Chapter 351 Be Her Model

After leaving the shopping mall, Paul took her into a small alley, meandered through a couple of streets, and arrived at a white two-story building.

For half a year, the walls were covered with creeping tiger plants, swaying in the wind.

Anybody that looked at it naturally felt refreshed.

"Here we are" Paul said when they arrived at the building.

Paul took Lucia to a side door next to them and pushed the door in.

There was a reclining chair close to the door with an old man sitting on it. Paul stepped forward and greeted the old man.

"Mr. Lester."

The old man was half-squinting his eyes and fanning himself when he heard the sound. He opened his eyes slightly, nodded at Paul indifferently, and closed his eyes comfortably.

Paul turned his head and smiled at Lucia.

"Let's go," he said to Lucia.

Lucia was a little stunned. She looked at the old man and followed Paul's footsteps hesitantly.

"Just go in like this, okay?" Paul told Lucia.

"He is Jennifer's father. Sometimes I come over to play chess with the old man, but his memory fluctuates. Sometimes when I say who I am, he may not recall," Paul added.

Lucia nodded, and as soon as Paul entered the house, he saw that the entire hall had been transformed into a small exhibition hall, with a set of dresses hanging in the transparent window, each with its characteristics and eye-catching detail.

When she saw the clothes in the window, Lucia couldn't hide the delight in her eyes.

She had spent her free time in Ameca studying, cultivating American businessmen, and paying close attention to the conferences of various major brands.

Gradually, her aesthetics improved and she became very picky about clothing.

And Jennifer's designs naturally made her eyes shine.

At this moment, footsteps suddenly came from the spiral staircase in the corner, followed by a female voice.

"Paul, long time no see," the female said cheerfully.

Lucia followed the sound of the voice, and saw a tall woman in the stairwell, wearing a loose white dress, with gentle eyebrows and no seriousness at all.

Paul looked at her and said with a smile, "Jennifer, I have something to ask you today."

Jennifer's eyes stopped on Lucia.

She raised her lips, walked down the stairs, said nothing, and scrutinized Lucia first.

Chapter 352 Encounter with Jeanne

Jennifer frowned slightly, and a trace of impatience flashed across her eyes. She was looking for a reason to put off Jeanne, but she didn't expect her to be relentless, and she lost the last bit of goodwill toward her. She had always disliked noisy people, and Jeanne's appearance of arguing with her assistant a while ago, did not portray her to be a high-class lady at all, it could be said that Jeanne had no manners at all.

Seeing that Jennifer didn't speak for a long time, Jeanne stepped forward confidently.

"Jennifer, forget about what happened just now, you are the most discerning, you should be able to see that I suit your style of this series very well. Right?" She said to Jennifer.

Jennifer looked at her, frowned slightly, and her face became very ugly.

At this moment, there were sounds of footsteps from the direction behind her.

Jennifer turned her head to look and saw Lucia wearing that red velvet dress coming out from inside.

Lucia seemed to have a soft light, and as soon as she appeared, she instantly attracted everyone's attention.

Time suddenly paused at this moment, and even Paul, who had been standing by the window, was stunned, unable to speak for a long time.

That skirt, as if it was specially made for Lucia, the red velvet texture complemented her fair and delicate skin, and every pleat and curvature of the skirt had an indescribable sense of elegance.

The size was suitable, and the temperament excellent, with an indescribable invisible extravagance.

Jeanne, who was standing at the door, was even more startled. She quickly regained her senses and looked at Lucia.

After a few seconds, she suddenly reacted.

She saw that this woman turned out to be Lucia! A strange fire rose in her heart instantly, like a boulder falling suddenly, hitting her chest directly, making it difficult for her to breathe.

How could it be her? Didn't she disappear? Why was she back? And how did she change so much? All sorts of questions poured into Jeanne's head, like a mess, and she was vague.

Jennifer was a little surprised when she saw Lucia's outfit.

After a few seconds, she reacted with an expression of admiration on her face, nodded slightly, and turned to look at Jeanne, clearing her throat.

"Sorry, Miss Kelly, she is my model," Jennifer said to Jeanne.

Chapter 353 Award Ceremony

After leaving Jennifer's studio, Paul sent Lucia to the door of her parent's house, warned her with a few words, and left in a hurry without even entering the door.

Watching him drive away, Lucia felt an indescribable warmth in her heart. She knew in her heart that Paul had a lot of things to do, all kinds of official business, but to be with her, he still found time to spend the afternoon with her. Her heart warmed, and she turned around and walked into the house.

Unexpectedly, as soon as she entered the door, she saw that Elisa hid by the window and looked out.

Lucia was a little puzzled, and asked while changing her shoes, "Mom? What are you doing?"

