!"

"Come on! Let's all go together and ask the Finance Department why they won't give us the money!"

With those words, the colleagues immediately agreed and they all tried to rush out.

Lucia saw that things were not right. She frowned and hurriedly went forward to stop them.

"Calm down, guys!"

If they really stormed over because of this matter, they would fall into trouble.

Besides, the last thing the company wanted was a conflict between departments, and it wouldn't do them any good at work in the future!

David frowned.

Glancing at the woman in front of him, he was unsure of what to do.

This Lucia was not as weak as Mike said, rather he felt she was couple hardness with softness, not easy to mess with.

At this point, he had no reason to continue to make things difficult for Lucia, so he simply went along with Lucia's words, "I'll sign for you this time, but if you don't have all the documents next time, it's useless for you to say anything!"

Lucia bowed slightly at him and promised, "Okay, thanks."

After all the documents were approved, Lucia left the Finance Department, and her hand holding the documents was slightly hot.

Just now she was also not completely sure and she said to report to the President's Office was just to test David.

If it was like he said that this was all the leader's request, he could never easily compromise.

But in the end, he compromised, which meant that there was something wrong...

Could it be that Mike had really instructed him to do this? Irene had suffered a loss this time but didn't dare to speak up, so she definitely hated her and might say something in front of her family.

If she said anything about her in front of Mike, Mike would definitely do something about her.

But no matter what, the matter at hand was resolved.

At least she had finished what her colleagues in the Administration Department had given her, and she could only be more careful in the future.

When she returned to the Administration Department and just walked to the desk area, her colleagues stood up one by one and asked for the result.

Lucia smiled at them and raised the documents in her hand, "Don't worry, everyone, all the documents have been approved, but David from the Finance Department explained that our future documents will be approved only when they are full."

Once they heard that the matter was resolved, everyone breathed a long sigh of relief and had smiles on their faces.

Thinking about what happened earlier, Lucia wandered off a bit.

Soon, she was pulled back to reality by Paula's voice.

"By the way, Lucia, I brought you a dress. Hurry up and change after dinner later."

"A dress?"

Lucia, full of suspicion, looked down at the clothes she was wearing and asked in disbelief, "What's wrong with my clothes?"

The light lime V-neck shirt with the checkered bustier was much more mature than the jeans and T-shirt she had worn before.

Paula took a glance at her clothes and laughed out loud, "This is okay for work, but it's too conservative for a nightclub?"

When she heard the word "nightclub", Lucia subconsciously became a little nervous.

Since childhood, under the instruction of Mrs.Mitchell and Mr.Mitchell, she had rarely been to such places.

At most, she was taken to the bar by others.

Seeing Lucia's frightened expression, Paula couldn't help but laugh, "Lucia, it's already the 21st century.Why are you still so conservative in your thinking?"

Hearing Paula's mockery, Lucia was a little embarrassed and blushed, "No, I just don't want to go!"

Paula kept laughing and betting with her, "Then let's make a deal that you have to dance on stage later, or you'll have to punish yourself with drinking three glasses of wine!"

When it came to this, it was useless for Lucia to refuse.She casually responded and immediately changed the subject, "Let's go eat first and I'm starving."

Paula pressed the gas pedal and the car immediately went faster.

Hearing this, Paula suppressed the anger in her heart, glared at Gigi coldly, and sat down again.

Seeing the situation, the people around hurriedly pulled Paula and Lucia to play dice to ease the atmosphere.

Kirk also came up and persuaded, "We're here to have fun today. Don't take it so seriously. Fun is the most important thing."

When he said this, others immediately agreed, and the atmosphere gradually eased a lot.

Fortunately, Paula was very playful.

When it came to shaking the dice and drinking at the race, she immediately forgot the little episode just now and dragged Lucia to start playing with everyone.

Originally there were only a few people.

The more they played, the louder their voices became, which attracted the people next to them, and they joined in to play together.

Gigi watched them shouting and playing. She wanted to join for a long time, but she just kept drinking unhappily because of Paula.

"Gigi, why don't we go and play too?"

The woman sitting next to Gigi encouraged her to play, but Gigi's face changed when she heard it, "You can go if you want!"

With that, she got up angrily and walked toward the bathroom.

If she had known that Paula would come today, she wouldn't have come herself. She was having no fun at all.

When she came out of the bathroom, she saw from a distance that everyone in the circular sofa area had already formed a group and was rolling dice. She was even angrier.

While Gigi was stomping her foot angrily, Lisa on the other side saw all her movements.

Today, she invited a friend to play at Weske, but unexpectedly met an "old friend". She had noticed it when Lucia and Paula first came in.

Coincidentally, she also knew Gigi.

She was in the same yoga class as her before.

Seeing the situation just now, she roughly knew what was going on.

When she saw Gigi's resentful expression, she glanced at Lucia in the crowd, and a subtle cold

Their old classmates noticed that the situation was not optimistic, and they persuaded Paula and Lucia,
"Paula, take Lucia to sit down first, and we will persuade Gigi first."

Hearing this, Paula nodded immediately and took Lucia to the sofa.

Lucia's palms were sweaty, and she felt so uneasy, "Paula, am I in trouble?"

"With Gigi's character, she will not let go easily. Don't be afraid. No matter what happens, I will stand by you!"

Hearing her say this, Lucia was moved a bit. But at this time, she also had a hunch that this matter would not be solved easily.

