Chapter 211 She Had Him In Her Heart

Burton frowned, and his voice was hurried, "The brakes aren't responding!"

When August heard his words, he instantly frowned. He immediately looked forward and saw Lucia standing on the road not far away. His face instantly turned gloomy.

Why didn't this stupid woman hide? As if there was telepathy, in the next second, Lucia quickly retreated to the side.

"Mr. Adams, sit tight!"

Burton gritted his teeth secretly and immediately downshifted to slow down.

If the brakes didn't work, he had to force the car to stop! Even though the gear was down, the car body still moved forward, but the speed tended to slow down.

But at this moment, another car approached, and it seemed that it was going to take the exit.

The driver didn't seem to notice the abnormality and continued to drive at a normal speed.

If this car went into the exit and Burton didn't stop the car, the two cars would collide! Seeing that the front of the car was about to smash into the rear of another car, Burton hurriedly turned the steering wheel to the side, and slammed into the wall as soon as the car turned around! Bang! With a loud noise, the front of the car hit the white wall, and the car shook a few times.

Not far away, Lucia stood there, completely dumbfounded.

After standing still for two seconds, she looked at the steaming front of the car, and her heart tightened instantly.

She ran over quickly.

"August...August!"

She hurried forward, not even caring about the debris on the ground.

She ran to the door of the car and pulled the door open with great effort.

When she saw August bleeding in the back, she instantly burst into tears! "August! How are you?!"

She cried and carefully grabbed his hand, but felt warm and sticky.

Seeing the blood gushing from his head, she panicked, and her whole body felt weak.

She continued in a trembling voice, "August, please! Wake up..."

When Lucia saw that August, who was always cold and arrogant, was bleeding, her heart tightened, and it was aching.

Looking at Lucia's movements, August secretly smiled and raised his chin slightly to drink.

After being fed a few sips of water, he suddenly remembered something, looked a little serious, and asked, "Where is Burton?"

Lucia paused and quickly said, "He's in the ward next door. His injuries are not serious, but his head is slightly injured. I went to see him, and he was already awake."

Burton was in the driver's seat back then, and the airbag popped out when the car hit the wall.

So he was naturally not as badly injured as August.

August nodded slightly, feeling a little relieved, but he was still frowning.

After a few seconds, he looked at Lucia beside him and said softly, "Help me up."

Lucia hesitated, "But you..."

August said without hesitation, "It doesn't matter."

He knew something about his body.

Besides, the car accident was not serious this time, because the speed of the car was not fast.

If the car had driven out of the parking lot and picked up the speed on the road, he could not imagine what would have happened.

Lucia helped him up slowly, put a pillow behind him, and was about to ask him when to call the doctor over when she found August staring at her solemnly.

"What...what's wrong?"

He seemed different now.

His expression darkened, and he asked word by word, "Why did you come to stop the car?"

"I..."

Lucia took a deep breath and told him what she had heard on the stairs and the things she had encountered.

"When I heard my colleague say that you were going to a meeting in the Eastern District, I thought of those words I had overheard. I was afraid that something would happen, and I couldn't get through when I called you, so I had to run over to stop the car..."

After Lucia said this, August's face became more and more gloomy.

He frowned, and thought about what she said over and over in his mind.

Seeing that he was okay, she left the ward.

When she was hesitating about whether to go back by herself, Joshua suddenly opened the door open and walked out.

He smiled at her and shook the car key in his hand, "Let's go.
I'll take you back."

Lucia nodded politely at him, "Well, thanks."

After coming out of the hospital and getting into the car, Lucia didn't say anything.

After all, she and Joshua were not very familiar with each other.

But Joshua was the kind of person who couldn't stand silence.

After waiting for a long time without Lucia speaking, he couldn't stand it anymore.

He took the initiative to find several topics, but Lucia lacked interest and responded casually, without any desire to continue the conversation.

When she thought that August was still lying in the hospital, she was not in the mood to chat.

Joshua saw that she was not interested, so he shut up and stopped talking.