When Elisa heard the sound of Lucia's voice, she turned her head sharply and shivered in fright.

"Why didn't my son-in-law come in, you two quarreled?" She asked Lucia hurriedly.

Hearing what Elisa said Lucia couldn't help laughing.

"His company has something to deal with, so I let him go," Lucia replied.

Elisa nodded, stretched out her hand, and pulled her to the side.

"By the way, someone sent a bunch of flowers to the house today. Look, who sent it to you?" Elisa said to Lucia and asked her.

Lucia heard the words and followed her mother to the table, only to see a bunch of brightly colored sunflowers on the table.

Palm-sized flowers, blooming brightly. She stepped forward, saw a card inserted in it, picked it up and opened it, and saw a row of words on it.

"Long time no see, little assistant" the card read.

Lucia was taken aback for a moment, and when she saw this title, she frowned strangely. Little assistant?"

She wondered.

Although she had worked as an assistant in Lion Group before, everyone called her "Assistant Lucia", who would call her "Little Assistant?"

Lucia was confused and threw the card into the trash can, and then put the bouquet on the balcony next to it.

Elisa came over curiously and asked, "Who sent it?"

She had just received the trophy.
The man's fingers loosened, and His warm fingers passed over the back of her hand intentionally or unintentionally.
In an instant, a burst of numbness ran across the back of her hand, hitting her heart.

Lucia trembled nervously, her face flashed an unnatural look, she immediately retracted her gaze, looked down at the stage, and looked forward to the end of the awards soon. She didn't expect that August would give her the award.

The applause from the audience gradually became smaller, and then the host said again, "I believe that Mr. Adams, must have seen Miss Mitchell's works. I wonder what blessings and expectations he has for Miss Mitchell. With that said, the host handed the microphone to August, who was on the side.

On the other side, Lucia watched the man take the microphone, her heart almost jumping to her throat.

It was beyond her expectation that things had developed to this point.

The next second, the man's low and magnetic voice came out of the speaker.

"First of all, congratulations to Miss Mitchell for winning the Best Creative Award this time. This time, my expectations for Miss Mitchell..."

August said, slowly turning to his side and looking at Lucia. Lucia took a deep breath, plucked up the courage to raise her eyes, met his eyes, pretended to be calm, and smiled at him.

In the past few years, she has long practiced a standard smile, and even if she was upset, she could still show a perfect smile on her face.

And at this moment, Lucia smiled like this.

Facing the clear eyes of the woman, August's eyes sank, and a strange feeling arose in his heart.

Soon, he frowned slightly, his face turned cold again, and he withdrew his eyes and looked down at the stage, and finished the rest of his speech.

"I hope from now on, Miss Mitchell can tell fewer lies," Augustus said.

After saying these words, it was as if a bomb had been dropped into the calm lake.

She raised her eyes, met the man's gloomy eyes, and said softly with a smile, "So that's what you meant by what you said on stage just now..."

Seeing the woman's visibly relieved expression, August frowned, and his face darkened a bit.

"Otherwise, what do you think?" He asked.

Before she could answer, his eyes flashed quickly, and he asked in a cold voice, "Is it possible that you have something else to hide from me?"

Hearing this, Lucia's face suddenly turned pale, a trace of panic flashed across her eyes, and she subconsciously shook her head and denied it.

"No," she replied.

But it was precise because of her answer without any hesitation that August was more certain of the conjecture in his heart.

She had something to hide from him! August's face darkened a bit, his lips pursed into a line, and he was about to continue to ask, but Lucia suddenly stretched out her hand and pushed his hand aside.

Immediately afterward, she moved the chair in a panic, gave a worthy distance between the two of them, and said coldly, "If others see us like this, the impact will not be very good!"

August glanced at her coldly, caught the panic on her face, and asked coldly, "Lucia, what are you afraid of?"

Lucia bit her lip, her hand on the table clenched into a fist unconsciously.

"I have nothing to be afraid of," she replied.

"Really?" August asked, stepped forward, and walked directly in front of her, his sharp eyebrows and eyes were covered in frost.

"But you are hiding something from me, aren't you?" He asked.

Invisibly, Lucia felt the strength of the man and felt a little guilty in her heart. Her eyes were erratic, and she inadvertently swept to the mobile phone that was lit on the table next to her.

The wallpaper on it was the group photo of her and her children.

At this moment, Lucia was even more flustered in her heart.

August sensitively caught her gaze, raised his eyes, and followed her gaze.

When he saw the wallpaper on the phone screen, his expression became very complicated.

Joshua walked over and sat down beside him, his eyes subconsciously wandered toward the red wine swept on the table, and his eyes suddenly straightened.

He stretched out his hand and picked up the wine bottle.

