Chapter 331 Cross The Rubicon

After a while, Lucia was out of her trance.

"Are you serious? You are the landlord of this apartment?" She asked again in disbelief to confirm it.

"Yeah."

Raising his brows, August answered inadvertently.

Lucia felt that it was hard for her to accept the fact that the apartment she had lived in for months was his property literally...

And, she couldn't help wondering the reason why he leased his apartment to her at an unusually cheap price.

Could it be possible that he had some ulterior motive for that? The thought struck her great and she took a step back immediately.

"Do...do you have any ulterior motive for leasing me your apartment?" She asked him vigilantly.

August snorted at her words and got further close to her.

"Tell me, do you think you are worthy of any special intention of me?"

Are you a raving beauty? Do you have a terrific figure? Or you are richer than me?"

A volley of questions from him choked her words for a long time.

Speech after a long silence.

"If so, why you ..."

Lucia spoke passionately.

"Just because I was ashamed and uneasy of myself. It was just a little favor, you don't have to take it seriously."

August, saying, laid a glance at her swiftly.

With a complete somersault of her heart, Lucia tasted the bitterness in his words when she got his words straight.

Lucia breathed deeply in order to hold the negative emotion hanging in her mind back.

Lucia woke up early in the morning the next day.

The sun had just shed its glory on earth.

Lucia prepared everything she needed and headed out. She went to Is zoom Movie Studio by car. She had checked Jonathan's itinerary in advance and she knew that he needed to participate in a shooting this afternoon.

Therefore, she arrived early and waited. She had been Jonathan's temporary assistant, and many crew members knew her.

Perhaps it was why she was admitted even without a pass.

She rambled around the filming site and didn't find Jonathan.

After she asked a crew member, she knew that Jonathan's play began at three in the afternoon.

But he would arrive at the makeup room in advance.

Lucia walked to the makeup room.

She didn't see Jonathan after waiting for a long time in the corridor.

Just as she was to text him, she suddenly saw a row of people rushing over.

The head of them was Jonathan's agent, Suecy.

Behind her, it was Jonathan.

The followings were Jonathan's assistant, bodyguards, and dresser.

Jonathan was in the most eye-catching position.

Seucy caught sight of Lucia at first glance as Lucia was standing in the corridor.

She wrinkled and asked, "You again?"

Lucia smiled at Jonathan and said, "I'm here for Mr.Black.

I have something very important to discuss with Mr.Black."

The contract was her trump card.

With it, she could resign and escape from August, far away.

Lucia carefully put the contracts in her bag.

Then, she directly left Iszoom. She was taking bold and risky actions this day. She called Burton and attained the photos.

Then, she threatened Jonathan.

Any mistakes would doom her.

Luckily, everything succeed as she had wished.

Contract in her bag, she went back to her office directly. She then drafted an application for resignation and signed her name on it. She put the application along with the contracts in a document envelope.

After sealing the envelope, she handed it to Emma "Emma, please hand this envelope to Mr. Adams tomorrow afternoon. Do send it in the afternoon. I am busy tomorrow, and I won't come to the office."

Emma was confused and asked, "Why afternoon?"

Lucia took a deep breath.

In complicated feeling, she answered, "Because it would be the best time.I'll count on you."

Her flight was in the afternoon.

She had to make sure that she had boarded the plane by the time August received the documents.

It was the safest arrangement.

Although Emma was still a little confused, she nodded and agreed.

After settling down everything in the office, Lucia felt relaxed.

She left the company right at the clock-out time and went directly to the hospital.

She had told Paul that she was leaving in next day's afternoon.

After the contract was signed and official business were all settled down, she had only Bill and Elisa to worry about.

She asked tentatively about whether they wanted to leave Austos City.

Chapter 334 Don't Judge a Book By its Cover

The terrifying thought flashed in Lucia's mind.

The next second, she felt she got goosebumps all over her body.

Fear arose from deep down.

If her guess was correct, the target of the bike that Jeanne had sent wasn't just to destroy her, but to kill the baby in her womb as well.

To Lucia, Jeanne had always been a kind and generous woman. She didn't expect her to be so...

Paul could tell that there was something on Lucia's mind, so he called her quietly, "Lucia, are you alright?"

Lucia quickly came back to her senses. She didn't know when, but her hands had turned ice cold. She raised her head and looked at Paul.

A mixture of feelings arose in her heart.

"Was it...really her?"

Paul hesitated for a moment and looked as if he didn't want to tell her the truth.

However, after a short pause, he took out his phone from his pocket, displayed the message and showed it to Lucia.