Soon, the car stopped at the gate of the community, and Lucia said softly, "Here I am.

Thanks."

"You're welcome."

Joshua smiled, glanced at her, and said suddenly, "If you are worried about August, go to the hospital to see him another day."

He moved slightly closer to her, blinked, and said, "I'll tell you a secret.

August likes fish soup when he's sick."

Lucia was stunned.

After two seconds, she smiled at him, got off the car, and closed the door.

Stepping into the community, Lucia was a little dazed, and the words Joshua had said just now flashed in her mind several times.

Since August liked the fish soup, should she learn how to make the soup? The thought just flashed in her mind.

But in the next second, she immediately dismissed the thought.

After leaving Lucia's apartment, Paula rushed to the hospital.

When she found the ward according to the floor and room number given by Lucia, she stood at the door and suddenly hesitated.

Wouldn't she seem too proactive? She had lived for more than twenty years and it was the first time that she had ever taken the initiative to care about a man.

Thinking about it, Paula stood at the door for a long time and finally made up her mind.

She planned to take a look at him through the door and leave when she saw that Burton was okay.

She pressed her body against the door and tiptoed to look inside.

Although she could see through the glass, this was a VIP ward, so she couldn't see everything inside.

From her angle, she couldn't see much.

Maybe...she should move to the side? Paula moved to the far right of the glass window, squinted her eyes, and looked in, but she still couldn't see the person on the bed.

"Hello? Do you need any help?"

A female voice suddenly came from behind.

Paula was shocked and turned around quickly.

Seeing a nurse standing behind her, she smiled a little awkwardly, "I'm...looking for someone, but it seems the wrong person. I'm sorry."

With that, under the suspicious gaze of the nurse, she had to bite the bullet and walk to the side.

At the same time, in the ward, Burton was lying on the bed when he heard a sound from outside.

He somehow had a strange premonition.

Was it Paula? The voice he had heard just now sounded like hers! He immediately sat up straight, picked up his phone, and made a call immediately.

In the past few hours tonight, he was lying in bed and had nothing better to do.

He wanted to make this call countless times and listen to her voice, but he finally dropped the idea.

Even today, when he was sitting in the car and the car hit the wall, Paula's face flashed in his mind.

She Was Flustered And Shy

Seeing the sudden change in August's face, Joshua smiled smugly, and finished his sentence, "It's Lucia's friend, Paula."

Hearing this, August gave him a cold look, then lowered his head and continued to read the documents.

Seeing so many different reactions from him, Joshua walked to his side and sat down with crossed legs lazily, "Your face has changed so fast! I've never seen you treat a woman so special before. As soon as you heard her name..."

"Is it special?"

August raised his eyebrows and tapped the tablet computer casually, "I just owe her, nothing else. You don't need to imagine so much."

August's voice was cold and harsh, and his face did not change much, as if he was stating a fact.

Joshua raised his eyebrows, and leaned in slightly, "Do you think Lucia will come to see you tomorrow?"

After a pause, he said again, "How about we make a bet?"

Hearing Joshua chattering in his ear, August frowned slightly, looked up at him, and asked coldly, "Joshua, don't you have nothing better to do?"

He was boring and gossipy.

Joshua didn't get angry, but chuckled, "I came personally to ensure your safety, or I would be having fun with girls now."

August glanced at him, and said coldly, "Be careful not to get sick."

Joshua's romantic temperament had not changed in the past few years. But he was not without advantages.

When it came to business, he was dead serious.

Joshua didn't care.

He raised his chin and continued to talk about the topic just now, "Seriously, I think if Lucia comes tomorrow, it can completely prove one thing. She has you in her heart"

He had deliberately revealed August's preferences to her today.

If she cared about August, she would come to see him with fish soup the next day.

But if she didn't have him in her heart, it would be a different story.

When August heard this, he chose to remain silent and ignored him, but he couldn't help wondering whether Lucia would come tomorrow.