"Why..how did you open this bottle of wine?" Joshua asked.

August heard the sound of his voice, raised his eyes slightly, and glanced at him, without saying a word.

Joshua howled.

"Do you know how much effort I spent to get this bottle of wine?! I have so many years of it in a series, why did you choose this particular one?"

He asked Augustus with an upset tone.

Augustus silently turned a deaf ear, picked up the wine glass unhurriedly, shook it gently, and took another sip.

Joshua looked at him as he did this, and couldn't say anything.

"August, you..."

He muttered angrily.

August raised his eyes and interrupted him softly.

"It's just a bottle of wine," he said.

Joshua was so angry that he stretched out his finger and pointed at him repeatedly and finally looked at the bottle of red wine that had been half drunk, and couldn't talk anymore.

"Forget it," He said and slumped down on the sofa next to him.

"Who messed with you again? Every time you're unhappy, my wine will suffer!" He asked Augustus.

August was silent, his face was cold, and he refused to say a word.

Joshua stretched out his hand, picked up a goblet from the side, poured half a glass for himself, then looked at August and murmured, "Could it be because of Lucia? I heard she came back."

Hearing this name, August's face suddenly sank a little, and he picked up the wine glass and drank the remaining liquid directly. Joshua clicked his tongue twice.

"It seems that it's because of her," he said.

Augustus put the wine glass on the table with a bang, looked up at him, and sneered.

"Because of her? How is that possible?" He asked.

Joshua raised his eyebrows.

Chapter 357 Never Cross the Line!

Jeanne and August had been married for two years, but in these two years, August had never touched her.

This was her nuptial knot and an unspeakable shame.

But she was a woman after all, how could she live alone in an empty room like this for a lifetime? The more Jeanne thought about it, the more uncomfortable she felt.

She gritted her teeth and made up her mind.

Looking at August, she asked, "August, have you been drinking today?"

August closed his eyes and replied in a low voice, "Well..."

"Then I'll ask the servant to cook the hangover soup, which will relieve the headache," Jeanne replied.

When Jeanne said this, seeing that August did not refuse, she got up and walked out of the bedroom, and called Dana, the maid on duty.

"Madam, what are your orders?" Dana asked.

Dana was young, and only in her early twenties.

Because she was born in a rural area and her mother was ill, she went to Austos City to find a job as a maid.

Jeanne glanced at her, lowered her voice, and said coldly, "Come with me."

Dana nodded and followed Jeanne into the kitchen.

Jeanne glanced at the door.

"Sir is drunk, you are going to order some hangover soup," she said to Dana.

Dana lowered her head and agreed.

Jeanne squinted her eyes, walked to the cabinet next to her, pulled out a small cabinet, and took out a small paper bag from inside.

She walked over to Dana, handed her the small paper bag, and said in a low voice, "When the hangover soup is ready, put this in."

Dana was startled. She looked at the small paper bag and did not dare to reach out to take it.

"Madam...she muttered nervously.

Jeanne glanced at her, lowered her voice, and said ruthlessly, "If you don't do it, you'll be fired by tomorrow!"

"There will be no salary for this month!" She added.

Dana was so frightened that she took the small paper bag and nodded.

Chapter 358 Avoid Meeting Again

Her life right now was painful enough. She just wanted to see others suffer more than she! Jeanne looked down at the trembling girl kneeling on the ground, and asked in a cold voice, "You really won't drink it?"

She squatted down slowly, looked at Dana who was extremely frightened, and snorted coldly.

"You dare to disobey me, do you think your life here will be better from now on?" Jeanne asked.

These last words from Jeanne, like a heavy punch, directly hit Dana's heart.

Dana was trembling all over, and she was afraid.

If she didn't drink it, it would be a long time coming.

Jeanne had countless ways to deal with her.

Thinking of this, she couldn't help shaking like a sieve.

"Madam...I would like to drink..."

Dana eventually said to Jeanne.

When Jeanne heard the words, a sneer flashed in her eyes. She looked at Dana condescendingly and ordered her.

"Drink," Jeanne said with authority.

Dana stretched out her hand and slowly picked up the bowl of soup on the tray, gritted her teeth, brought the bowl to her mouth, and raised her head to drink it.

"After drinking, don't leave a drop!"

Jeanne ordered her coldly.

Dana did as she was told, and drank all the liquid in the bowl before slowly putting the bowl down.

Seeing this, Jeanne curled her lips, walked to the sofa, and sat down. She looked at Dana, then looked at the clock on the wall.

"Just right, I would try it on you," Jeanne said coldly.

When she bought the medicine, it was said that it worked very quickly.