"This is what my men found from the street surveillance near Lion Group. Mark had a short conversation with the man on the bike. Just over an hour later, you were injured. I ordered someone to track the man on the bike, but he seemed to have disappeared."

Lucia raised her head and looked at the man wearing the helmet on the picture. It was indeed the man who had run her over that day with the bike.

The man next to him looked a little familiar.

Lucia had a feeling she seemed to have seen him somewhere.

Lucia took a deep breath to calm herself down. She suddenly remembered that she had seen the man on Jeanne's wedding.

The man was organizing the waiters to change the fruit plates.

This meant that he really was on the same side as Jeanne.

The last bit of hesitation disappeared from Lucia's heart. She bit her lips hard and accidentally bit too hard.

A faint taste of blood appeared in her mouth.

This was when Lucia realized that she shouldn't judge a book by its cover.

Chapter 335 Final Two Hours

When she came out of the district, Lucia walked to the road with her suitcase and waited for Paul to arrive.

After waiting for a while, Paul was nowhere to be seen.

Lucia was hesitant to make a phone call to ask, when a black car drove towards her.

The car pulled over in front of her, the window was rolled down and Lucia saw a completely unfamiliar face.

The man in the driver's seat was the first to ask.

"Excuse me, are you Ms. Mitchell?"

Lucia nodded somewhat hesitantly.

"I am, is there something wrong?"

The man explained without haste, "There was a situation at the company, Mr. Thomas is busy dealing with it, so he asked me to come and pick you up first..."

Lucia hesitated for a moment, glanced at the watch on her wrist, saw that time was getting late, and she said, "Okay."

The man in the car smiled and immediately got out, took the suitcase in Lucia's hand and put it in the trunk.

Lucia looked at her phone and was hesitant to send a message to Paul to ask about this car when the driver opened the car door for her and gave her a "please" gesture.

Lucia could not delay any longer, so she smiled at the driver and bent down to get into the car.

After getting into the car, she raised her eyes to look at the driver sitting in the front seat, took a deep breath and asked, "Are you the new driver? How come I haven't seen you before?"

The driver smiled and said, "I'm not new, I was mainly responsible for the company's side of things, so it's normal that you haven't seen me before."

Just as the car drove to the intersection, stopping for the traffic lights, the driver took out a bottle of water from the side and turned his head to hand it to Lucia.

"Here, have some water."

Lucia took it with a smile and politely replied, "Thank you."

But at this time, her right eyelid "suddenly" jumped twice, instantly, a strange feeling of unease surged to her heart, she subconsciously raised her eyes to look at the driver, could not help but pick up the phone next to her, sent a message to Paul.

Lucia's eyes widened in shock as she looked down at the sea.
When she woke up just now, the sea was just above her feet, but now, it was already up to her calves.
At this rate, two hours later, she would be completely submerged in seawater.
The place where she was tied was on the ladder of a lighthouse far away from shore.
Further up the ladder was safe, but with the rising tide, the ladder would be submerged, and then she would drown.
Realizing this terrible result, Lucia's body felt cold, she turned her head to look at the driver and asked through gritted teeth, "What the hell do you want?"
The driver laughed but didn't say anything.
He gave a signal to his subordinate, who immediately understood and handed him the phone with the recorded video.

The driver did not panic and tapped the screen, a moment later, he smiled and looked at Lucia and said, "You still have hope to live, I give you a chance, you can make a phone call now."

After Lucia heard those words, she frowned, and she felt more and more puzzled and confused.

If they really wanted her dead, then why would they give her a chance to save herself? Before Lucia could get her mind around things, the man had already pointed the phone screen at her.

"But, you can only call him."

Lucia raised her eyes and when she saw the contact displayed on the screen, her heart skipped a beat.

Surprisingly, it was August! She gritted her teeth and looked at the driver.

"What the hell do you want?"

The driver smiled and said unhurriedly, "Do you want to make the call or not? You have three minutes to decide for yourself, if not, then you and the little baby in your womb will both be fed to the fish."

After hearing those words, Lucia closed her eyes in pain.

Despair, melancholy and sentimentality all arose in her heart. She couldn't calm down at all. She wanted to live, she was just planning to start a new life, but now she had to face the choice of life and death...

"So, are you going to make the call or not?"

Lucia gritted her teeth and said with determination, "I'll make the call."

The gloomy sky was like a dull curtain, covering the entire sea from the end of the sight.

The sea breeze was getting stronger and stronger, rolling up the waves like a monster, pounding hard on the lighthouse.