Chapter 216 She Brought Fish Soup To Visit Him In The Hospital

The next day, at dawn, Lucia got up from bed.She put on her clothes, ran downstairs to the supermarket, bought a fresh fish, and ran back to the kitchen at home.

Last night, she followed the tutorial on her phone and learned to cook fish soup.

Although it was not a failure, the taste was average.So she deliberately got up early and planned to cook again.

The relationship between her and August was not very good, but when she thought that he had helped her solve her father's operation problem, this pot of fish soup was nothing.

Besides, if she learned how to cook soup, she could cook it for her parents.

August was her guinea pig at best.

Thinking of this, she felt a lot more cheerful, and immediately quickened her movements and boiled a pot of water.

Lucia was busy cooking in the kitchen for more than an hour.

The fish soup was almost finished and looked delicious. It was exuding an appealing aroma and it looked quite good.

Lucia took a sip and nodded with satisfaction.

Compared to the fish soup she had cooked last night, this time it was so successful.

After putting the fish soup into the insulated lunch box, she changed her clothes and rushed to the hospital.

She specially prepared two, one for August and the other for Burton, so that no one would complain.

Walking to the door of the ward, she knocked on the door before she pushed the door open and walked in.

In the ward, August was sitting on the bed with a laptop in front of him. His face was serious as if he was working.

Hearing the sound, he looked up and saw Lucia in a light blue shirt walking in with two lunch boxes in her hands, looking silly but cute.

August retracted his gaze, looked at the computer screen, and said coldly, "Well, that's it.

We'll talk about the rest when I get back to the company"

After giving a brief instruction, he turned off the computer, put it aside, and looked up at Lucia.

Hearing this, Lucia secretly breathed a sigh of relief, but she could see that August was not quite right, "What's the matter?"

August pursed his lips, and said in a cold tone, "My mother always made this soup for me."

Lucia was stunned. She suddenly thought of what Joshua had said and realized something.

This was the first time she had heard August mention his mother.

Although it was just a simple sentence, her heart sank.

She took a deep breath and blurted out, "If you like it, I'll cook it for you again in a couple of days."

When August heard her words, he raised his eyes and looked at her with deep eyes.

At this moment, the door of the ward was suddenly pushed open, followed by an anxious voice, "August, why are you..."

Jeanne rushed in anxiously.

When she saw Lucia standing beside the bed, she suddenly froze and fell silent.

Lucia was also stunned for a moment. She hadn't expected Jeanne to appear suddenly. She was also a little nervous and somehow felt a little guilty.

Jeanne's eyes stayed on her for a short time.

She turned to August on the bed, stepped forward anxiously, and hurriedly asked, "August, how are you? Where are you hurt?"

August said lightly, "I'm fine."

"I just came back from Sulan Island with my mother. When I got off the plane and heard that you had an accident, I rushed over immediately."

Jeanne's voice was a bit complaining and trembling, and she was almost crying, "Why didn't you tell me?"

When August raised his eyes and saw her teary eyes, he softened a little, "I don't want you to worry. I'm fine."

Jeanne kept crying and fell into August's arms, and complained, "You didn't tell me, so I'm more worried!"

Chapter 218 She Wanted To Fall in Love

When Lucia heard this, she opened her mouth in embarrassment, but couldn't answer.

At this moment, Paul's gentle chuckle came from the other end of the phone, "Are you also in a bad mood?"

"Sort of..."

Lucia paused and realized something, "Paula is not in a good mood?"

She didn't know what was going on between her and Burton.

Paul raised his eyes when he heard a sound, glanced at Paula who was walking towards him and said, "Indeed, she has a cold face and doesn't talk to me."

"Oh, she's here. I'll give her the phone."

He raised his hand and handed the phone to Paula.

Paula frowned and was about to ask why her brother was answering her phone call when she saw the caller ID and found it was Lucia.

She immediately took it over and said, "Lucia?"

"Paula, come out to chat tonight?"

"Okay, I was about to ask you out. I didn't expect you to call me first."