Five minutes was enough for it to make people feel hot and confused, and ten minutes could make people completely fall into a psychedelic state, and it had no side effects on the human body.

Unexpectedly, the first time Jeanne used it, it turned out that she used it on a maid. She looked at Dana and snorted coldly.

Dana became very uneasy.

After a while, her forehead began to sweat, and even her breathing became quicker unknowingly.

Chapter 359 Family Activities

At a glance the next day, Elisa had already pulled Lucia up from bed before she woke up.

"Look at the time, didn't you say you want to take the kids to Pleasant Valley? Today is Sunday, and most people are visiting there!" Elisa said to Lucia.

"Not getting up yet? Lucia, you are the mother of children now, not the little girl from before..." Elisa scolded her daughter.

During the five minutes of scolding while she was staying in bed, Lucia seemed to feel that her mother had made up for the scolding that she had missed for five years.

She rubbed her head and struggled to get up from the bed.

"Go take a shower and change your clothes! The two little guys are more diligent than you!" Elisa told Lucia dismissively.

After being pushed into the bathroom by Elisa, Lucia took a shower and finally woke up a bit more.

Last night, for some reason, she had a dream that lasted the whole night.

In the dream, there was a tall and handsome man.

She ran away with Timothy and Janet in her arms. She was so scared when she woke up from this dream that she didn't sleep well anymore when she went back to bed.

Could it be that the man in the dream was August? The more Lucia thought about it, the more outrageous it became.

In the end, she simply shook her head and forgot all those rambling thoughts. She came out of the bathroom, changed her clothes, and went downstairs. She saw Janet and Timothy sitting obediently at the dining table drinking milk and having breakfast.

They had also changed into new clothes.

Janet wore a red plaid skirt, and Timothy wore a black plaid shirt.

They looked cute and eye-catching.

Lucia felt a little better, walked over to greet them, made a cup of coffee, and took a sip.

She took out her mobile phone to send a message to Paul.

"Paul, we're almost ready here, are you on your way?" She asked him.

Originally, she and Paul had agreed to take the little guys to Pleasant Valley together today, which was considered a "family activity".

After waiting for a few minutes, Lucia finished her cup of coffee, and Paul hadn't replied yet.

Next to her, Timothy and Janet, who had already finished breakfast, stared at her with wide eyes.

"Mom, when are we leaving?" They asked.

Lucia smiled at them, raised her hand, and patted their heads respectively.

Chapter 360 Buy Two Tickets

Caroline was taken aback by August's sudden action, and quickly followed his gaze, but there was nothing more than a long queue at the entrance, and nothing unusual at all. He summoned the courage to ask.

"Sir, what's the matter?"

August stood on the spot and looked at the back end of the team over there without moving his eyes.

Seeing the beautiful figure in the sports suit, his eyes dimmed a little.

Sure enough, it was her, his intuition was right.

It was just a casual glance, but for some reason, he was so sensitive to her back.

When he saw the two little guys beside Lucia, August raised the corners of his lips with a half-smile, slightly turned his head, and instructed Burton behind him, "Go and buy two tickets in line."

Burton was slightly startled, thinking he heard wrong.

"Sir?"

He said in confusion.

August turned his head, looked at him with clear eyes, and said word by word, "Buy two tickets for the two of us."

Burton saw that he didn't seem to be joking, so he nodded.

"Okay, sir,"

he replied.

Caroline on the side was even more confused.

He watched Burton seriously walk in the direction of the ticket booth next to him, took a breath, and reminded August softly, "Mr. Adams, you don't need to buy a ticket..."

The entire Pleasant Valley in Austos City was an industry under the Lion Group.

He was the dignified president of the company.

Even if he didn't book the venue, did he still need to buy a ticket? August raised the corners of his lips.

"Caroline, there is one thing I need you to do,"

he said softly.

Unconsciously, another ten minutes passed.

Lucia pulled Timothy and Janet into the queue and glanced at her phone from time to time, but there was still no news from Paul.

Couldn't he come to join them again? Isn't that what she promised in front of Timothy and Janet just now, isn't she going to be slapped in the face if Paul didn't show up? She sighed softly, looked at the slowly advancing team in front, and then looked down at the two little guys whose interest had diminished, a feeling of guilt welling up in her heart.

If she had just taken them to the queue directly, they would've already entered by now, right? "Mom, when can we go in?"

Lucia's son asked.

Timothy raised his little head and pouted his little mouth.

Lucia took out a tissue and wiped the sweat from his forehead.

She didn't know how to answer when a voice suddenly came from beside her, "Is this, Ms.

Mitchell?"

When Lucia heard the words, she turned her head and saw a slightly fat middle-aged man smiling at her.

She was startled.

"Who are you?"

Lucia asked inquisitively.