Back in the sofa area, Lucia looked at the crowd gathering there from a distance and felt very anxious.

A few minutes later, after discussing it, everyone suddenly dispersed.

Gigi turned around and walked towards the door angrily.

Lucia was stunned for a moment, feeling puzzled.

Could it be that Gigi just left? She was wondering what was going on when Kirk suddenly strode towards her with a serious face, "Lucia, hurry up and leave. Gigi just said she wouldn't let you go!"

Before Lucia could speak, Paula asked, "What is she going to do?"

Kirk frowned deeply and said, "She went to call bodyguards."

Lucia froze.

When she raised her head again, she found that Gigi had returned. She walked towards her aggressively, followed by two tall and big bodyguards.

Paula cursed in anger, "Damn! What does she want?!"

Before they could react, Gigi came over. She stared at Lucia and signaled to the two bodyguards through gritted teeth, "It's her!"

The bodyguards stepped forward and tried to grab Lucia.

Kirk immediately stepped forward, "What do you want to do?!"

On the first floor of Weske, in the circular sofa area in the northeast corner, a group of people was silently confronting each other.

Such a situation often happened in nightclubs.

When there was no big movement, it did not prevent other people from continuing to drink and have fun.

Gigi stared at the watch on her wrist and saw that twenty minutes had passed.

She smiled coldly and glanced up at Lucia and Paula, who was being controlled by the bodyguards.

She said, "Twenty minutes are up. The game begins."

Paula was forced to sit on the sofa by a bodyguard.

She was burning with anger when she saw the smug smile on Gigi's face.

Burton had agreed to let her make three requests.

Now, this was the second one, and he didn't come here right away! She was wrong to pin all her hopes on him! Lucia took a deep breath, looked at Paula who was sulking beside her, and said to her in a low voice, "Paula..."

Seeing Paula turn her head, Lucia immediately winked at her.

At this time, if they couldn't bring reinforcements, they could only figure out a way on their own.

It seemed the best thing to do now was to leave as quickly as possible.

They had to give it a try, though they would be certainly called quitters.

The two were good girlfriends who had known each other for several years.

With a wink, they understood each other's intentions.

At this time, they didn't care whether it was embarrassing or not.

As long as they could escape, it would be worth it.

Revenge is a dish best served cold after all.

Paula gave Lucia a slight nod.

The two of them reached an agreement and turned around in unison, looking for an opportunity to run away.

But they seemed to underestimate Gigi's bodyguards.

Just as they were about to stand up, they were firmly pushed back into the sofa by the bodyguards.

Although she was reluctant, she listened to Lucia and shut her mouth.

But Gigi's face darkened even more.

She gritted her teeth and said, "Paula, don't be so cocky! Lucia, it's not the end of it!"

With that, she turned to look at a bodyguard next to her, and ordered coldly, "A-Chung, call someone!"

Today, she would like to see what Lucia and Paula were capable of! As soon as Gigi said that she was going to call someone, Lucia felt a little flustered.

It was originally a trivial matter.

She hadn't expected to get both August and Burton involved.

Gigi would not back down.

In this case, it would be more serious if the two sides were deadlocked.

Lucia was unsure of August's intentions.

She was a little flustered, and subconsciously tugged at his shirt.

August lowered his eyes, saw the worry in her eyes, and calmly reassured, "It's okay."

With him there, nothing would happen to her.

Seeing his deep eyes, Lucia suddenly calmed down a bit.

She took a deep breath, then reached out and gently held Paula's hand.

At this moment, August stepped forward, stared at the arrogant and domineering Gigi, and said solemnly, "Miss Robbers, just bring it on."

Even if she called in four or five more bodyguards, they probably would be no match for him and Burton.

Gigi glanced at him coldly and didn't answer at all.

Instead, she looked at the bodyguard next to her and urged impatiently, "Hurry up and call them! Tell them to come over!"

The bodyguard A-Chung held the phone and hesitated, "Miss Robbers, do you want me to call?"

He didn't know what August's identity was, but just by looking at his posture, he could tell that he was a man of background.

Hearing the strange conversation between them, she became more and more curious.

Even if August and Bishop were not real brothers, their relationship should not be as strained as it was now.

August's eyes were dark and cold.

He didn't answer, but asked nonchalantly, "Bishop, you don't have to pretend in front of me."

With that, he turned around and left quickly without hesitation.

Burton glanced at Paula next to him and followed silently.

Lucia looked at Bishop in the wheelchair and smiled at him awkwardly.

Then she took Paula, who was confused and turned to leave.

After walking a few steps away, Paula finally came to her sense.

She looked at Lucia curiously and asked in a low voice, "Lucia, is that August's younger brother just now?"

Lucia nodded slightly and remained silent.

"Damn!"

Paula sighed, "His younger brother in the wheelchair is so gentle and handsome! He even helped us out.He looks like a good person! Why did August treat him like that?"

Lucia took a deep breath and said softly, "I don't know much about the Adams family.Paula, don't talk nonsense in front of August."

She had experienced it herself and she could understand.

August was reluctant to say much about his younger brother.

If Paula brought it up abruptly, he would probably be mad.

After leaving Weske, the atmosphere was less tense.

Paula sighed and couldn't help but say, "I didn't expect to fall into Gigi's hands today! Well, just thinking about it makes me angry."