After a few words, the two reached a preliminary consensus.

After hanging up the phone, Paula looked up at Paul, and her face turned cold again, "I'm going out with Lucia tonight. So I won't go back with you."

Paul raised his eyebrows slightly, took a sip of red wine, and said, "Which bar are you going to? I'll take you there."

Paula was stunned for a moment, and then quickly denied, "What bar?! Who said we're going to a bar?"

Paul smiled, as if he had expected her to react like this, and said slowly, "I know you're in a bad mood. Forget it this time. I'll take you there. When the chat between you girls is over, I'll go pick you up."

He knew his sister's character too well.

She had been wild outside the country.

Now that she had returned from abroad, he thought he should put her under control. This time, since it was Lucia who brought it up, he would allow her once.

Paula pushed the empty wine glass forward and smiled brightly at the bartender at the counter.

This was the third glass she had drunk.

Seeing this, Lucia had a bad premonition in her heart.

So she quickly held her hand and smiled at the bartender, "No need. It's enough for her."

If she went on drinking like this, she would probably start going crazy again.

"Lucia, don't stop me. Just let me have a good drink!"

Paula leaned her head on Lucia's shoulder, and suddenly babbled, "Tell me, why do I always think of Burton?"

In ten minutes, this was the fifth time Lucia had heard her mention his name.

Lucia lowered her head and pretended to be serious, "Paula, I have to tell you something. You like him, but why did you turn him down?"

"Who likes him?! I don't!"

Paula waved her hand and continued, "Why did he take advantage of me and not make it clear? What does he think I am? Also, even if he confesses his love, he can't be too casual. I'm a proud woman, and he must take me seriously!"

Lucia looked at Paula who was leaning on her shoulder and kept mumbling and knew that she was drunk again.

But from what Paula said, she roughly guessed what was going on.

Paula's family conditions were good.

Paula had been spoiled by her parents and her brother since she was a child.

Later, she went abroad to study music. She had a little fame and some achievements.

Although she looked carefree, she was proud.

After all, as Paula's good friend, she knew too well that Paula was a person who had perfect requirements for love.

She wouldn't treat temporary attraction and ambiguity as love especially when Burton hadn't confessed his love for her.

Chapter 220 She Fell Asleep In The Car

As soon as Paula saw him, she lowered her head in a guilty conscience, "I seem to have caused trouble for Lucia again..."

Seeing Lucia's slightly swollen cheek, Paul blinked, and he quickly asked, "Lucia, what's wrong with your face?"

Lucia turned her swollen cheek away and said, "It's okay. Paula got drunk. Take her back."

Seeing this, Paul didn't need to ask any further questions. He had guessed what was going on and reached out to take Paula. He knew his sister's temperament well. He generally didn't allow her to go to nightclubs or bars because he was afraid that she would cause trouble.

This time, it was rare for him to approve it. She went to the bar run by her good friend but still made trouble.

He frowned, turned to look at his subordinate not far behind, and commanded coldly, "Take a taxi to take her home."

His subordinate nodded and helped Paula into a taxi.

Lucia took a deep breath and forced a smile, "Paul, you can go back. I can go home by myself."

"I'll take you back."

Paul's tone was firm.

Looking at her slightly swollen cheek, he somehow felt a little distressed in his heart.

How could a man bear to watch his beloved woman get hurt? Lucia raised her eyes and was about to decline, "No need..."

Unexpectedly, Paul suddenly grabbed her arm and walked to the side. He smelt pleasant, which somehow made her feel safe. He took her across half a block and stopped at the door of a pharmacy.

Paul let go of his hand and looked back at her, "You wait here. I'll go buy you some medicine."

He walked into the pharmacy.

After a short while, when he came back, he had a tube of anti-swelling ointment and some cotton swabs in his hand.

Lucia's heart warmed. She hadn't expected that he would bring her to buy medicine first.

Paul smiled at her and said slowly, "Let's go. Get in the car and apply it. There are too many people here."

Hearing this, Lucia was slightly startled.