Lucia only felt that every inch of her body was cold as ice.

The seawater had already reached her chest, and the pressure made her feel that breathing had become a little difficult.

With a strong wind, bean-sized raindrops came down.

The wind and waves in the sea tumbled more strongly, even the speed of the tide was becoming faster.

Lucia raised her eyes to look in the direction of the coast, where it was dark, only a little light could be seen further down the road, but those stars of light, at such times, could not give her any comfort.

Along with the numbness of the body, there were also nerves, Lucia's head was getting dizzy.

A big wave hit her and she blacked out at the impact.

Not far away, about a nautical mile away, August was still struggling to swim forward, but slowly, with the onset of heavy rain at sea, his limbs felt like they were made of lead, and was becoming more and more heavy.

August felt that the heat in his body was slowly running out.

His limbs were completely mechanical paddling forward, the most horrible thing was that August felt that his body was beginning to control.

He was a very good swimmer. He used to swim for more than two hours during training, but now the situation was completely different.

More importantly, he had some sort of fear for the ocean.

Ten years ago, when August was a teenager, it was also such a rainy night, he almost died in the sea.

Since then, he had a sense of fear for the ocean, more fear of swimming in the deep sea.

Lucia felt like she had a long dream in which she was in an endless sea without any signs of hope.

Suddenly, a strong wind created big waves and she was instantly submerged...

"No!"

Lucia screamed, opening her eyes.

All she could see was the white ceiling. She gasped like a beached fish and her forehead and back were already wet with sweat.

"Lucia!" said an anxious, familiar male voice.

Then Paul appeared with a glint of excitement in his eyes.

"Lucia, you're awake!"

Lucia took a deep breath and regained consciousness.

"Where am I?"

Paul answered immediately, "In the hospital. You've been kidnapped and frightened. You got a cold and had a high fever all night. It only broke this morning."

Lucia looked around and came to her senses.

The whole room was white. It was indeed a ward.

Lucia couldn't remember how she had been saved yesterday. Her throat felt dry as soon as she opened her mouth. She frowned and Paul handed her a glass of warm water.

"Drink some water."

Lucia nodded and felt better after finishing it in one gulp.

"What happened to me?" Paul frowned.

"You've been kidnapped. I got a message from the kidnappers and went to the beach to look for you yesterday. You were cold when I found you. I was so scared."

Bond nodded and typed quickly while Joshua's face suddenly darkened.

"August, what's wrong with you? You left the mission to the three of us yesterday because of a woman and asked Bond to find out where she is as soon as you woke up today..."

August turned to look at him coldly.

"I have my own plans."

After that, he walked away, leaving Joshua with a glum face.

In less than ten minutes, August changed his clothes, came down from the second floor, and approached Bond.

"Find anything?"

Bond shook his head in confusion.

"It's strange. It's like her recent whereabouts have been deliberately erased. I couldn't find anything."

August frowned uneasily.

'If I was really the only one on the beach yesterday, where did Lucia go? Was she taken by those people?' He had some guesses, but none of them made any sense.

After a while, he turned his head to look at Bond and said in a low voice, "I'll explain to Flynt about the lapse in the mission last night. Just do what you need to do."

Then he took a spare phone out of the drawer and called Burton directly.

Something dim moved in Burton's eyes.

Half a second later, he looked up at August and said seriously, "Nothing. There's just one thing I didn't tell you."

August frowned slightly.

"What is it?"

"Lucia approached me once privately and asked for the pictures I bought from the paparazzi of her and Jonathan. She only said she would get Jonathan to sign the contract, so I gave them to her without telling you."

August looked down at the contract on the desk with mixed emotions. It seemed that Lucia had tricked Jonathan into signing the contract.

August had given her only three days.

According to the date on the contract, she had gotten Jonathan to sign the contract on the last day.

August had promised Lucia that he would let her leave Lion Group if she could get Jonathan to sign the contract within three days. He hadn't expected her to succeed.

She had even sent him the contract and her resignation letter and disappeared without a trace.

'Turns out she's been planning to leave me since then!'

August's heart throbbed for a moment. He took a deep breath and looked up at Burton.

"Did you find anything?"

Burton shook his head and answered, "No."

August's face darkened.

Lucia must have left traces if she hid without help, but everything about her had been erased.

Someone must be helping her! Suddenly, August blinked and thought of Paul, who was the only one capable of fighting against him.

The next second, he picked up the suit jacket on the back of the chair and ordered Burton in a cold voice, "Get the car and go with me to Cloud Technology."
